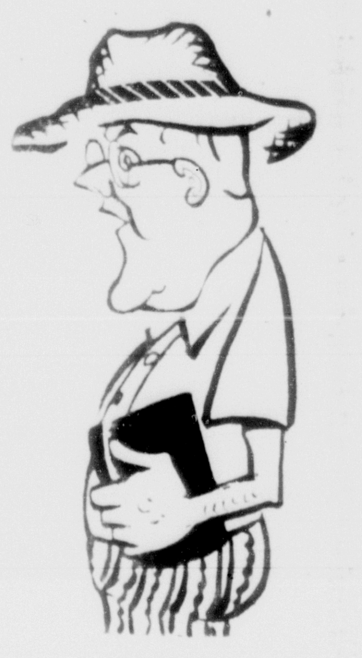
Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries



Dulles
. . . the 'native' look

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "Lightning."

Sometimes he reminisces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide.

Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

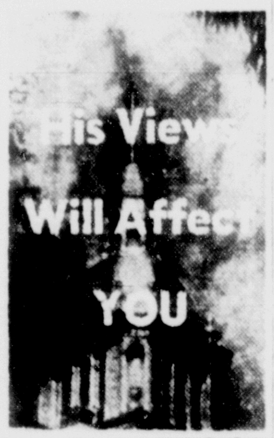
Legislators Agreed: No New Taxes . . 1G

Courts May Force Reapportionment 1B

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.



Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

LeRoy Collins
. . . spells out program

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a se-

Ford Tests Gas Turbine Auto Engine

DETROIT —(AP)— Ford Motor Co.'s research staff reported Saturday development of a 300-horsepower supercharged gas turbine engine described as superior to conventional gasoline engines under most operating conditions.

It is called "the 704" and is to be tested in vehicles before the end of this year. Its weight is one-fourth that of a truck diesel engine of the same horsepower and it has the fuel economy of a diesel.

B. T. Howes, associate director of engineering research said, "the Ford 704 represents an important break-through in gas turbine design technology."

Experimental gas turbines for trucks and passenger cars so far have used one stage of air compression but the Ford 704 has in addition a supercharging stage, the company said.

It said this enables the engine to deliver more horsepower from a smaller size. The 704 has dual burners instead of one combustion chamber such as used in early designs.

Howes said "the 704 would fit easily into the engine compartment of a 1959 Ford with room to spare. It can use unleaded gasoline, kerosene, jet engine fuel or light diesel fuel and requires no warm-up."

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow: 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Mutual Security Is Key

Red 'Ceiling' Rejected 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Viet Nam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges, U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defending America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Both Groups of Attackers Escape

Gunmen Fire on Havana Police; Batistans Machine Gun House

HAVANA, Cuba — (UPI) — Unidentified gunmen made two separate attacks against revolutionary police in the Havana area Saturday and escaped in fast cars.

Several men and women in a late model sedan opened fire on a police patrol car in the fashionable Vedado residential section near the strike-bound Baldor School.

A woman pedestrian was hit by stray bullets and taken to the hospital in critical condition. Police requested local newspapers and radio stations not to mention the incident, it was reported.

It was not certain whether the attack was part of the counter-revolutionary activity which was reported to have hit the Havana area earlier.

A band of die-hard supporters of Fulgencio Batista carried out a gangland-style machine gun attack on the home of a police captain in suburban Marianao, it was reported.

The men, so far unidentified, escaped. The police captain is loyal to Premier Fidel Castro, the revolutionary chieftain who forced Batista out of the country Jan. 1.

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

Humphrey Presents Award to Smathers

We Can't Ignore Latins--Humphrey

By JOHN McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

Sen. Hubert Humphrey warned Saturday night that the U.S. gambles on losing support in Asia and Africa by ignoring its friends in Latin America.

"The balance of power in the years ahead is in Asia, Africa and Latin America," he told a dinner gathering at the Dupont Plaza Hotel honoring Florida Sen. George Smathers.

"Asians and Africans will be more apt to believe us when they see how we treat our own neighbors, the Latin American countries."

The Minnesota Democrat paid high tribute to Smathers for his leadership in attempting to alert Congress to the necessity of a foreign policy program which would better tie together the nations of the Americas.

He said members of Congress should "speak up now before it is too late" in behalf of a stronger Western Hemisphere solidarity.

The dinner was highlighted by a presentation to Smathers of the Hialeah Junior Chamber of Commerce annual award for Outstanding Service in Government.

In his talk, Humphrey stressed that U.S. failure to help Latin America now will invite Russian Communist penetration of that vital region south of our border.

"Too often we don't bother to help until the patient is ready to meet the mortician," he declared.

"When a friend is sick, you should help him then."

Humphrey said that he, like Smathers, will support a program of expanded economic and educational aid and trade and cooperation with the Latin American nations.

One specific way in which the U.S. could be of great aid to the Latin countries, he said, would be "massive doses of miracle drugs and medical aid including doctors which we have so readily available here."

The Minnesota senator said the U.S. should guard against letting Latin America be taken over by Russia through trade pacts which eventually might force a situation such as has developed in Finand.

In Finland, when the government became anti-Communist, the Soviet Union virtually paralyzed that nation's economy by canceling out its trade and economic treaties which had been Finland's life blood since World War II.

FDR's Son Arrested

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. —(AP)— Elliott Roosevelt, son of the late FDR, was arrested Saturday and charged with drunk driving.

He was taken before a justice of the peace, posted $300 bond and was released.

Scottsdale Police Patrolman Ken Pepper, 25, said he found Roosevelt crumpled over the steering wheel of his car on a downtown street. Pepper said the ignition was still on and the headlights burning.

The officer said Roosevelt kept asking: "Do you know who I am?"

Police Chief Henry O. Cooper said a blood alcohol test on Roosevelt registered .208. A reading of .150 is legal evidence of intoxication.

Roosevelt maintains a winter home near Scottsdale, a suburb of Phoenix.

Ah, Spring! Ah, Sunny's 400 Bucks

SUNNY

That's what the winner of this week's prize will receive.

So don't let spring fever distract you from giving it a whirl.

That's the word from Sunny Fortune. Last week, unfortunately, no one had the word — or words—to take home the long green.

Remember, as a long-forgotten Miami poet once said:

That may not be very good poetry. But if you win $400 it will be music to your ears.

The sad truth is nobody came within a country mile of the correct solution last week.

Most frequently missed words were job for joy (seems nobody wanted to take the happy side of the question); power for poser; pride for prude and wonder for fonder.

It was no wonder we had no winners.

I will favor effective recognition of the trend in Florida to urbanization and the needs of our people in the heavily populated areas.

I shal fight to continue progress we have made for the construction of highways based upon need, not political favoritism and greed.

In the broad area of governmental reorganization, I shall favor reforms such a^ the long-overdue program of central purchasing for all departments and institutions.

These are the areas, in my opinion, where the biggest fight for the people will come.

Progress we make will be important for our own time, but the greatest challenge is that, for better or worse, we are laying foundations for the future.

Plane Rips Into House, Kills Girl

Pilot Bails Out As Engine Fails

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. —(UPI) — A naval jet trainer, unmanned when the pilot bailed out, plowed into a housing unit near the Blytheville Air Force base Saturday, killing a three-year-old girl and injuring two other persons.

The victim was Mary Blaire Black, daughter of Staff Sergeant and Mrs. John M. Black. Black is stationed at the air base.

Blytheville Air Force base authorities identified the pilot as Edward Holmes, of the naval reserve from Memphis, Tenn. They said he bailed out under orders when his F9T6 flamed out and he couldn't restart it. Holmes landed safely.

The Air Force said he headed the plane toward an unpopulated area before bailing out but the plane circled and plowed into the Capehart housing unit, occupied mostly by officers and enlisted men of the air base, three miles from Blytheville.

The plane ripped into two of the units, each unit composed of two apartments. It did not explode or burn on impact, authorities said.

The two persons injured were not immediately identified. Authorities said they were not seriously hurt.

Sports Car Wreck Kills Navy Vet

By EDDIE GONG
Herald Writer

A recently discharged Navy veteran was killed and two of his buddies hurt late Saturday night when a sports car in which they were riding twisted out of control on a sharp curve and rolled over several times.

Killed was Charles E. Stanley, 22, of 2370 NW First St., driver of the MG. Injured were Ronald Jackson, 27, of 11120 SW 43rd Ter., who was riding in the passenger seat, and William Chippas, 22, who was perched between the seats.

Chippas, who was only slightly hurt, said Stanley was heading west on NW 11th St., which runs beside the Miami River, and went into the sharp curve just after crossing NW 12th Ave.

Chippas told police that Stanley swerved the little car to the right in the middle of the curve to avoid an oncoming car. Police said they did not know how fast the car was going.

The sports car went off the road onto a grassy area in front of what used to be the Miami Country Club, then rolled over, tossing out Stanley's two passengers. The car ended up on its left side.

Police found Stanley still in the driver's seat. Officers said he apparently was killed almost instantly.

Stanley was Dade County's 50th traffic fatality of this year, compared to 54 at this time in 1958.

Tibet Revolt Splits Red Curtain--Nixon

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Vice President Richard Nixon said here Saturday that the revolt in Tibet has created a solid crack in the Communist Bamboo Curtain in Asia.

"The Communist Chinese action in Tibet has done irreparable harm to plans of Communist domination in Asia.

"It unmasked their true tactics toward India and the other neutral countries," he declared.

Nixon, who had just conferred with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles who is convalescing at Hobe Sound, made the comments while stopping to talk with Republican state chairmen from 12 southern states meeting here.

"We discussed Tibet, Berlin and general world conditions. Mr. Dulles is in good spirits and looks good."

Nixon said Berlin is still the most crucial spot in the Cold War and a summit meeting on the issue "is not a sure thing."

He said the responsibility of whether a summit meeting is held rests with Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

"The blockade incidents are not as important as what happens at the Western and Soviet foreign ministers' meeting set for May. Progress must be made then if we are to go to the summit."

He declined comment on the possibility of war if a summit meeting falls through, but made this remark on Khrushchev's deadlines: "The record speaks for itself. He made one deadline and has moved it back. But it's not wise to try to guess about Khrushchev's deadlines."

Nixon said the West would have to stay in Berlin until Soviet leaders make an argeement which will result in a "lasting settlement of the German problem."

On foreign aid, he said, "it will be needed as long as there's a Russian economic threat."

The vice president flew to Hobe Sound. After an hour's talk with Dulles, he returned by car to Miami where he is vacationing with his family.

He agreed to stop over for an "informal chat" with the state chairmen who were huddling at Galt Ocean Mile Hotel.

The Republican state leaders voted to arrange a caucus of southern delegates on the platform and resolutions committees prior to the national GOP convention.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas, and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

Nixon said the leaders "had a very productive session. The state chairmen let their hair down and we discussed the party's strength and weaknesses."

Meacham said, "I don't think there's any question but that the south is solid behind Nixon."

stern patriarch, he teased. "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed, "Oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once only, to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cooler and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the south Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the East.

Teamsters' Agent Guilty of Arson

FLINT, Mich. — (AP) — The Teamsters Union's Jack D. Thompson was convicted of arson in last summer's dry cleaning shop fire that figured in the Frank Kierdorf "human Torch" death investigation.

Thompson, a pal of Kierdorf, also a Teamsters Business agent, faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison.

A Genesee County Circuit Court of nine women and three men brought in its verdict against Thompson, 42, a Teamsters business agent, after four hours and 23 minutes of deliberation.

Argentine Rioters Rap U.S.

50 Injured In Gun Battle

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina —(AP)— Anti-American slogans echoed through the streets during rioting against President Arthuro Frondizi's government in the heart of the capital.

About 50 persons were injured and 150 arrests made when police fired shots to break up two demonstrations in defiance of a government ban. The demonstrators fired back. Cars were set afire and store windows broken.

Supporters of exiled Dictator Juan D. Peron and Communists were blamed by semi-official sources for the three-hour melee in downtown Buenos Aires.

A mass meeting in protest against government labor policies was organized by Peronista and Communist-led unions. One of the complaints was that the government had forcibly dismissed elected union leaders and replaced them with Frondizi supporters.

During the fighting police sources said some of the demonstrators shouted: "Argentines yes, Yankees no . . . down with imperialism."

The demonstrators were beaten back before entering Plaza Mayo opposite Government House.

Brazil Army Warns Strikers

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — (AP) — President Juscelino Kubitschek Saturday put federal troops at the disposal of the governor of Bahia State, where thousands of striking truck drivers blockaded four inland towns and the key highway to Rio de Janeiro.

Col. Laurildo Lima Barreto, army commander at Salvador, the Bahia State capital, immediately declared the strike illegal and warned the strikers to end the blockades immediately to avoid a "conflict of great proportions."

But there was no report of federal troops going into action, nor any reports of violence. It seemed likely the army hoped its warnings would be enough.

There were unconfirmed reports the air force had flown parachutists to the scene of the most serious bloakade.

About 3,000 truckers, protesting the high cost of tires, gasoline and other materials, walked off their jobs Thursday. They have won support from hundreds of townspeople who are objecting to high living costs.

Ike Going On Vacation --Again

WASHINGTON — (AP) — As President Eisenhower prepares to go next week to Augusta, Ga., for his spring vacation, the Democratic Digest said Saturday a survey shows Eisenhower made 97 recreation trips between his inauguration and February, 1959.

These trips, said the Democratic National Committee publication, included 17 golfing visits to Augusta, ranging up to 18 days at a time. The Digest added:

"There were six visits of four to 11 days at the George Humphrey place at Thomasville, Ga. Other distant climes that drew him included Colorado, for as long as 69 days; Newport, R.I.; Pebble Beach, Calif.; Palm Springs, Calif.; New England; Key West, Fla.; White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.; Toledo, Ohio, and State College, Pa.

"Visits to his Gettysburg home included 38 weekend or one-day stops, and nine longer ones. And he made 15 outings at Camp David, Thurmont, md."

Dominate Demo Field

Kennedy Pulls Up To Adlai in Poll

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N.J. — Sen. John Kennedy has pulled up slightly on Adlai Stevenson as the choice of rank-and-file Democrats for the 1960 nomination.

Today, the two men are in a virtual tie for first place among Democratic voters as the choice to head their party's ticket in next year's campaign.

Although Kennedy has been in a nip-and-tuck battle with Stevenson for the No. 1 spot since June of last year, he runs his best race to date against the former Illinois governor and Democratic standard bearer in 1952 and 1956.

Both Kennedy and Stevenson continue to dominate the field of Democratic hopefuls tested — polling together more than half of all votes cast.

GALLUP POLL reporters asked this question:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates for the Democratic Party in 1960. Which one would you like to see nominated as the Democratic candidate for President in 1960?"

The latest standings, compared with those recorded in January:

	Today Pct.	Jan., '59 Pct.
Sen. Kennedy	28	25
Gov. Stevenson	27	29
Sen. Estes Kefauver	12	10
Sen. Lyndon Johnson	9	7
Sen. Symington	5	4
Others	11	16
None of these	8	9

Analysis of Gallup Poll nationwide primary tests since the 1956 presidential election reveals the following highlights about the potential strength of today's leading five Democrats:

JOHN KENNEDY. Since the Massachusett's senator's chances were first tested in August, 1957, he has never placed lower than second on the list of potential Democratic candidates. Since mid-summer of last year, his popularity among Democrats has been steadily on the increase — from 19 per cent who preferred him for their party's nomination in June, 1958, to the 28 per cent who select him today.

ADLAI STEVENSON. Stevenson was first placed on the list of 1960 "possibles" in June, 1958, after a surprising show of strength against Vice President Richard Nixon in a "trial heat." Until the current test, he ran ahead of Sen. Kennedy as the No. 1 choice of Democrats for the nomination.

ESTES KEFAUVER. Counted out of the running by most professional politicians, the Tennessee senator continues to poll a substantial vote among rank-and-file Democrats. One of his biggest advantages is in being widely known among Democratic voters — 84 per cent in the current test said they had heard or read about him.

The Gallup Poll

LYNDON JOHNSON. The Senate majority leader faces the problem of not being widely known at the national level. The slight rise in his popularity for the 1960 nomination since the first of the year, however, has been accompanied by an increased number of Democrats (from 52 to 57 per cent) since late last fall who say they have heard or read about the Texas Senator.

STUART SYMINGTON. Despite the "boom" in Congressional circles, the Missouri senator is currently an "unknown" figure to over half of rank-and-file Democrats. His support is characterized by its consistency; since June, 1956, the percentage of Democrats preferring Symington has never varied more than one percentage point from his present vote.

Mack, Whiteside Ch. 10 Trial Opens Tuesday

By DAVID KRASLOW
Of Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Barring a last-minute postponement, the Channel 10 trial of Miamians Richard A. Mack and Thurman A. Whiteside opens here Tuesday in Federal Court.

Mack, former member of the Federal Communications Commission, and Whiteside, Miami attorney, were indicted last September on charges of conspiring to have Mack sell his vote in the Channel 10 award.

The FCC voted, 4 to 2, with Mack in the majority, to give the license to Public Service Television, Inc., a wholly-owned subsidiary of National Airlines.

The trial will be before Federal Judge Burnita S. Matthews and a 12-member jury. If convicted, Mack and Whiteside would face maximum penalties of $15,000 in fines and 10 years in prison.

The government has refused to disclose its witnesses.

Richard A. Mack
. . . he voted award

Informed sources report, however, that the Justice Department has subpenaed 30 witnesses, including about 25 Floridians.

Among the government witnesses will be many who testified during a congressional investigation in the spring of 1958 and at FCC hearings last fall.

These will include A. Frank Katzentine, Miami Beach attorney and one of the losing Channel 10 applicants; former Miami mayor Perrine Palmer, Jr.; Dade Circuit Judge Robert Anderson; NAL President G. T. Baker; NAL attorney Paul Scott of Miami, and Jerry W. Carter, member of the Florida Railroad and Public Utilities Commission.

Thurman Whiteside
. . . under indictment

Among the "new" witnesses the government expects to produce will be several South Florida banking officials and NAL employes.

Witnesses also have been summoned from New York and Washington.

Attorneys for Mack and Whiteside are planning to summon as defense witnesses Sens. George Smathers and Spessard Holland and perhaps other members of Congress.

Under the Constitution, senators do not have to respond to subpenas while Congress is in session.

It has been estimated that the trial will last from four to six weeks.

The trial has been postponed several times and the court is expected to rule Monday on Whiteside's request for an additional delay.

It Took Time To Divorce This Couple

HOUSTON, Tex. — (AP) — A divorce granted July 17, 1925, has just become official.

District Judge Sears McGee signed an order divorcing Mrs. Florence Cox, now Mrs. Florence Johnson, from John E. Cox.

The original divorce was granted by retired District Judge Ewing Boyd but never entered on the court's official minutes.

Mrs. Johnson, who remarried 30 years ago, didn't discover the error until she recently asked for a copy of the decree as a document for a Social Security compensation application.

Mrs. Johnson's attorney obtained an affidavit from Boyd last week certifying the divorce was granted in 1925.

Racket Committee To Question 20

KENNEDY

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Senate Rackets Committee has subpenaed 20 witnesses for questioning this week about juke box racketeering in the Detroit area, it was announced Saturday.

Chief Counsel Robert F. Kennedy said the list included a former Teamster Union official who claims he shouldn't have to pay income taxes on embezzled money.

Some top figures in the Detroit branch of the Mafia underworld syndicate also were scheduled to appear during the hearing, which will last two or three days.

The committee, in a preliminary inquiry last December, heard testimony that the underworld called the tune for part of the music machine business in the Michigan-Ohio region.

Arthur Caplan, a staff investigator, testified that Music System, Inc., a juke box distributor, had trouble selling its machines because the Teamsters Union seemed to favor a rival firm.

He said Music System at first tried to overcome this by setting up an independent union. When that failed, Caplan said the company enlisted the aid of Frank Cammarata, an old-time Michigan hoodlum.

The committee will inquire further into this by questioning William Bufalino, head of Teamster Local 985, and John (Papa John) Priziola, former juke box distributor.

It also planned to call in Joseph Memesh, president of Music System, and Angelo Meli, identified by Kennedy as former public enemy number 1 in Detroit.

School Group Eyes Members

ATLANTA — (AP) — Hope Inc., an organization devoted to keeping schools open regardless of any integration orders, announced that 15 to 20 new chapters will be formed throughout Georgia within the next six weeks.

The statement came from Harry Boyte, chairman of the organization's executive committee.

Drive Safely, Pay Less? They'd Like to Try It

Mrs. Mary Moss
. . . 'why penalize me?'

Ben Finkle
. . . it pays to be bad

Mrs. Anne Galhause
. . . likes new plan

By DOM BONAFEDE
Herald Staff Writer

Most Miamians are willing to bet their money as well as their lives on their careful driving.

That was reflected in a Herald spot poll to see how drivers would like California's new plan pegging automobile insurance rates to individual accident records.

Of 22 persons polled, 18 favored the plan. It is scheduled to go into effect May 1 in California and will cut bills for safe drivers, raise them for accident or arrest-prone motorists.

Under the California plan an automatic 20 per cent reduction is given to drivers who have gone three years without a traffic violation, conviction or accident.

Here's what Miami drivers had to say about the California plan:

LESTER WILSON, of 2855 SW 32nd Ct.:

"I favor it. There's no other fair way of doing it since no two drivers are alike.

"Nobody knows that better than me. My wife was killed in an accident several years ago when we were hit by a 19-year-old kid who went through a stop sign."

* * *

Mrs. Mary Moss, Malabo Hotel, Miami Beach, said she has been driving 30 years without an accident, "so why should I be penalized for the careless driving of others?"

Mrs. Anne Calhause, of 2012 SW 24th St.:

"I think there should be some consideration for those who are careful drivers."

Opposed to the idea was Mike Kaufman, of 961 SW Seventh St.

"Suppose you get a couple of tickets when it's not your fault? Then you're really fouled up," he remarked.

Offering to do his part in support of the California plan was Ben (Evil Eye) Finkle, a colorful character who is sometimes employed by participants in sports events to put the hex on opponents.

"Florida's insurance rates are too high," he noted. "I think I'll give Larson the eye."

Turning serious, he added:

"Many good, careful drivers pay year after year and get nothing in return. The bad drivers pay the same thing and get something for their money."

Then there was the young woman, who asked that she remain nameless.

"I always seem to be getting in accidents. I think I like the present system better," she said.

Reds Appoint Woman to Post

MOSCOW — (UPI) — The Supreme Soviet Parliament of Azerbaijan Republic in the Soviet Union has appointed its first woman foreign minister, the Soviet Tass news agency reported.

Former Editor Kills Himself

NEW YORK —(AP)— James N. Young, 74, former newspaperman and magazine editor, was found dead after he telephoned a suicide threat to a friend. He was despondent over ill health.

He was managing editor of Frank Leslie's Weekly in the early 1920's, later edited the American Legion Weekly and from 1924 to 1953 was fiction editor of Collier's.

Police said he apparently took an overdose of sleeping pills and listed the death as an apparent suicide.

College Yields

GREENSBORO, N. C. — (AP) — Guilford College, 122-year-old Quaker school in this tobacco-producing state, has finally given the go-ahead. Women students, who weren't allowed to smoke within a mile of the school, may now do so at the college soda shop.

Back From Far East

Local Business-Adventurer Returns to Miami

Sam Lubin, a pioneer-importer of rattan in this area, returned to Miami recently after a whirlwind tour of the Far East. "The trip," he reported, "covering over 100 air hours of travel, has resulted in good news for the people of South Florida.

"The critical condition in that area," he continued, "has caused lower prices than ever before! I couldn't resist the tremendous opportunity to buy at this time even though our warehouses are bulging with merchandise!

"In order to make room we are giving exceptional values in rattan furnishings this week so that we can clear out some of our present stock."

SAM LUBIN

The hundreds of thousands of tons of rattan furnishings and Oriental accessories that have reached South Florida is a tribute to the adventurous Lubin.

His faith in South Florida was the only stimulant that sent him to the mysterious Orient years ago, a land he knew nothing about.

Today, two beautiful air-conditioned showrooms display this unmatched merchandise. One is located at 3640 Coral Way and one at 3425 South Federal Highway in Ft. Lauderdale. —Adv.

Audit of Army Supplies Saves Taxpayers $2.3 Million

By DAVID KRASLOW
Of Our Washington Bureau

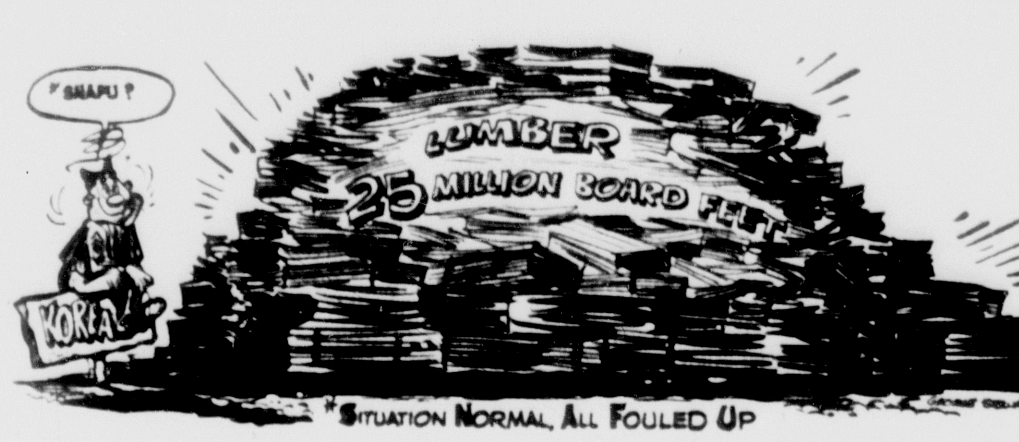
KRASLOW

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Eighth Army in Korea overstated its lumber needs by about 25 million board feet, government auditors have reported.

The General Accounting Office said in a report to Congress that the Army, following the audit, cut its "forecast for lumber requirements" by that many feet, representing a potential saving of 2.3 million dollars.

The GAO said this represented a 55 per cent reduction in the Army's estimate of its future lumber needs.

The GAO said its audit in November, 1957 — its first of the supply operation in Korea—disclosed that the Eighth Army "was failing to properly discharge its supply control responsibilities."



*SITUATION NORMAL, ALL FOULED UP

It said the Army was initiating requisitions "substantially in excess of current requirements."

As a result of its check, GAO reported, the Army canceled orders for:

Winter clothing worth 1.5 million dollars.

14 dump and wrecker trucks worth $138,465.

365 trailers worth $332,880.

3,119 desk and wall-type fans worth $71,425.

253 pontoon floats worth $373,428.

60 light sedans worth $75,429.

GAO said it also found that a cement block plant operated by an Army Engineer depot was producing blocks "without any stated requirement or forecast" from the major user of the blocks.

Mansfield Hopes Red Peril Ends Far East Feud

Sen. Mike Mansfield
. . . applauds India

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Assistant Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Saturday he hopes the "possible common danger" of Red China as displayed in Tibet will end the long feud between India and Pakistan.

The Montana Democrat added the implied hope that India would abandon her neutrality and seek membership in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization to which Pakistan belongs.

SEATO pact nations, united against Communist aggression, are meeting in Wellington, New Zealand, April 8-10.

Mansfield, a Foreign Relations Committee expert on Asia, applauded India for giving political asylum to the Dalai Lama, theocratic head of three million Tibetans who revolted against Communist Chinese oppression.

He said in an interview that this was the "only decent thing it could do."

The senator said he knew of no connection between the Tibetan revolt and a U.S. decision to give Pakistan 25 Canberra (B57) light jet bombers over the next two years. India already has about 80 such planes, bought from Britain. Pakistan has been appealing for more aid to offset India's superior strength.'

Mansfield asserted that the Communist danger to India, domestically and extrenally, has now been "brought home to Prime Minister Nehru and his Parliament more forcibly than ever before."

"The lession of Tibet is that what happened in that peaceful, isolated hermit area could, under certain circumstances, happen elsewhere in the general area," he said.

"I'd express the hope that this possible common danger to both India and Pakistan would help to bring about an accommodation between the two nations and a closer relationship between their governments and peoples."

Talmadge Fires Blast At Benson

MEMPHIS — (UPI) — Farmers would do better to try to make a living "at the dice tables of Las Vegas" than to farm under Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson, says Sen. Herman Talmadge (D., Ga.)

"After all, even a crap shooter wins sometimes." Talmadge said.

The Georgia Democrat charged Benson had turned the Agriculture Department into "the enemy of the farmer."

"Had the Department of Labor for one day been as antagonistic to the interests of organized labor as the Department of Agriculture for six years has been to the interests of the farmer, Mr. Reuther and his associates in the AFL-CIO would have ridden the secretary out of Washington on a rail before sundown," Talmadge said.

Slum Clearance Advocates Draw Up Battle Lines

Other Cities Cash In . . . Page 2J

By JUANITA GREENE And JOHN BOYLES
Herald Staff Writers

Supporters of more liberalized slum clearance laws for Florida tuned up Saturday to make a lot more noise in the Legislature when it convenes Tuesday.

But the opponents — two time winners — still had the ears of some powerful senators.

They include the Sen. President, Dewey Johnson of Quincy, and John Rawls of Marianna, who heads a committee that must pass on the bill before it gets to the Senate floor.

RAWLS

Pushing for the reform and working harder than ever to remove the barrier against reselling condemned slum land to private enterprise will be Gov. LeRoy Collins and the Florida League of Municipalities.

They'll be joined this time by civic groups and other organizations over the state and by Metro.

"I have confidence the bill will pass," said Miami Commissioner George DuBreuil, the Florida league's top Urban Renewal booster.

Again this session the opposition will come from one quietly working group — the property owners in the blighted areas.

"You can be sure something will be done to oppose this plan for resale to private interests," said Abe Schonfeld, Miami attorney who owns property in the Central Negro District here.

But Schonfeld wasn't sure his now defunct Property Owners Development Association will be revived for the third battle. Legislators credit PODA's lobbyist, Attorney Edward Boardman, with killing the bill in committee last session.

BOARDMAN

If PODA doesn't lead the fight, some other statewide organization of property owners will, predicted Schonfeld.

The urban renewal bill prepared by the Florida League of Municipalities would make Florida cities eligible for federal aid, now being distributed in all but eight states.

Cities would be reimbursed for two thirds of the loss resulting from the condemnation, clearing and reselling of blighted areas.

"We are going to work very hard to get it through this time," reported Executive Secretary Gordon T. Butler from municipal league headquarters in Jacksonville. "It's of interest to all major cities."

BUTLER

The bill is expected to get an eager reception in the House.

Speaker Thomas D. Beasley of DeFuniak Springs is for it. So is Mallory Horne of Tallahassee, who heads the House committee which will consider it.

"We can't allow slums to choke our growing cities," said Beasley.

"Florida cities can't possibly afford to pay the cost of redeveloping blighted areas with local funds," added Horne.

But the leaders down the corridor in the Senate were saying something a little different.

Sen. President Johnson wants a provision added to allow the original owner to share any profit made by the developer who buys the cleared land from the city.

"I don't think," said Johnson, "a man should be forced to sell his property through condemnation so others can buy it later and make a profit."

Schonfeld

Rawls had the same objection. "I'm going to have to give the proposal lengthy consideration," he said.

Miami Commissioner DuBreuil has been working for three years to get the federal purse open to Miami for slum clearance projects.

"It's the only way Miami can do the job," he said.

DuBREUIL

A straw vote of legislators, he said, "indicates they are 95 per cent behind the change this time." But some of those who voted "no" are sitting in strategic positions.

The law change, to become finally effective, will require an amendment to the state Constitution. First the Legislature and then the people of Florida have to approve it.

Injured in Dania Mishap

Miamian Crashes Plane To Avoid Hitting Golfers

A Miami man was injured Saturday in Dania when he nosed his crippled airplane into the ground rather than risk hitting two golfers.

Witnesses said Paul Wood, 36, of 79 NE 91st St., allowed his airplane to crash at a 60-degree angle rather than try to glide to a golf course fairway where two men were on a green.

Wood had just taken off from an airport near the golf course. His motor quit. He used most of his air speed to pull up and avoid some power lines. But he still might have been able to glide to the golf fairway.

But he said he made no attempt to do so when he saw the two golfers on a green at the end of the fairway.

Mrs. Paul Ficairllo, owner of the golf course, said "When we got to him he kept asking if he had hurt anyone. Everyone said he could have saved his plane if he had just gone ahead and landed. But he saw those golfers . . ."

Wood was taken to a hospital where examination showed he suffered lacerations, a possible concussion and possible internal injuries.

Vandals Break Into 11 Firms

Sawing their way through the roof of a bakery, thieves Saturday broke into 11 firms in the NW 183rd St. Shopping Center — but did more vandalism than stealing.

Their biggest haul: $45 from Wright's Five-and-Ten Store. Their smallest: two silver dollars from the North Dade Hardware office.

Metro police believe the same gang which has recently been operating in South Dade may have been involved in Saturday's break-in.

Rockpit Rangers' Badges Out Again
. . . Mrs. Vi Stokesberry readies safety program

She'll Fight Again For Water Safety

By JAMES BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

The woman who almost single-handedly led a five-year battle for water safety in Dade County is going back into the battle.

Mrs. Vi Stokesberry is ready to help launch the Rockpit Rangers once more—and hopes they'll prove as potent a force in saving lives as they did before.

"Rangers are school children the ones who police themselves and guide their friends away from watery deaths in rockpits and canals," Mrs. Stokesberry says.

It was in 1953, while active as a radio commentator, that Vi Stokesberry began a one-woman campaign to cut down the appalling number of drownings throughout the county.

Linking her program with the cooperation of the county commissioners and school officials, she was able to enlist more than 100,000 children in her Rangers.

Hammering away at safety day-by-day and week-by-week, Mrs. Stokesberry's crusade began to show results. Accidental drownings dropped from 17 in 1953 to six in 1957.

Forced to give up her work in 1958, she will take up the fight again. This time the impetus has come from the Parent - Teachers Association, which is meeting Wednesday to discuss inclusion of the program in next fall's school schedule.

"With The Herald's 'Swim For Your Life' program, the Rockpit Rangers will provide a one-two punch that will go a long, long way toward saving lives," she said.

"This safety work should be carried out at the school level," Mrs. Stokesberry said Saturday. "The Herald's plan is wonderful in broadening the number of persons who can save themselves, and just as important as 'how to swim' is 'where to swim.' "

The "how" as well as the "where" should be part of the regular school program, Mrs. Stokesberry said.

"They teach children how to drive as a safety measure," she said, "and in Dade County with its necessary canals and waterholes it's just as important we have swimming instruction as a safety measure."

"There are families buying homes in Dade County," she said, "who don't know that canals and rockpits lie within four blocks of their new houses."

Volunteers Needed

Join Water Safety Team -- Save Lives

By AL FINKELSTEIN
Herald Staff Writer

The switchboard at Dade's Red Cross headquarters Saturday morning was "almost jammed" by callers volunteering to enroll in the newly-announced water safety instruction program.

Red Cross Safety Service Director Russell K. Townsend said he had 25 names "almost a few hours" after he put out a call through The Herald for 100 volunteer instructor-trainees to join the countywide stop-drownings crash program.

The two-part program, offering certified courses in Senior Lifesaving and Water Safety Instruction, begins Tuesday at Shenandoah Park Pool, 1805 SW 22nd Ave., and West End Pool, 250 SW 60th Ave.

The Shenandoah Senior Lifesaving course will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday through April 23. The West End courses are scheduled from 9 to 11 a.m., Tuesdays and Fridays. Swimmers over 16 are eligible to enroll.

Water Safety Instruction classes — the advanced course — will follow at the Shenandoah pool on the same days and time schedules from April 28 to May 28 and will be open to Senior lifesavers over 18.

Senior lifesaving courses will also be offered at.

AN APPROVED private pool, 6721 SW 71st Ct., from 1 to 3 p.m., Saturday only, starting April 11.

SANS SOUCI HOTEL, 3101 Collins Ave., Miami Beach, from 5 to 7 p.m., daily beginning April 13.

The instruction program is being set up by the Red Cross and the Miami Recreation Department primarily to teach pre-school and school-aged youngsters how to handle themselves in water.

A rash of recent child drownings in canals, rock pits and pools sparked the water-safety drive.

Would You Help Save a Child's Life?

I will be on hand Tuesday night (with my bathing suit) to start the save-a-life course for swimming instructors, 7 p.m., Shenandoah Pool, 1805 S.W. 22nd Ave., and three other locations as indicated in story.

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By GENE MILLER
Herald Staff Writer

Gold Coast hotelmen have long had delusions of a February with 60 or 90 days.

Saturday they were eyeing calendars suspiciously.

The "season," the maximum tourist period hereabouts, has gone elastic this year.

Hotels are still running 60 to 85 per cent of occupancy, unusually high for early April. The U-rent-it car lenders have better than 50 per cent of their machines on the streets. The big name night clubs are booking solid for early shows.

But perhaps the biggest tourist scramble is for airplane tickets.

Said an Eastern Air Line reservations clerk: "Earliest flights for New York are Tuesday."

A Northeast clerk said the wait was four days. National's earliest guarantee for New York is April 9, next Thursday.

"We were told this morning not to recommend stand-bys," said a National clerk. "But they told us it was okay this afternoon. The chances are good if you come to the airport and wait until the last minute for a cancellation."

Even black market plane tickets are hard to find.

The Herald checked transportation desks at eight hotels on the Beach Saturday afternoon, telling the "supers," (superintendents of service) money was no object.

Only one was able to come up with an immediate reservation for two to New York. And that was after much mumbling about "dummying" and "manipulation."

"This one will have somebody else's name on it," said a guy named George, "but you can use it anyway. Pay me whatever you think it's worth."

Another sure sign of the stretching and profitable season this year is the foreclosure count. Only two of Dade's almost 500 assorted inns have taken their woes to the bankruptcy referee.

At this time last year, after a toe-numbing Ice Age, the count was close to 20.

All this doesn't mean the Beach is mobbed. Immediate vacancies are available almost everywhere.

But it does mean that late, late spring up north is giving Miami a much-appreciated late, late season.

Gold Coast Sets Air, Ports Talks

3-County Control Is Sought

By JOHN MORTON
Herald Staff Writer

Top officers of the three Gold Coast counties are scheduled to meet in Miami this week to begin talks aimed at tri-county control of airfields and water ports in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach.

The time and place of the commissioners' meeting will be set Monday by the Metro Port Authority Committee, according to Metro Commissioner Ben C. McGahey, who said "it probably will be Thursday or Friday."

The purpose was outlined by Broward Commissioner J. Herbert Burke:

"The establishment of a commission to govern all air and seaport development in the counties."

"Burke said, "It's a simple matter of economic survival."

The three counties tried to get together on a master aviation plan several years ago, but never got off the ground.

This time, they have the cold statistics of a report perpared for Metro last year by the Cincinnati consulting engineer firm of Landrum and Brown.

The report stated Dade and Broward alone would need vastly expanded airport facilities within the next 10 years.

The report also pin-pointed the need for a major air terminal in Broward and seven other large airports throughout the entire area by 1970.

Political boundaries of the three counties will pose the biggest problem facing the commissioners.

Dade and Broward spokesmen are on record as favoring retaining the control of the port authority by the county commissions.

And Broward Commission Chairman George Petersen said the final port authority "will have to be on a basis of equal representation, regardless of the size of the counties involved."

McGahey said he would invite a representative of the Federal Aviation Agency to sit in on the meeting. Metro Commissioner Ralph A. Fossey, chairman of the Metro Port Authority Committee, said he would seek close contact between the group and the FAA.

The commissioners' initial sessions should deal exclusively with airport problems, McGahey said. Later, they will study a proposal by Burke that Port Everglades—Broward's big shipping port — be a part of the program.

Another problem facing the commissioners is "who will sit on this authority," McGahey said. Earlier suggestions have ranged from the appointment of an independent board to formation of a "master committee" of commissioners from the three counties.

McGahey said the committee should be drawn from the three commissions.

'Dumped'

Caught in the act of illegally dumping garbage on a vacant corner lot at NW 34th Ave. and 21st St., Saturday was Victor B. Burke Sr., 40, of 115 NE 71st St. Metro Deputies Julian Huff and Roy Shull wrote him a $10 ticket. Maximum penalty is $500 and 60 days in jail. Metro Public Safety Director Thomas Kelly has ordered a countywide crackdown on the garbage dumpers whom he calls "super-litterbugs."

Southern Link Cracked, Police Claim

Bookie Race Wire Snipped; Miamian Arrested in Raid

Authorities said Saturday they have cracked the southern link in a nationwide bookie race wire — because the bookies' telescope couldn't focus on the whole tote board at Gulfstream Race Track.

State anti-bookie agents and Hallandale sheriff's deputies arrested Thomas Peter Ratenni, 33, of 1931 NW 30th St., Miami, as he sat peering through a telescope in a motel room only a quarter of a mile away from the seaside track.

They said Ratenni's arrest apparently stopped almost instantaneous transmission of Gulfstream results to bookies all over the country.

Broward County Sheriff's Deputy James O'Toole said the raid "could affect bets amounting to hundreds of thousands and perhaps millions of dollars daily. There's no telling how many bookies used this service.'

O'Toole said Ratenni had a perfect view of the top of the tote board and was able to telephone results as they were flashed on the board to confederates in Miami. They, in turn, would relay the winners and payoffs to bookmakers in other states.

There was only one catch in the operation, O'Toole said. That was the fact that an obstruction blocked the telescope from focusing on anything more than the first and second place winners on the board.

Agents deduced that the bookies were using a telescope with a limited view rather than a tiny portable radio. It didn't take them long to figure the angle from the top of the tote board to Ratenni's second-story motel room.

O'Toole said Ratenni had cut out a piece of screen in a window of his room to get a better view of the track.

When they broke in, they found a pad listing the first and second place winners for the first three races. They arrested Ratenni just after the horses crossed the finish line in the third race.

Agents also found a list of names and addresses from a number of states, including Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Iowa. They said they suspected the names were tied to the bookie syndicate.

Ratenni was charged with illegal dissemination of racing information and possession of gambling equipment — the scratch pads. He was released on $6,000 bond.

Charge: Jaywalking

Paddy Wagon Came And Away He Went

By DOM BONAFEDE
Herald Staff Writer

Authorities launched an investigation Saturday into complaints that a 17-year-old Miami High student charged with jaywalking was carted off to the police station in a paddy wagon.

MIKE

Two other occupants of the wagon were drunks, the youth said Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Kelly said two motorcycle officers roared up to their home at 211 SW 52nd Ct. last Wednesday and ordered their son, Mike, into the wagon after refusing a request by the father that he be allowed to drive the youth to the station.

The officers told the Kellys the boy was being taken to jail because he failed to show up for trial in Municipal Court.

Mike, however, said that Motorcycle Officer Leo E. Welsh, who nabbed him for jaywalking March 26 in front of Miami High, had not given him a summons or citation of any sort.

Acting on protests filed by the Kellys, investigators for Miami police internal security and the state attorney's office are checking into the case.

Normally, in jaywalking cases the person charged is given 48 hours to pay a fine or fight it in court. If he does not reply in five days a notice is sent telling him he must pay or a warrant will be issued for his arrest.

When a bench warrant is issued a court bailiff customarily serves it.

The boy said he signed a piece of paper but did not receive a ticket or receipt.

Later he was summoned to the office of dean of men J. Emory Dykes, where Welsh was waiting.

Dykes said Saturday the officer thought that Kelly was under 16, thus under the jurisdiction of Juvenile Court. But upon finding out his error he returned to school to tell the boy to show up in Municipal Court April 1.

When Kelly failed to appear in court a warrant was issued and the paddy wagon picked him up.

Repeated efforts to reach Welsh for comment were unsuccessful.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."

Political Pickets Will Greet Philip

By NED AITCHISON
Herald Travel Writer

NASSAU — When Prince Philip, husband of Britain's Queen Elizabeth II, comes ashore here from the royal yacht Britannia April 24 to begin his four-day visit in Nassau, he will be greeted at Prince George wharf by demonstrating members of the Bahamas' Progressive Labor Party.

PHILIP

There will be cheers for the stalwart consort of the young queen, and massed waving of miniature flags.

But there also will be placards carried by PLP members demanding, among other things constitutional revisions, tax reforms, woman's suffrage (even white women in The Bahamas do not have the right to vote) and other governmental changes which leaders of the minority party in the House of Assembly believe will enhance their party's political prestige.

They even contend such changes may result in converting the PLP from minority representation in the assembly, to that of the majority faction, the position now held by the United Bahamian Party in the house.

Numerically, the PLP—composed of some whites but largely of Negro members — today claims to outrank the UBP on voting rolls, but this advantage is not reflected in assembly strength.

So Prince Philip's visit will be made the occasion, PLP leaders have announced, for a mass protest to drive their demands home to the royal visitor.

Not, they contend, that any violence will be condoned or anything done by party members to affect adversely The Bahamas' No. I asset — its burgeoning tourist industry, upon which the islands are economically almost wholly dependent.

After debarking, Philip will be welcomed by Sir Raynor and Lady Arthur; will inspect a guard of honor formed by the Worcestershire regiment, and will walk through Rawson Square Gardens to the public square.

There, he will receive and reply to addresses of welcome from the president of the legislative council and the speaker of the house.

School children will be massed along the route as he motors to Government House, which will be his headquarters for the four days. One hundred guests will attend an official dinner there in his honor that night. Followed by a reception to which some 1,500 persons have been invited.

Saturday, he is to fly to George Town, Exuma. From the deck of a private yacht, he will watch the Out Island regatta, and will return to Nassau that evening.

Sunday, the prince will attend services at Christ Church cathedral.

Monday, he is to attend a children's rally in Clifford Park; visit the new TB wing of Princess Margaret Hospital, and plant a tree there.

Also scheduled are a visit to the new Government high school, now under construction and which, it is hoped, he will name Prince Philip high school; an inspection of the Electricity Corporation's new generating plant at Clifton Pier, and in the afternoon, a sports rally in Clifton Park.

That night, the Bahamas legislature will tender him a banquet at the Fort Montagu Hotel, where his speech probably will be broadcast to all the islands.

Philip is to depart by air early Tuesday, the 28th, for Bermuda, the last stop on his global tour.

Cut Propaganda, Red Editor Asks

MOSCOW — (UPI) — The assistant editor of the official Soviet government newspaper Izvestia has called for a "more democratic" press in the Soviet Union. He urged more humor and less textbook propaganda.

Alexander Baulin, in an article in the magazine Soviet Press, said also Russian newspapers should print more human interest stories and fewer bureaucratic notices.

"It is no secret that in our newspapers and magazines a great deal is written about the affairs of offices and institutions," he said. "This must be done. But sometimes newspapers turn into office bulletins."

Headache: Pay Roll Loafers

It seems that wherever you find a nationalized enterprise, there also you will find a flock of bums on the pay rolls drawing big fat sums for doing exactly nothing.

Communist Russia had the problem. So did Poland, and so far as that is concerned still may have it. Now, Mexico is undergoing the same kind of trouble. The whole world is watching the contrast of public ownership vs. private enterprise.

By EDWIN A. LAHEY
Chief of Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — It seems to be a law of nature that a nationalized enterprise becomes a pay roll rookery for loyal party workers.

LAHEY

That was the heart of the problem that Premier Khrushchev faced a few years ago when he "decentralized" Soviet industry. This was a polite description for a purge in which Communist Party hacks were taken off the "front office" pay roll of state industries and put into productive work.

The "reform" administration of Gomulko in Poland had and probably still has essentially the same problem. They found a lot of politically secure bums doing paper work in the ministry of mines who were intended by nature to dig coal.

* * *

THE PROBLEM of pay roll bums on nationalized enterprises right now is nagging the administration of President Adolfo Lopez Mateos in Mexico.

The new president of Mexico is apparently playing with the drastic idea of curing the public pay roll problem by surgery.

This could mean serious trouble. When a party hack is on a pay roll long enough, he gets a proprietary interest in the job, and does not leave quietly.

The tension with workers on the nationalized railroads in Mexico stems largely from pay roll padding, and the effort of President Lopez Mateos to correct this costly evil.

President Lopez Mateos has given Benjamin Mendez, director of the national railroads, a free hand in turning them into an efficient operation. The employe resistance to Mendez has flared up in two ugly walkouts, which the Mexican government had handled with police and military measures.

About five weeks ago, when the first rebellion of Mexican railroad workers flared against Mendez, the new manager, the National Railways of Mexico, with 14,000 miles of track, had 70,000 employes. The Missouri Pacific, a private enterprise with about the same trackage, operates with 30,000 workers.

* * *

THE PAY ROLL padding on the nationalized railroads is only part of the problem in Mexico. Well informed people estimate that about 18,000 old "revolutionists" have been grafted onto the pay rolls of Pemex, the nationalized oil industry.

President Lopez Mateos is "second generation" among the aging revolutionists of Mexico.

In other words, he is the first president who did not have an active part in the revolution that began in the 1920s. He is thus emotionally equipped to take a detached look at the pot-bellied "revolutionists" and labor hacks who are time servers on the pay rolls of nationalized enterprises.

The success of the efforts of Lopez Mateos to fry the fat out of the public pay rolls in Mexico will be watched with interest in every corner of the world where they still argue the efficiency of public ownership versus private enterprise.

UM Students To Take Tour

Six University of Miami medical students and one of their professors will spend some time in Costa Rica this summer studying tropical diseases.

The trip will be financed by a $20,000 grant from the National Institute of Health under which they have been studying Parasitology.

Heading the group will be Dr. J. Walter Beck, associate professor of microbiology. Students are Hinson Brown, Charles B. Farmer, Robert H. Jacobs, Abe Marcadis, Frank Mendelblatt and Arthur Soroski.

This Sign Brought Out a Flood of Buyers
. . . Dowagiac, Mich., poultryman and family before auction

Farmer Who Fought U.S. Crop Program Sells Out

DOWAGIAC, Mich. —(UPI) — Farmer Stanley Yankus, who for six years protested the government had no right dictating how much wheat he could grow for his chickens, sold the chickens, his farm and everything he owned Saturday at auction for $30,000.

Yanjus said he now wants to start anew in Australia.

The chickens, which started the whole thing, were sold for $3,500. Yankus' home and his 100-acre farm brought $20,500.

Through it all, Yankus stood by and watched the farm he had built bit by bit being stripped and sold to the highest bidders.

"It's not pleasant," he said. "You just don't think about what will happen to you."

A crowd of 2,000 stood around Yankus' eight-room white brick and clapboard home amidst a carnival-like atmosphere while Auctioneer John M. Glassman moved through stacks of kitchen utensils and other small items.

"I admire Yankus for his stand," Farmer Than Stangland, Albion, Ind., said. "It doesn't matter where he is going, what he's getting into. The point is: 'Why is he leaving here?' "

It only was an hour after the auction began that Dale Douthett, a Three Oaks, Mich., businessman, made the high bid of $20,500 for the basic land and the home.

"This is one sale I wish had not taken place," Glassman said just before the bidding. "However, the auction will be conducted in a democratic fashion."

Yankus took that as a theme for a brief speech:

"I'm not a Democrat. I'm a Republican," he said. "Our nation is a republic. Many people fail to realize that many people can't vote away the right to property or liberty. My right to property has been voted away and I think that's contrary to the Constitution of the U.S."

Yankus said when he first began his fight against acreage allotments and subsidies back in 1953 he felt popular opinion would keep federal officials from telling him how much wheat he had to grow to feed his chickens.

Yankus felt since he never applied for government wheat subsidies officials had no right to dictate the amount he could grow.

But government officials had a different idea. The said he could grow but 15 acres. Yankus said he needed 35 acres and therein lay the difficulty.

British Tax Cuts Foreseen, But Budget's Still a Secret

LONDON — (AP) — Tax-burdened Britons will be told Tuesday whether the governemnts' slice of their pay check is going up or down. The outlook is that it will go down.

Traditionally, the budget is one of Britain's closest state secrets. To prevent premature market speculation, the figures are kept in a locked case until the chancellor of the exchequer formally reveals them in the House of Commons.

But guessing is anybody's privilege, and this year the odds are that Chancellor Derick Heathcoat-Amory will announce substantial tax concessions.

The government's economic survey for 1959, published last week, showed surpluses in exports over imports, a two-percent rise in real wages, a 2½-per-cent rise in personal spending and an increase in government capital investment programs.

In short, the survey painted a buoyant picture which seemed to point to tax relief in the new budget.

This will be the second budget Heathcoat-Amory has presented since he took over the job of chancellor in January, 1958, following the resignation of Peter Thornycroft.

In addition to setting the pattern on taxes, the budget will determine the cost of Britain's clothes, food, home furnishings, and other necessities.

Adding to speculation that the 1959 budget will contain tax concessions is the fact that Prime Minister Harold Macmillan is expected to call a general election sometime this year

Madame, the Frog Has News for You

By JOY REESE SHAW
Herald Staff Writer

Do frogs really cause warts?

Not if the busy hands of Laura Phillips are any example. She's been playing with frogs for years.

"I like 'em," announced the friendly, titian-haired medical technologist.

Actually, Laura's playhouse is Physicians and Surgeons Laboratory at One Lincoln Road Building, Miami Beach.

There — at the end of one of America's swankiest streets, high in the midst of America's fanciest resortland — live dozens of slippery African frogs.

And there, in her small, quiet world of microscopes and test-tubes, Miss Phillips, B.S., F.S. M.T., deals in a daily drama of yesses and no's.

A simple "yes" from Laura has made strong men weep and women faint. Her "no's" have equal impact. For Laura's frogs are used to determine pregnancy.

"Take Millicent here," She reached her fingers into a tank of water and chucked the biggest frog of all under its dubious chin. "I've had her three years. She heralded a lot of parenthood."

Frogs Cause Warts? Just an Old Wives Tale
. . . Technician Laura Phillips and friend Millicent

Patients are referred from doctors.

"Some need to know — medically. And some just want to know for the sheer joy of it," she explained.

Unlike land-lubber frogs, the Africans live in water, like fish.

Laura paid $8 for Millicent and her larger frogs . . . a minimum of $5 for the smaller gals.

She uses female frogs, but male varieties can be used too.

The test is made by injecting a hormone from the patient into a lymph sac on back of the frog. If the patient is pregnant, the hormone will cause artificial spawning.

A number of animals are suitable, rabbits rating high. But frogs can be used over and over again.

Rabbits require surgery to check results — and usually are used only once.

"Tests are 95 to 98 per cent accurate — but not perfect," Laura explained. "I have a friend who has a wonderful pair of my negative diagnoses."

The African frogs regenerate monthly, but Miss Phillips rests and rotates them. She changes their water daily, feeds them twice weekly, watches for red-leg or other sickness.

"Actually, they're not much care," she insists — which is good because her laboratory deals in numerous other kinds of tests too.

One thing bothers Miss Phillips. That Florida, flush with frogs, would have to import them.

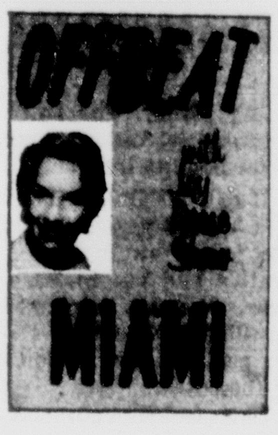
Not to be daunted, she took the matter right into the Everglades and got the Indians to catch her a batch.

The joint was jumping. Since American frogs eat only moving food, Laura held their mouths open with a tongue depresser, plied them with beef, codliver oil and multiple vitamins.

Her conclusions: Old Rana grylio — Florida bullfrog — would work great if available. It's accurate, sturdy, economical and fast, producing results within 30 minutes to an hour and a half. She wrote a paper on them.

And that wart business?

"Just an old wives tale," said Laura. "Otherwise I'd be full of them."



'Dangerous' Pair Takes Jailer's Car

FAYETTEVILLE, N. C. — (UPI) — Two men, including an Army bugler charged with bank robbery and murder, escaped the Cumberland County jail.

Officials said the men fled in the jailer's car and were armed with two .32 caliber pistols.

Deputy Sheriff A. J. Koonce identified the pair as Charles T. Bradford, 26, a member of the Third Army Band at Fort McPherson in Atlanta, and John Odum, 18, of Fayetteville.

Both men were described as "dangerous." Authorities said the men broke out of the prison by tricking Jailer E. V. McLauren to opening their cell door.

Sheriff William G. Clark issued an alert "all over the U.S." for the men who fled in McLauren's car. He said Bradford's parents live in Plant City, Fla.

Bradford was charged with the Feb. 20 robbery of $13,373 from a Fort Bragg branch bank in which he allegedly shot a teller to death. Odum was being held on a larceny charge.

2 Shoplifters Get Probation

Louis Weissing, Fort Lauderdale Criminal Court Judge, has ordered probation for a Miami Shores couple who pleaded guilty to shoplifting charges.

The judge put Claude Hughes, 53, of 215 NE 98th St., on probation for three years.

Police said they found some $800 worth of merchandise which had been taken from Burdine's at Fort Lauderdale in the Hughes' car.

Food Additives Eyed in Cancer

Certain substances added to food may be a cause of cancer, thinks Dr. William B. Deichman of the University of Miami School of Medicine.

He will go to Prague, Czechoslovakia, for an April 15 international conference on research done on the subject.

One of three American representatives at the conference, Dr. Deichmann is professor and chairman of the medical school's department of pharmacology.

Warren Urges Cooperatives To Beat High Car Insurance

Former Gov. Fuller Warren Saturday proposed cooperative-style associations formed by independent motorists to beat Dade County's ultra-high auto insurance rates.

Warren, now a Miami Beach attorney, said a "simple amendment" to a 1915 Florida statute would permit 20 or more "plain citizens" to form an insurance association for their own protection.

There may be obstacles, said Warren, but if the plan can be carried through it would cut insurance costs nearly in half.

The law Warren spoke of allows a mutual insurance association formed by independent citizens to insure members against everything but personal injury claims. The amendment proposed by Warren would also allow liability insurance.

If only 100,000 of Dade County's 365,000 passenger car drivers joined an insurance cooperative and put in $60 each a year, Warren explained, the association would have operating capital of six million dollars at the outset.

The former governor said that should be more than enough to pay for court fights and pay suits against members if the association limited liability insurance to the $10,000-$20,000 minimum required under the Financial Responsibility Law.

Warren also proposed that such associations also prohibit in their bylaws assessing of members for more than the annual premiums.

The $60 yearly premium of Warren's hypothetical insurance cooperative compares with the $78.60 annaul liability cost in Dade County for a motorist who uses his car to go to work — and the $98.25 which will come if a proposed 25 per cent rate increase is granted the insurance firms.

Warren said he has not studied the proposal thoroughly. But, he said, he wants persons who would like him to pursue it further to send him a post card.

"If I get enough postcards, I'll draw up a law and take it to Tallahassee myself to try to get it through the Legislature," Warren said.

Merchants OK Wider Sales Tax

ORLANDO — (AP) — Florida's merchants Saturday made repeal of the personal property tax and broadening of the sales tax their chief objective this legislative year.

They suggested the three per cent sales tax be extended to everything except food and medicine and one-third of the money collected be returned to the cities and counties of origin.

There wasn't a dissenting vote as the Florida State Retailers Association adopted this program in a resolution at its state meeting.

To take off all exemptions except food and medicine would more than raise enough money to replace the personal property tax, a spokesman said.

The merchants object to the personal property tax chiefly because all their inventory is taxed under it.

Brooks Shumaker Sr. of Gainesville was elected president. He will take office Oct. 1, succeeding J. Barco Bishop of Miami.

Willard M. Ware of Coral Gables was named a district vice president.

Broker's Class Opens Monday

A class in mortgage broker's procedures will open Monday at Lindsey Hopkins Education Center for a period of 12 weeks.

Charles Gardner will instruct the classes, for real estate salesmen and brokers, at Miami Senior High each Monday and Wednesday from 7 to 10 p.m.

This Horsin' Around Is 'Reined' Out

MADERA, Calif. —(AP)— The general's advice made good horse sense.

Philip Peatman, 11, wrote the "Chief of Cavalry" that his 19-year-old horse, Mr. Dillon, galloped back to the corral at the wrong time.

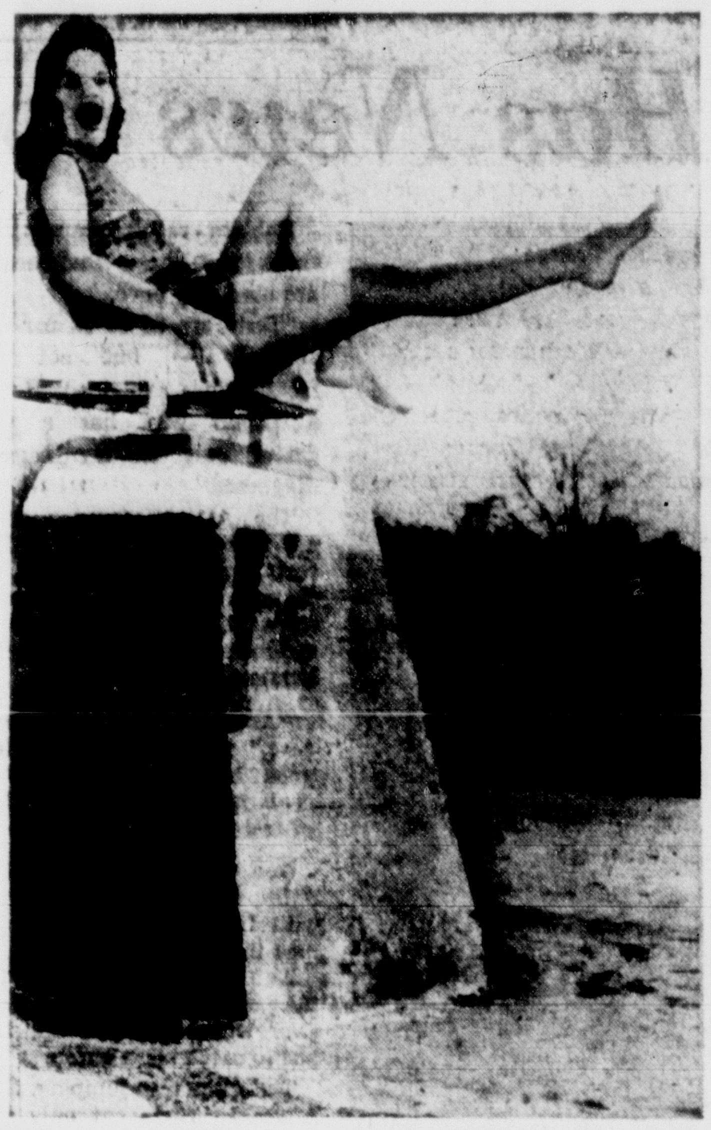
Brig. Gen. Frank S. Henry, a former cavalry officer now in the Pentagon, replied. He told Philip to rein Mr. Dillon into a circle any time he showed signs of hoofing back.

Philip tried it out.

"You know, it works," he exclaimed.

But General Henry's report that the modern army is horseless left Philip wiser but sadder.

"I thought," he lamented, "there was always a cavalry."



WHOA, GAL! There's no water in the city swimming pools in Atlanta, so the story runs, and Shirley McGowan had to put on brakes when she got to the bottom of the pool slide. Well, now you notice it, it does look kinda dry down there. Seems Atlanta won't fill its pools until school's out, no matter how balmy the weather. —United Press International Photo

Over the Briney All for Naught

WIGAN, England —(UPI)— Nurse Elizabeth Clarke, 29, and her parents came 14,000 miles from New Zealand to Britain for Miss Clarke's wedding to Raymond Foster, 24, a ship's engineer.

They might just as well have stayed home. Saturday the couple decided to call the whole thing off.

Oldsters! Get Your TB X-Rays

If you are 60 or over, Dr. M. E. Flipse wants to see you Monday.

That's the kick-off of Dade's stepped-up public X-ray program to detect signs of tuberculosis, particularly among the area's senior citizens.

Dr. Flipse, who is heading the drive by the Dade County Tuberculosis Association, said one out of every four TB cases in the county is a person over 60 years of age.

Mobile units Monday will be at NW Fifth Ave., between 24th and 26th Streets, from 10 a.m. to noon, and at NW Third Ave. and Sixth St., from 3 to 7 p.m.

Dr. Flipse, chest dieseas specialist, said approximately 1,000 persons living in Dade County now have inactive tuberculosis — and don't know it.

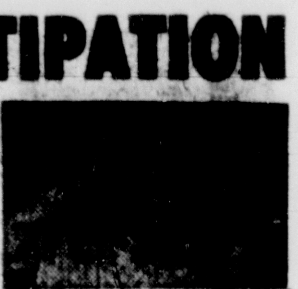
"If they would come in for a free X-ray," he said, a cure "could almost be guaranteed."

Barry Recital

Three Barry College students, Mercedes Molina, Carrol Healy and Marguerite Barnes, will present a voice recital Tuesday at 8:15 p.m. in the college auditorium under the direction of Sister Maura, O. P.

Put a stop to "CONSTIPATION MISERY"!

No need to suffer headachy after-laxative distress and digestive upset



Constipation can cause headachy digestive upset, but so can the wrong laxative. Read how to avoid this discomfort.

Many people have found it is quite unnecessary to endure cramps and other miserable results of taking a laxative. They find it easy to avoid that "washed-out" feeling next day. At the same time they get much prompter, more dependable results than with other laxatives.

The formula they use is Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, a pure vegetable "prescription" that contains the ingredient "of greatest value" for relieving the overtenseness of the intestines present in most constipation. Another ingredient it contains acts to promote the flow of intestinal lubricant to soften the dry, hardened wastes. There is no griping, no discomfort. No upset stomach because it does not act in the stomach but in the bowel lower down.

Is there any wonder these tablets were 58% more effective than 6 other laxatives in hospital test?

Don't let constipation worry you when you can get gentle, effective Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at any drug store in town. Get the large size for economy.

HERE ARE THE ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT CONTACT LENSES!

Facts on Vent-Air lenses taken from New Booklet "TAKE OFF THOSE GLASSES"

"Are Vent-Air lenses really invisible?"

No matter how poor your eyesight is, no matter how thick your glasses may be, no one will know you're wearing Vent-Air lenses unless you tell them so! You can't see them in your own mirror!

"How long can I wear them?"

Today's grooved Vent-Air lenses are so light, so comfortable that many men, women and children enjoy them through all their waking hours. (The initial adjustment period varies with the individual)

"Aren't the lenses hard to handle?"

Can you spare five minutes? That's all it takes for one of our Contact Lens Specialists to show you all there is to know about wearing Vent-Air lenses. With just a little practice, in no time at all you'll be putting them on and taking them off as quick as a wink.

"Is it true that I may actually get a wider field of view with Vent-Air lenses than I do with glasses?"

Absolutely! Now, you may be losing the benefit of your glasses when you look to the side. With Vent-Air lenses you have a normal field of vision, whether you're looking sideways, up, down or any direction.

"Are Vent-Air lenses worn for sports?"

Right now some of the foremost hockey and football players wear Vent-Air lenses through the most rugged action. The exclusive self-ventilating design provides for a securely fitting lens. Many swim, dive, ski, play tennis, enjoy some of the most rigorous sports with complete freedom.

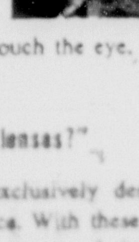
"What do eye doctors think about Vent-Air lenses?"

Members of the medical and optical profession have accorded special recognition to Vent-Air lenses. The Vent-Air design has been the subject of numerous articles and considerable praise by eye specialists. In fact, Pageant magazine reported medical studies indicating that all-day wear of contact lenses may retard the possible increase of near-sightedness.

"Aren't Vent-Air lenses much more expensive than ordinary glasses?"

Not really. Most people don't realize that in the majority of cases the first Vent-Air prescription never has to be changed. But even if a change is needed, however, there is never any laboratory charge for it! When you consider this against the total costs you pay for examinations, new prescriptions and new glasses every year or so, you can see that in the long run Vent-Air lenses actually represent a saving.

"How about my wearing Vent-Air lenses?"



Vent-Air's pre-tested wearability means you'll learn whether you too can successfully wear Vent-Air lenses by actually wearing them BEFORE you take them! Vent-Air's are fitted by highly trained—Vent-Air trained—contact lens specialists with modern, specially designed instruments which never touch the eye.

"Is there a difference in contact lenses?"

Definitely! Vent-Air lenses are exclusively designed with four vents on the inside surface. With these vents an air space is created between the eye and the lens. In this way Vent-Air's are best suited to allow normal tear and air flow.

"What about bifocals?"

Through Vent-Air research contact lenses are now available in bifocal form. The lenses are less than ½ of an inch in diameter, completely undetectable when worn and contain the exclusive features found in Vent-Air's single prescription lens.

"How can I learn more about Vent-Air lenses?"

Just fill out the coupon below and send for the illustrated booklet "Take Off Those Glasses!". You'll discover the fascinating history of contact lenses. Learn why Vent-Air lenses are considered superior, read unsolicited quotes from doctors and Vent-Air wearers and find the answers to any and all questions you may have about changing to contact lenses.

Airport Turnstile Takes Your Money
. . . F. R. McDonald with Isabel, three, and Jimmy, five, enter observation deck

It Costs a Dime To Wave Goodby

By JAMES BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

The Port Authority has discovered a gold mine in the sky — built on your desire to wave hello or goodby to friends at the International Airport.

It costs a dime today to do what came naturally at the old 36th St. terminal.

No more leaning over a fence to watch Grandma or Uncle Joe get on or off an airplane.

Today you watch from a vantage point atop one of the concourse roofs with a good view, where you're out of the way of airport activity.

To get there each visitor feeds a dime into a turnstile guarding the entrance to the concourse roof or observation deck.

So far, 20,921 dimes have gone in. From one month's use of one turnstile and a week's use of two others the airport has netted $2,092.10.

"It's a legitimate revenue producer," a Port Authority spokesman said Saturday. "The money is needed to finance the observation decks for which there was no federal money available."

Cost for the fenced-in areas atop four concourses was approximately $286,000, according to Port Authority figures.

"The cost is being paid for by the people who use them," the spokesman said. "It's being done in New York, Washington and other cities."

Without the decks, officials point out, "people would be going directly to the planes with their relatives, no matter how many signs we put up. That's not only dangerous, it impedes operations."

Three of the observation levels now are in operation. A fourth, atop one of the two Eastern Air Line concourses, will go into service when EAL occupies its new terminal quarters around the first of next month.

Cherries Bloom In Washington

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The cherry blossoms are once more the main attraction in Washington.

They have burst into pink and white bloom, drawing crowds of beauty lovers as they do every spring.

The trees, around the Tidal Basin and the Jefferson Memorial, are expected to be at their best for the national Cherry Blossom Festival. This will begin Tuesday and continue until April 12.

Arthritis Victims Find New Hope In Florida

Tampa, Fla., April 5 . . . (Special) . . . Science continues its research to combat mankind's most crippling disease. Yet, the Bragg Chiropractic Clinic, famous for its specialization in arthritis, contends that shots, "wonder-drugs" and pills do little more than offer temporary relief to the symptoms . . . if that.

DRUG LIGGETT STORES

For Crying Out Loud, He's Fined

LONDON — (AP) — George Glynshaw, a whelk seller, was fined 10 shillings ($1.40) for crying out loud.

A court in suburban Wimbledon held that in shouting "whelks! whelks!" Gynshaw violated an ordinance against "crying aloud for the purpose of hawking."

P.S. The whelk is a large, edible marine snail. Goes great with beer.

Panhandler Gets Burned

NOGALES, Ariz. — (AP) — Louis Sotomayor, wearing a new sport coat, was stopped on the street by a stranger.

The stranger praised Sotomayor's coat, appraised it at $100 and asked him for a quarter.

Sotomayor, police chief of this U.S.-Mexico border city, promptly escorted the stranger to jail on a panhandling charge.

Kissimmee's Mrs. Weaver, 67, Is Florida 'Mother of Year'

JACKSONVILLE — (AP) — Mrs. Joe Berta Bryan Weaver, 67, of Kissimmee Saturday was announced the Florida Mother of 1959.

The Florida mother is wife of Paul K. Weaver, for years a social security administrator in the Orlando area and now a Kissimmee realtor.

They have three daughters: Mrs. Donald Walker of Orlando and Mrs. Roger Cook of Raleigh, N.C., both housewives; and Mrs. Randolph Richardson, a Kissimmee school teacher.

Mrs. Weaver is a native of Kissimmee. She was graduated from Cox College in Atlanta and Florida State University.

She is a member of the welfare board of the State Department of Public Welfare; president of the Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church; and has been an officer in a wide variety of state and Kissimmee women's and civic organizations.

Mrs. Weaver will go to New York later this month with mothers from other states for selection of the American Mother of the Year.

The primary objective of the American Mothers committee is "to develop and strengthen the moral and spiritual foundation of the American home."

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker of nearby Orange Park made the announcement as head of the selection committee composed of Mrs. John G. Kellum of Tallahassee; Mrs. William Gautier of New Smyrna Beach; Mrs. J. Brown McCalla of Jacksonville; and Mrs. C. W. Williamson, Miami.

Mrs. Chalker said there were 13 nominations from various organizations over the state. She called this a good response.

Kathy's Expecting, They Say

ISHPEMING, Mich. — (AP) — Kathy Grant Crosby, wife of crooner Bing Crosby, would neither confirm nor deny Saturday that she is expecting another baby.

But a movie industry spokesman, who asked to remain anonymous, said Mrs. Crosby was pregnant.

Mrs. Crosby arrived here Saturday. She begins work Monday on a movie being shot here.

The Detroit Times, unable to get an answer from Mrs. Crosby, said a friend of the Crosby family told it: "Yes, Kathy is expecting in September or October."

But Youngsters Will Have to Get Out and Hunt Them

There'll Be Summer Jobs for Teenagers This Year

By EVELYN De TARDO
Herald Staff Writer

If you're between the ages of 14 and 19, chances are you've already begun to think about summer job hunting.

And according to the Florida State Employment Service, if you sincerely try to find a job, you should have little trouble.

EVELYN

Salary - wise, you'll be making at the least, 60 cents an hour and at the most about $2.50 an hour — if you're lucky.

By the time the final school bell rings in June, employers will be looking for ushers, babysitters, stock boys, salesmen, cabana boys and candy girls.

Sertoma's Youth Employment Service, at 251 SW First Ct., has in the past placed more than a third of its teenage applicants. In June of 1958 it placed 123 students and feel there should be no trouble doing the same this year.

But YES, A teenage operated employment service, has one major problem — about two thirds more job hunters than jobs.

If you place your job hunting problems in the hands of YES, there is no charge and no consideration of race, color or creed.

The Florida State Employment Service also places some teenagers in jobs. But has few requests in that age bracket.

One of the best and surest ways to get a summer job is to canvass your own neighborhood, and watch the want ads.

If you've already picked your summer occupation, here is what you can expect in your paycheck:

Lowest paid are movie ushers who average 60 cents an hour. Next are dime store clerks at 70 cents an hour.

Though the work is not as steady, babysitters, average about 75 cents an hour, as do those who do housework.

In the upper teenage brackets, office jobs average $1 an hour or more. Delivery boys also make about $1 an hour, and they are in a position to receive tips.

Stock work averages about $1.12½ an hour. Shoe store salesmen can expect a regular salary of about $50 a week plus commission.

There will be some jobs available this summer where teenagers will be provided food and lodging and a salary of about $15-25 a week in exchange for babysitting and housework.

Tops in teenage summer work are survey jobs at $2 to $2.50 an hour. The catch is that there are very few of these jobs available, and the occasional requests ask for teenagers in the upper age brackets.

As of yet, few employers have made requests for summer workers. And when summer replacement jobs open many of the year-round part-time workers will get first chance.

YES already has some 500 applications on file for summer jobs, according to Rochelle Lynn, 17-year old YES director.

If you try YES, FSES, and inquire at your school, (where often requests for summer help are made) with no results, here is some final advice from the Florida State Employment Service.

Go out on your own, speak to persons in your neighborhood, friends, local businessmen, civic clubs and your church, and keep your applications up to date.

A teenager sincerely looking for a summer job has an excellent chance of finding one.

Lady Cops To Train at Dog Track

Miami's new lady policemen start bronc-busting their three-wheel motorcycles Monday — and their instructors are making sure there'll be plenty of wide open space.

The four women will ride the motors for the first time in the parking lot of the West Flagler Dog Track. When they learn to handle the vehicles, they'll be turned loose to start checking on-and-off-street parking meters.

The four women are Mrs. Ruth Siegel, 30, a former radio operator; Mrs. Susan Rimland, 81, former police matron; Mrs. Georgia Gonzas, 31, also a former matron, and Mrs. Frances Lechleitner, 31, a former clerk.

They just finished a 2½-day course at the Miami Police Academy in ticket-writing, report-writing and first aid.

Assistant Police Chief J. A. Youell said the women will be used only for meter checking. Three more women may be added to the force next year. Miami Beach and Coral Gables already use women for meter checking.

Hammer Slayer Dies in Chair

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va. — (AP) — Elmer David Bruner was electrocuted for the hammer murder of a Huntington housewife.

Bruner went to his death before 18 prison officials, doctors and newsmen after a last-minute appeal to Gov. Cecil H. Underwood failed. His 22-month fight to escape the electric chair twice went to the State Supreme Court and once to the U.S. Supreme Court.

After four separate shocks, Bruner was pronounced dead by Dr. Sidney F. Yoho and Dr. Harold Ashworth, prison physicians.

Alcoholics Face Stiff Penalties

BUDAPEST, Hungary — (UPI) — In a move to try to curb increasing alcoholism in Hungary, the government will confiscate the incomes of known alcoholics and the drunks will be put in the charge of a state guardian, the Justice Ministry announced.

$10 Adult Fee Likely If State Cuts Off Aid

By PHIL MEYER
Herald Education Writer

Attorneys for the Dade School Board are girding themselves for their annual trip to Tallahassee to lobby for our local schools.

One legislative target they will defend is adult education, which appears to be in danger of losing much of its state financial support.

School Board members indicated last week they favor continuing our present system of adult courses, but they were not agreed on the need for state financing.

State aid pays most of the cost of teachers' salaries, with the county footing the rest of the bill.

If state aid is withdrawn, students will have to make up the difference with tuition payments. School officials haven't reached a firm figure, but a good guess, according to Assistant Superintendent Lowell Selby would be $10 per 36 course hours.

* * *

IN OTHER WORDS, an adult student who now pays only a $2 registration fee for a 12-week course in food preparation would also have to pay a $10 tuition fee. Some courses also have materials fees which students already pay.

In the opinion of at least one school board member, Dr. Robert S. Butler, this might not be such a bad idea.

"A lot of these classes start out with 15 or 20 people and dwindle down to four or five by the time the term is over," he said at the last board meeting.

"With a tuition fee, we might be more likely to get only people who are genuinely interested in taking the course."

Dr. Butler
. . . it'd make 'em attend

* * *

AT MIRAMAR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL, where blind Seth Schwartz outdid his 33 sighted classmates in the third grade spelling bee, teachers are pleased with their new system of teaching handicapped children.

Formerly kept in separate classes, children with sight or hearing handicaps now attend the same classes as normal children. They get additional instruction from a "resource" teacher who gives them the special skills needed to overcome the handicap.

Seth studies braille under May Stelle, and his regular third grade teacher, Harriet Flax, learned it on her own time so she could check his work.

The other children help Seth and the other blind member of the class, nine-year-old Pamela Drake. Sometimes, in fact, Miss Flax has to caution them against helping too much, so the blind students will learn independence.

TV Dedication Set For 12 New Schools

Twelve Dade County schools, all opened since last fall, will be dedicated in a single ceremony Tuesday.

School officials will use WTHS-TV, the school system's educational station, to present part of the program in all schools at once.

Ceremonies at the 12 schools and one school addition will begin at 7:45 p.m. The TV broadcast starts at 8 with the introduction of the seven School Board members and a talk by Dr. C. Raymond Van Dusen, chairman of the board.

Main speech will be by Supt. Joe Hall, who will discuss the importance of education. Then each board member will introduce a school child who will deliver a one-minute speech about his new school.

Here's Man Who 'Delivered' Dade Parks

By STEVE TRUMBULL
Herald Staff Writer

Charles Crandon, longtime county commissioner, has been frequently and aptly described as "the father of the Dade county park system."

Little has been written on the lank, bespectacled and quiet fellow who Crandon brought in 30 years ago as something of a midwife for the "delivery" of our first county park — and who has been "delivering" and guiding Dade County parks ever since.

The name is Adrian D. (Doug) Barnes. He now directs a system of seven major and several minor parks, so well laid out and developed that they have brought him national honors in his field and park students from points as distant as Japan and New Zealand.

In newspaper "morgue" files Barnes is a rarity among longtime public officials. These files contain all past clippings on the men in the news — good and bad. Most of them become bulky as the years roll on. One current county commissioner, just for example, burst out his first file envelope in less than two years.

After 30 years, The Herald file on "Barnes, A. D." could still be mailed out with a 4-cent stamp. And there is not one derogatory clipping. The fellow doesn't "sound off" for publication or get into political trouble.

He just develops parks, and keeps telling his bosses — the Dade County commissioners — that this county needs more, more and still more land for still more parks.

The parks under his jurisdiction "played" to a total of some 10,235,000 visitors in the last year. Crandon, named for the fellow who hired him, was tops with some 3,217,000. Haulover Beach was a close second with 3,145,000 recreators.

CRANDON

Give Him the Land, He'll Develop Beautiful Parks
. . . A. D. Barnes, Dade parks director, looks over Crandon, one of his pets

Barnes, a landscape architect by education, came here in 1925 shortly after his graduation from Massachusetts Agricultural College, now a part of the University of Massachusetts. He found a job immediately with the City of Miami, then just starting to build a few modest parks.

In 1928 Barnes was scratching around in the recently pumped-in sand trying to make a few things grow in what is now beautiful Bayfront Park. Downtown business men would sometimes walk over to watch on their lunch hour.

One of these frequently struck up a conversation with the young landscape architect, asking some pretty intelligent questions and making some equally intelligent and polite suggestions. Barnes didn't know it until 1929 when he was called in by the county and offered his present job, but that fellow was Charles Crandon.

Up to that time county "beautification" consisted chiefly of getting the most unsightly boulders away from the roadsides, and keeping the trash from getting too deep.

Greynolds Park became the first Crandon-Barnes project. The manner in which they acquired it — the record of swaps, donations and trades — fills a huge file. Dade county once had owned part of the land, having bought it for a poor farm. Palm Beach County owned some of it from the days when this was part of that county.

For a cash expenditure of less than $1,300 Dade got the park that now covers almost 270 acres. The site, that is. There was little money in those days for park development.

A park in the north end of the county thus being buttoned down, the Crandon-Barnes team decided Dade needed a park to the south.

Crandon, to whom no door bell was sacred, promptly "braced" the late Commodore W. J. Matheson, and we had the nucleus for what is now Matheson Hammock County Park — strictly for free. Other donors added to the original grant.

It was Barnes who turned in the magic that got the manpower to develop these first two parks. This was in the days of the CCC (Civilian Conservation Corps). Barnes read that the government, with plenty of work for these lads in the summer, didn't know what to do with them when snow covered the Western projects.

Conrad Worth, than assistant director and now director for National parks, was one of Barnes' college mates. Barnes suggested Florida for the winter headquarters of the CCC — and that manpower developed both Greynolds and Matheson Hammock.

Baker's Haulover Beach came next, and for an expenditure there of around $700,000 the county got itself 7,000 feet of oceanfront, running all the way from the Atlantic back to the Intracoastal Waterway. Today the land is worth about 20 million dollars.

That's the way our park system started, with Crandon coaching and Barnes playing quarterback.

By 1944 Barnes' ability to create parks from tangled jungles had won enough national attention that he won the annual Cornelius A. Pugsley medal of the American Scenic and Historical Preservation Society.

In 1956 he was elected president of the American Institute of Park Executives. He served three years on the board of that group.

In all of these years, the Barnes' theory on what a county park should be had not changed. He thinks they should not be a sports arena or a honky tonk of ferris wheels and shooting galleries. They should be for family picnics and individual and group outings in a setting preserved as much as possible as nature created it.

And what does Dade County need?

More sites for more future parks. He wants the county to grab off and hold more tracts on the south end of Biscayne Bay before the bulkheading and filling operations kite land values even higher. He would like to see about two of these between Matheson Hammock and Homestead Bayfront, and one south of Homestead. Barnes believes we are growing in that direction — and rapidly.

He is doing no shouting from the housetops, starting no whooper-dooper campaigns. He merely suggests to the powers that be what we need — and quietly. If they get the land he'll build the parks.

6,300 Degrees F., Say Scientists

Earth's Core Less Hot Than Believed

SCIENCE NEWS

THE INTERIOR of the earth is much cooler than previously thought, studies by General Electric scientists reveal.

Using a super-pressure device designed to produce man-made diamonds, the scientists determined the melting point of iron under conditions of heat and pressure previously "unheard of." Iron is believed to make up the earth's core.

At the center of the earth, the scientists said, the temperature is 6,300 degrees F., not the 7,200 degrees previously estimated. Estimates for other levels were similarly lower.

New Magnetized Plastic Offered

A NEW flexible plastic can be magnetized in any direction and can be chopped into all sizes and shapes without losing its magnetic properties.

Developed by B. F. Goodrich Co., the plastic strips are produced by melting a vinyl resin mixed with plasticizers and a magnetized metallic powder. The mixture is extruded in the desired shape, then run through a magnetic field.

The poles, instead of being at the ends of the strips, extend the entire length, the north pole along one edge, the south pole along the other. The poles also can be reversed along a single strip at intervals, so that they run north-south, south-north, north-south, etc. Or they can be induced at the ends of the strips, as in ordinary magnets.

Hot Spot Found On Ocean Floor

A "HOT SPOT" stretching some 3,600 miles along the floor of the eastern Pacific Ocean has been discovered.

The heat flow rates were found to be 50 times higher in some regions. Dr. Roger Revelle of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif., said the flow indicates the earth's interior is slowly churning over in giant blocks hundreds or thousands of miles in size.

NATO Should Get A-Arms--Gruenther

Wrecking Alliance Called No. 1 Goal of the Soviets

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Breaking up the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been Russia's No. 1 goal for the last several years, Gen. Alfred Gruenther said Saturday.

Gruenther

Gruenther, former NATO commander, called this "A pretty good tribute from a very reliable source." Gruenther, now retired from the Army, is president of the American Red Cross.

Speaking on a recorded radio program sponsored by the AFL-CIO, on the 10th anniversary of the forming of NATO, Gruenther said certain proposals for disengagement in Europe may present "tremendous bear traps."

"When you move Soviet troops back a couple hundred miles, it's just a matter of a day and a half or so before they are back," Gruenther said. "If our troops move back a couple of hundred miles, they move back into the water and where do you take them then?"

Describing West Germany as essential to NATO, Gruenther said aid and ground power there is of "extreme significance to the security of the free world."

Gruenther was asked if he agreed with Paul-Henri Spaak, secretary general of NATO, that atomic armaments should be provided NATO armies. He replied:

"There is a tendency in certain areas to say, 'You can have a harmless war, a gentleman's war. Unfortunately those days are gone. The atomic bomb is here and you cannot wish it away.

"The Soviets keep large bodies of so-called conventional forces in being. We are unable to match those forces in number, and I don't think we should. We attempt to match them by technological advances, and one such is the atomic weapon.

"It's not the atomic weapon that's evil. It's war itself that is the evil. During the last war we had 20-ton blockbusters dropping on us, and people were just as dead then as they are when an atomic bomb falls on them."

Gruenther, remarking that Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev has been trying to divide members of NATO, said he didn't think a settlement of the Berlin problem by negotiation would lessen the importance of the organization.

"In fact, quite the contrary," Gruenther said. "With the idea that the Soviets have of uniting the Communist bloc countries which they do with the gun-in-the-back method, more than ever we have got to be certain that there is Allied unity."

And Have a Talk

Montgomery Says He's Going to Visit Moscow

LONDON — (AP) — Britain's Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, ever happy to be in the thick of things, announced Saturday night he's going to Moscow to talk over "this conflict between East and West."

Montgomery, now 71 but still as fit as when he led British tanks in the North African desert, said he asked Soviet Premier Khrushchev if he could visit Moscow and was assured he would be very welcome.

"I want to talk to these people to see what they think about it all," he said.

"I know what the West thinks," he added. "We cannot go on living in this state of tension."

Did Monty, never exactly an easy chap to get along with, believe he could smooth things over?

"I certainly shall not make it worse," he said.

Montgomery, former deputy supreme commander of NATO in Europe, said he plans to leave for Moscow April 28 and return to London by May 1. That makes two full days in the Soviet capital.

He was last there in January, 1947, on an official visit as chief of the British Imperial General Staff. He was popular with the Russians — and with Stalin.

They gave him a sable lined great coat and a lamb's wool hat of the kind worn by Russian generals.

Jewish Home Ceremonies Are Today

Dedication ceremonies for new buildings at the Jewish Home for the Aged, Douglas Gardens, 151 NE 52nd St. will be at 2 p.m. today.

Valued at $400,000, the buildings include four new residential pavilions, a sheltered workshop, a gerontological research laboratory, new staff quarters, and offices for student training units.

The workshop, supervised by the Jewish Vocational Service, provides work for residents of the home and handicapped persons in the community.

The research laboratory will be used for a cooperative research program in geriatrics by the University of Miami medical school and the home. The program was initiated several years ago by Dr. Samuel Gertman, medical director of the home and director of the Institute of Gerontology of the medical school.

The home is a beneficiary agency of the United Fund and the Jewish Federation and a member of the Welfare Planning Council.

Older Women's Hopes For Jobs Are Better

NEW YORK — (AP) — Miss Bertha S. Adkins, undersecretary of Welfare, Saturday predicted a period of improved job opportunities for older women in the next six years.

Miss Adkins

But she cautioned that older women would get the jobs only if they keep in step with progress.

In a speech to the New York State Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Miss Adkins said Labor Department figures show the country will need 10 million more workers by 1965. But the labor force will have only five million more men by then than it has now, she said.

"This means additional opportunities for women of all ages," she said, noting that extra opportunities probably would arise in the professional, managerial official, and supervisory fields.

The undersecretary said women who have provided warmth and culture for their families, have contributed already to society.

"And the same intelligence, integrity and warmth this woman gave to her family could well be turned, when her children are grown, in other directions," Miss Adkins said.

But she said the older women will "have to retrain, take refresher courses or even learn new skills or study in new fields," if she intends to take advantage of new opportunities.

At the same time, Miss Adkins said, the older woman may damage herself by "her own long-held ideas of cards being stacked against her."

"Instead of counting the years, they should appraise their abilities and experiences those years have given them," she said. "They should think of themselves as mature women rather than older women."

Dr. Ira Davis Will Be Cited

Dr. Ira P. Davis, Miami dentist and long-time member of the Board of the Florida Region of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, will receive a citation at the organization's meeting Tuesday in the Biscayne Terrace Hotel.

New board members to be named at the meeting include Sen. Harry P. Cain and Julian Weinkle of Miami, and Dr. Roscoe R. Oglesby, dean of Florida State University.

It Will Be Brought Up Tuesday

Haverfield Proposal to Ban Unions Finds Little Support

By DOM BONAFEDE
Herald Staff Writer

A proposal by Metro Commissioner Robert Haverfield to ban labor unions among county employes appeared doomed Saturday shortly after taking its first breath.

Prevailing opinion among Haverfield's fellow commissioners was in opposition to the plan.

Nevertheless Haverfield said Saturday he will bring the proposal up for discussion at Tuesday's commission meeting.

In a letter outlining the plan he said:

"I am not opposed to unions but I am opposed to unions in government.

"I say this in the interest of public employes, for once they transfer the power for relief to the unions and away from the law . . . the public may look with disfavor, and they may lose sacred rights which they had in the first place."

He observed that unionization among Metro employes may lead to a situation similar to that which occurred in New York City when hundreds of public workers marched on city hall to protest a reduction in proposed wage increases.

While most of the commissioners were willing to accept public employes unions, they took a stand against strikes and picketing by governmental workers.

Commission Chairman Walter Weiss was the only board member who reacted favorably to Haverfield's proposal.

"I feel there is a conflict between unions and governmental service," he commented.

Statements from other commissioners:

Joseph A. Boyd Jr.: "I personally don't think anybody should be discriminated against because he works for the county."

Arthur H. Patten Jr.: "I see nothing wrong in employe organizations for purposes of bargaining and petitioning."

Faris N. Cowart: "There doesn't seem to be any harm in union organizations in government under certain conditions."

Ben McGahey: "Basically, I'd like to see working conditions so good and pay scales high enough so that we wouldn't have to attack the problem from that angle (Haverfield's proposal)."

John B. McLeod: "I don't know if we can stop them from organizing and since the law says we don't have to bargain with them, it may not be necessary for us to do anything."

'Country Singer' Says Federal Agents Off Base

Red Foley Denies His Income Tax Was $252,143 Short

• PEOPLE •

—Associated Press Wirephoto

HAPPIEST 48 DAYS of her life began last Valentine Day, says Mrs. Marcia Webb, shown with her husband, Jerry Webb, after their wedding Feb. 14 in Nashville, Tenn. She knew he had incurable leukemia but he didn't. He died last Thursday.

CLYDE JULIAN (RED) FOLEY of Springfield, Mo., radio and television entertainer, has appealed to the U.S. Tax Court in Washington from claims of the Internal Revenue Service for $252,143 in additional income taxes, with penalties.

Foley, a "country music" singer, and his wife, Sally Foley, deny underpayments or any intent to evade taxes due. They contend the Revenue Service is in error in its findings.

There are two cases, one involving Foley for the years 1948-51, inclusive, the other Foley and Sally Foley for the years 1952-55. Their petitions said that accountants had been employed to prepare and file their tax returns.

Princess Grace Is Recovering

PRINCESS GRACE of Monaco is on the road to recovery after undergoing a successful appendectomy, her Philadelphia surgeon, Dr. James A. Lehman, reported at Lausanne, Switzerland.

The 29-year-old princess entered the operating room of the exclusive Cecil Clinic here for the operation which lasted 30 minutes. The surgical aspect of the operation was completed in less than 10 minutes, Lehman said.

Lehman said the condition of the princess was completely satisfactory, and that she withstood the operation very well.

Marlon Brando Rebuffs Press

MARLON BRANDO made an infrequent public appearance—and an unfriendly gesture at photographers—in a Hollywood, Calif., theater.

He turned up with an old girlfriend, Rita Moreno, at a charity performance of the Betty Comden and Adolph Green party, a series of sketches presented at the Huntington-Hartford.

Miss Moreno was reputed to be Brando's prime romantic interest before he married Anna Kashfi, the Indian-born girl who sued him for divorce last month.

Ding Dong Dad Is Wed Again

FRANCIS VAN WIE, incurable romantic from San Francisco who seemingly can't resist the sound of wedding bells, has done it again.

Sheriff's deputies said the famed "Ding Dong Daddy of the D Line" was found living with Wife No. 18 when officers went to arrest him in Whittier, Calif.

Van Wie, 72, was jailed here on a complaint charging he failed to report to his probation officer. The onetime San Francisco streetcar motorman was convicted of bigamy in 1952.

He achieved fame of a sort at the time when it was learned that he'd been married 16 times without bothering to obtain divorces in some instances.

Wife No. 17 turned up in Sacramento last month. Mrs. June Pucket van Wie filed annulment papers in that city when she learned her husband was the fabled "Ding Dong Daddy."

Deputies identified the latest bride on Van Wie's matrimonial express train as Minnie Reardon, 81, of Whittier. She told officers they were wed Aug. 31, 1958 in San Diego.

Ingrid, Daughter Have a Reunion

INGRID

JENNIE

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. —(AP)— Ingrid Bergman and her 19-year-old daughter by her first marriage were reunited here Saturday for a brief visit.

The daughter, Jennie Ann Lindstrom, flew in from San Francisco. She is a student at Mills College. They met at Miss Bergman's Beverly Hills Hotel cottage.

Miss Bergman and her third husband, Theatrical Impresario Lars Schmidt, arrived from Europe Friday. She is here to present one of the Oscars at the Academy Awards ceremony Monday night.

Jennie Ann told reporters at the airport: "I am very thrilled to see Mother again. I have met Mr. Schmidt and he is a grand man."

Jennie Ann will accompany her mother to the Academy Awards program and then will return to school. She last saw her mother two years ago in Europe. She met Schmidt at that time.

Jennie Ann's father is Dr. Peter Lindstrom, whom Miss Bergman left for Italian Movie Director Roberto Rossellini 10 years ago. Her marriage to Rossellini was annulled in 1957.

Cancer Unit To Service Osteopaths

The Cancer Institute of Miami will once again accept cytology tests from osteopathic physicians, its board of directors announced Saturday.

The diagnostic service had been suspended on tests offered by osteopaths some time ago during a policy dispute between Director J. Ernest Ayre and board members.

The institute's directors said the servicing of tests made by the osteopaths was resumed at the recommendation of the Dade County Medical Association, which pointed out the Institute received money from the United Fund and the public and its facilities should be available to all people.

Officials on Alert

Castro Agents Here to 'Get' Batista Aides?

By GEORGE SOUTHWORTH
Herald Latin America Editor

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT officers have received a tip that Cuban rebels—perhaps assassins—are searching Miami for the hiding places of Batista henchmen and the brother of the ousted dictator.

MASFERRER

"We have been told that Castro agents are in Miami looking for their hated enemy, Rolando Masferrer, perhaps to kidnap him and take him back to Cuba," one official said, "and we are taking steps to prevent any such incidents."

Cuba's new revolutionary government lists Masferrer as one of their top war criminals. They claim that he had his own army of executioners.

The Herald received two dozen telephone calls from people seeking the address of Masferrer after printing a story that he was hiding here.

Two weeks later a story that the former dictator's brother, Francisco Batista, was living in Miami brought forth 14 telephone calls asking for his address. He was elected governor of Havana province three times.

Francisco Batista is appealing a U.S. Immigration Department ruling that he must get out of the country. Masferrer has a hearing coming up April 15 on whether he can stay in the U.S.

Humphrey Warns on Despotism

SEN. HUBERT H. HUMPHREY (D., Minn.) says the U.S. has demonstrated a peculiar nonchalance toward "despotisms of a homegrown variety."

HUMPHREY

In a speech Friday night at the University of Florida, he pointed out that "at the same time we have eagerly sought Latin American support to stop the spread of Communist tyranny."

Sen. Humphrey warned that inter American relations "are in a more critical stage today than they have been at any time in the past three decades."

"Our gravest error has been a misreading of the revolution gripping the region," Humphrey said. "Some people are prone to dismiss Latin American revolts as mere changes in the palace guard, while others see Communist influence in every upheaval. These stereotypes can be our undoing."

* * *

Technical Assistance Urged

THE SENATOR proposed a program for improving U.S.-Latin American relations that included the following points:

The U.S. should speed up and strengthen its program of technical assistance to Latin America in agriculture, health, education, vocational training and public administration.

The U.S. should give more economic aid to help these countries diversify their economies. Current moves within Latin America to establish regional markets should be supported. Trade and tariff policies should be reviewed.

Uncle Sam should develop a bold program of student and cultural exchange. The U.S. press, radio and TV should give wider and better balanced news coverage of Latin American affairs.

The U.S. should thoroughly reappraise its military assistance program in Latin America and should lend its support to the idea of regional arms control.

"Many thousands of Latin Americans have risked exile, imprisonment, torture and death to achieve responsible governments," Humphrey said. "In the midst of that upheaval, which we above all other peoples should be able to understand and to sympathize with, the U.S. has somehow managed to appear callous and indifferent."

At San Salvador

U.S. Latin Envoys To Meet This Week

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Assistant Secretary of State Roy R. Rubottom Jr. will confer with U.S. ambassadors to Caribbean and Central American nations this week on the area's turbulent political and economic affairs.

The meeting, it was learned, will be held at San Salvador. It will include the ambassadors or top U.S. diplomats in Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica, Panama, Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba, Dominican Republic and Haiti.

Gatherings similar to the upcoming San Salvador conference were started during the Truman administration. It was said that Rubottom's decision to meet with the envoys now did not mean there was any specific emergency in the Latin American area.

But a sure topic of discussion was the political uncertainty in the region, dramatically pointed up by the victory of Fidel Castro in Cuba.

Castro has indicated that he feels the present governments of the Dominican Republic, Nicaragua and Haiti should be overthrown, just as he overthrew the Batista regime in his home island.

French Discover Wine Is a Potent Germ Killer

PARIS — (AP) — The French high committee of studies on alcoholism has reported that wine is a powerful germ killer whose action is comparable with that of penicillin.

That conclusion was among those reached in a 223-page report submitted to Premier Michel Debre.

The committee said a Professor Masquelier of Bordeaux University's medical faculty proved wine can kill bacteria. It mentioned the bacilli of typhoid fever, colon bacillus and staphylococcus.

The report said a dose of two cubic centimeters of red wine killed 2,000 staphylococci in a laboratory experiment in 15 minutes.

The action of the wine as a germ killer was said to be very similar to the action of penicillin.

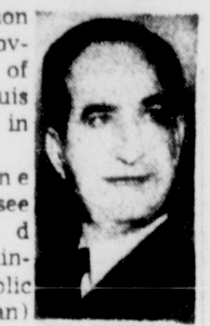
Ex-President of Costa Rica Disclaims Plots

Nicaragua's Somoza Should Be Out But Don't Look at Me—Figueres

By Herald Wire Services

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — Former President Jose Figueres of Costa Rica ridicules reports that he is master-minding a revolution against the government of President Luis A. Somoza in Nicaragua.



FIGUERES

"Everyone wants to see Somoza and Trujillo (Dominican Republic strong man) overthrown, but nobody knows how it will come about," Figueres said. "There are plenty of rumors but nothing is really being done."

Figueres has just returned from Cuba where he was the guest of the government of Fidel Castro.

Costa Rican authorities, meanwhile, said that despite persistent rumors of preparations by anti-Somoza elements on the Costa Rican side of the border between the two countries, everything is quiet along the frontier.

12 Girls Tangle With Lady Jinx

By PHIL MEYER
Herald Staff Writer

Twelve North Miami High School girls had just about recovered from the effects of a hard luck holiday Saturday. Only Barbara Kemp was still feeling the after effects. And she'll be out of the hospital in two more days.

Sprained Back's Memo of Her Jaunt
. . . but Barbara Kemp would brave it again

The girls, senior members of the Honor Guard, a girls' marching group, left with faculty sponsor Bill Swettman and his family for a cruise to Dry Tortugas aboard the Bahama Queen.

"It was a jinxed trip," said Swettman.

In the five days they were gone, the girls:

GOT SEASICK in rough seas which they hit just past Government Cut.

FLOUNDERED around in the ocean when the boat lost its rudder at 2 a.m. the first night out.

WASTED a day and a half of their holiday wandering around Miami after the boat was towed back to drydock for repairs.

CHANGED their plans because of the delay and made a quick trip to Bimini instead.

MADE a slow trip home when the boat developed mechanical trouble and had to limp back on one engine.

Barbara's mishap climaxed the affair after the boat was safely back in Miami.

"I was moving out of the stateroom, and I had my hands full, and the only way I could get out was to back out," she said.

So she backed out — into an open hatch leading to a storage hold. She plunged in up to her elbows, and then hung by them, feet kicking in the hold below.

"I still had a good time — we all did," she said from her hospital bed where she is recovering from a back sprain.

"I think we'd all go back again if we had our choice."

Confusing --But Nice

PHILADELPHIA — (AP) — Things were a little confusing in the department of blessed events at Kensington Hospital here Saturday. Mrs. Marie Cornelio became a mother for the eighth time and a grandmother for the eighth time, all within an hour.

Mrs. Cornelio, 43, gave birth to her sixth daughter, Rosanne, early Saturday morning. Just 50 minutes before, Mrs. Marian Gorham, 22, also had a daughter, Kathleen Ann, her third.

So Rosanne, who weighed four pounds and 11 ounces, was an aunt from the moment she was born. Her niece is bigger, though. She checked in at five pounds, five ounces.

The new father and grandfather is George A. Cornelio, 47, recording secretary for a local of the Carpenters Union. The new father and brother-in-law is Thomas Gorham.

Baghdad Reports

Red Bait Snaring Soldiers In Iraq

CAIRO — (AP) — Communists are infiltrating into the Iraq army by winning over the Arab equivalent of GI Joe, according to reports from Baghdad. As a result there may be a "sergeants' coup" building up in the oil-rich land.

This would be something new for the Middle East.

Iraqi Communists are the first revolutionaries in the Arab world to try to take over an army from the ground up. Until now it has been assumed that only officers counted in Arab armies, and that anyone who controlled the officers controlled the army.

Iraqi Communists are reported to have a considerable number of officers on their side, but their biggest strength appears to be among the enlisted men.

According to reports in this capital of Gamal Abdel Nasser's United Arab Republic, such Communist strategy already has scored one success. They gave this picture:

In the abortive Mosul army revolt in northern Iraq last month there was the rare spectacle of sergeants and corporals turning against their officers.

Communist enlisted men arrested rebel officers at Mosul and tried them before "people's courts." Enlisted men teamed up with armed civilian "people's resistance" forces and turned the tide against rebel nationalist officers.

The revolt has become the basis of a feud between Nasser and Iraqi Premier Abdel Karim Kassem. Nasser has been accused of inciting the revolt in order to bring Iraq into the U.A.R. Nasser has accused Communists of plotting to take over Iraq.

Reports from Baghdad say subversion in the army is going ahead full scale. Large numbers of privates and sergeants — who come from the lowest economic level in Iraq — are regularly seen at Communist meetings.

'Kids, Put That--Eek! It's a Lion'

PUEBLO, Colo. — (UPI) — A housewife discovered a 140-pound mountain lion in her woodshed Saturday, a few feet from her two young sons.

She hustled her boys to safety behind a fence. A game warden who had been hunting the beast for hours with dogs came up and shot it dead.

Mrs. Marie Marcovecchio said she went into the yard of her southside home to hang up some washing. She noticed her sons Michael, seven, and David, two, were playing about two feet from the door of her woodshed. Then she saw that they had some matches.

She walked over to the woodshed to take the matches away. As she passed the open doorway the mountain lion snarled at her.

Mrs. Marcovecchio grabbed up her boys and ran to the other side of a fence which divides her back and front yards. She yelled to a neighbor who called police.

Cuba Plans Credit Bank

HAVANA —(AP)— The Cuban cabinet Saturday authorized creation of a bank to underwrite installment purchases.

The cabinet hopes to stimulate installment purchases through low interest rates. It also reduced installment payments and extended legal payment periods on purchases already made.

The cabinet announced that 80 million gallons of sugar cane juice had been set aside for manufacturing alcohol to be mixed with gasoline. Regulations stipulate that all Cuban gasoline must contain 15 per cent alcohol, thus reducing oil imports and boosting the consumption of sugar, Cubas' principal crop.

President Primary Favored

Florida Demos Protest Change

TALLAHASSEE — (UPI) — North Florida Democrats kicked up their heels Saturday at a proposal to take selection of delegates to national party conventions out of the hands of the people.

But the party faithfuls voted overwhelmingly in favor of a motion recommending primary elections be switched from September back to May.

The vote on a motion to propose legislation to eliminate the presidential preference primary and place selection of delegates in the hands of a convention of county and state committeemen failed by an overwhelming chorus of "Nays."

The vote came at an area hearing before the party's legislative committee, seeking grass roots views on a program to present to the 1959 Legislature.

The hearing ended a series of area meetings. And North Florida area leaders also caucused with committee members to discuss other party matters.

Party Chairman James Milligan of Orlando, said the committee might be able to come up with a definite legislative program today. The program is expected to include sweeping changes in election laws.

The proposal to do away with the presidential preference primary generated heated opposition.

"We have too much centralization now," Helen Barr of Duval County said. "I'll never vote for anything that takes the vote away from the people."

The motion was offered by L. E. Merriam of Bay County, who said its purpose was to "set up a chain of command that will put new life in the Democratic party."

Others said it would strengthen the party at the local level by giving county committees "more power and responsibility."

Merriam said Florida's delegates to the national convention had no "bargaining power" because they were pledged to a candidate when they got there.

Merriam proposed another amendment which would have recommended that county committees be permitted to elect members to the state committee. This also failed, with the opposition contending again the vote should be left in the hands of the people.

Milligan pointed out the motions would not be "binding" on the legislative committee, and would only be used as an aid in forming a program. "We want to hear from everybody," he said.

Democrats in similar hearings in other parts of the state were almost unanimously behind elimination of the preferential primary and shifting primary elections to May.

Reapportion Hassle

U.S. Court May Set Equal Areas

TALLAHASSEE — (AP) — The Florida Legislature and Gov. LeRoy Collins were put on official notice Saturday the federal courts might step in to reapportion legislative districts if legislators don't iron out inequalities.

Attorney General Richard W. Ervin revised his biennial report to insert a recent ruling by a federal court panel in Minnesota, criticizing that state's legislative districting setup, and indicating it might reapportion if the current Legislature doesn't.

The attorney general is required by law to advise the governor and Legislature of court rulings which might have bearing on Florida laws, or activities.

The development came as the Florida Legislature prepared to grapple again with the reapportionment problem it has faced since 1955.

Ervin said he was advising the Legislature of the ruling as his official duty. He said he knew of no move to file such a suit in Florida.

He said no decision had yet been made whether a federal court has jurisdiction, but the courts retained jurisdiction, pending the end of current session.

The court said that, following adjournment, parties to the action could, within 60 days, petition the court for such action as they deemed appropriate.

A group of Minnesota citizens filed a federal court suit against state officials, asking the 1913 Minnesota reapportionment act be held invalid on grounds of "gross inequality" in population of the legislative districts.

They contended this deprived them of their rights under the 14th amendment (equal rights) to the Federal Constitution.

In its opinion the federal court said, from all evidence, there was substantial inequality. But it said no attempt should be made to decide the issues until after the Legislature had a chance to deal with the problem.

The Minnesota Legislature is due to adjourn at the end of this month.

Petitions Circulated

Students Get Say-So On School Closings

Students in two Dade high schools are expressing themselves on the prospect of closed schools, a move being considered by some legislators as a way to prevent racial integration.

Southwest High civics students Harvey Ziegler, Sally Street, and Kathy Morgan have been circulating a petition among students and parents which "pleads for the continuous and uninterrupted functioning of our free public schools."

They're shooting for a goal of "several thousand" signatures, said Miss Morgan, before they send the petition to the Legislature.

At the other end of the county, Stanley Ringler is making a similar petition part of his campaign for the office of student council vice-president at North Miami High.

Ringler's petition allows students to indicate whether they are for or against school closing.

"Since we are the ones who will be most affected by this decision, should we not have the privilege of voicing our opinions?" he asked in a speech to the student body.

The North Miami junior said his petition would also be sent to the Legislature, which convenes this week.

Easy Spur Wind Bag (And Hartack's Glad)

By EDWIN POPE
Assistant Sports Editor

Bill Hartack, who owns a passing fair set of lungs himself, has a colt's "second wind" to thank for his third straight Florida Derby victory.

The stormy little Miami Springs rider spurred Easy Spur to a three-quarters-of-a-length triumph over Sword Dancer in Saturday's $116,400 classic at Gulfstream Park when the Spring Hill Farm racer kicked out with two late drives.

The first failed. The second was worth $75,300 — of which Hartack collects 10 per cent.

"Generally I'm too busy with my own horse to worry about the others," Hartack explained half-breathlessly, all but drowned out by the University of Miami's blarring Band of The Hour. "But I can tell you I had some deep-down doubts when Easy Spur made his first move toward Sword Dancer on the stretch turn . . . and couldn't catch him."

Hartack paused, gathering his own second wind.

"Then Easy Spur dropped back, took a little breather and came again.

"That time we made it."

Someone asked Hartack if he had to whip Easy Spur much.

"You don't win derbies without using the whip," Hartack laughed. "I didn't have time out there to count the strokes but I sure had to get into him."

Hartack said he kept his mount on the outside after the first turn on the advice of Trainer Paul Kelley. "Mister Kelley told me it was a little deep by the rail, and to stay out some. He was right. It was good running where I was."

What did Hartack thing about Troilus' well-concealed Friday injury?

"I didn't think anything," he said. "I heard some rumors today (Saturday) but you hear a lot of those. I wasn't going to figure on Troilus running anything but his best. I'll tell you this, though: I never feared Troilus like I did Sword Dancer. We beat Troilus eight lengths in the Fountain of Youth last week, and I didn't think he's pick up that much ground today."

Hartack's third consecutive Florida Derby romp practically gave him permanent possession of The Run for The Orchids. He balked, though, at comparing Easy Spur with his last two Derby winners — Gen. Duke and Tim Tam.

"Ask me after the Kentucky Derby," he grinned.

Leonard, Palmer Tie With 212s

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Canada's Stan Leonard slammed back with a three-under-par 69 Saturday and tied defending champion Arnold Palmer for the lead after 54 holes of the 23rd Masters Golf Tournament.

Ex-champion Carry Middlecoff, moving in with a four-under-par 68, was only a stroke off the pace as Leonard and the muscular Palmer, of Ligonier, Pa., forged a deadlock with 212 totals.

So the game is on for today —the defending titleholder, the ex-champion and the relatively unknown — in the three-man showdown of this classic at massive Augusta National.

That's the way Leonard, a calm, 44-year-old veteran from Vancouver, expressed it after the third round had eliminated virtually all the other contenders.

Leonard, posting his second 69 of the tournament, set the target. Palmer, needing a birdie on the 18th hole to tie for the lead, made it on a 12-foot putt and scored a 71 for the day.

Middlecoff, also needing one birdie on the last three holes to make it a three-way deadlock, parred his way in and failed by a stroke to catch the others. But his 68 gained him the position he likes — where he can win with a strong finish.

It was a finish that provided every kind of thrill for a crowd estimated at 40,000 to 50,000—probably the largest in the history of American golf.

National Amateur Champion Charlie Coe was only three strokes behind at 215 after a superb 67, the best score of the tournament.

The three top contenders all are players who have been tested by competition. Leonard, the oldest, was a club pro in Canada for 17 years before he tried his skill on the U.S. tour. He has won two tournaments and has a calm, unworried attitude.

Middlecoff, 38, has won two U.S. Open championships and was Masters champion in 1955. He didn't play the circuit this winter but won the first tournament he entered at St. Petersburg last month.

Palmer, 29, was U.S. amateur champion five years ago and reached a peak in his successful pro career last spring when he became the youngest Masters winner in 21 years.

Nearly two dozen players appeared to have some sort of chance when the third round began with 42 survivors of the original field of 87. Two of the greatest, Ben Hogan and Sam

'Injured' Troilus Last in Florida Derby

Easy Spur Wins in Final 40 Yards

By RUSS HARRIS
Herald Turf Writer

Easy Spur remains undefeated at Gulfstream Park and undisputed champion of the three-year-olds which raced in Florida this season.

The Spring Hill Farm gelding wore down Brookmeade Stable's Sword Dancer in the last 40 yards Saturday to give Jockey Bill Hartack his third straight Florida Derby victory.

Bayard Sharp's Troilus, who suffered an injury Friday morning which was not revealed to the press in time for Saturday editions, was second choice of the 24,246 fans but finished last in the nine-horse field.

Easy Spur was three parts of a length the best while Master Palynch, third to cross the wire, was nine lengths behind Sword Dancer.

The winner's time of 1:47.1 for the mile and an eighth was only two-fifths of a second off the track record set by Calumet's Gen. Duke in 1957. The latter's time equalled the world mark for the distance.

Jockey Chris Rogers pulled Troilus up shortly after passing the finish line and, after dismounting, said: "When I asked him for speed, he did not respond and I thought he was going a little dinky, although we can't tell until we take the bandages off."

Troilus kicked himself on the tendon of his left foreleg in his stall. Swelling and soreness developed but the colt responded to treatment. Dr. Joseph Burch, a veterinarian, examined Troilus Saturday and found him "perfectly sound" and fit to race.

The colt ran with bandages on both front legs.

Easy Spur's triumph netted $75,300 for Jim Norris of Coral Gables, proprietor of Spring Hill Farm.

It was the bay gelding's fifth straight success at Gulfstream, three of the victories coming this season and two last year.

He refunded $3.80, $2.90 and $2.80. Sword Dancer, third choice at 7-2, paid $4 and $3.70 while the 8-1 Master Palynch was $8.70 to show.

Behind Master Palynch came The Chosen One, Rico Tesio, Rare Rice, McLellan, Revolutionist and Troilus.

Jimmy Donn's $116,400 "Run for the Orchids" had been billed as a three-horse battle, but it turned out to be a duel between Easy Spur and Sword Dancer with the other seven starters far up the track.

As expected, Jockey Bobby Stevenson set the early pace with Master Palynch. But Sammy Boulmetis had Sword Dancer right behind and he appeared set to take command at Sammy's will.

The Chosen One was third, followed by Rare Rice, Easy Spur, Troilus, Rico Tesio, Revolutionist and McLellan.

Troilus stumbled at the start but recovered quickly and moved into fourth position as the field went down the backstretch. However, at the far turn, he began dropping back

Amick Killed on Final Lap; Rathmann Wins at Daytona

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH — Jim Rathmann smashed his own world auto racing record Saturday, winning two fantastically fast races on the new high-banked Daytona International Speedway, the first of which took the life of veteran George Amick.

Three wrecks marred the program. Rodger Ward cracked up while leading the second event, for unlimited engines, but he was not hurt.

The 34-year-old Amick, from Rhinelander, Wis., was killed instantly on the last lap of the 100-mile U. S. Automobile Club championship race that opened the program.

Rathmann set a closed course world record of 170.26 miles an hour in the 100 miler, rubbing out his own record of 166.72 he made in winning the Monza, Italy, 500-mile race last year.

Amick, No. 2 ranking speedway car driver in America last year, smacked the outer guard rail. He died instantly as his car flipped end over end and disintegrated. He had been a close second to Jimmy Bryan in the 1958 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Bill Cheesbourg of Tucson, Ariz., skidded and spun into the infield to miss the 170-mile an hour wreck but escaped injury.

Amick had set a qualifying record of 176.887 miles an hour for the high-banked Daytona track.

Rathmann and veteran Rodger Ward of Los Angeles were the major contenders from the start. Rathmann passed his brother Dick, who started in the No. 1 spot, on the first lap. Ward screamed past Jim on the seventh lap but could hold the lead only four four laps. Rathmann won going away.

Bob Christy, Grant's Pass, Ore., finished third and Dick Rathman fourth. Then Amick's wreck stopped the race. He was awarded fifth place in death.

Other positions awarded were Elmer George, Indianapolis, 6th; Johnny Thomson, Boyertown, Pa., 7th; Pat Flaherty, Chicago, 8th; Jim Packard, Indianapolis, 9th, and A. J. Foyt, Houston, 10th.

Dick Rathman said Amick "lost it" coming out of the west turn, hit the guard rail and overturned.

Dick Rathman called the wreck the worst he ever saw in speedway competition. The front end of the Amick car was crumpled like a paper wad and both front wheels were torn off.

Eight guard rail posts were broken by the impact of Amick's car. The delay during repairs led USAC officials to shorten the second event to 50 miles.

Christie said he thought the accident was due to fatigue. He rated the Daytona track much more tiring than the flatter Indianapolis Speedway.

Tension Mounts at Augusta–It's No Place for Faint Hearts

AUGUSTA, Ga.—In rapid succession, three golfers who Saturday built up tension in the 23rd Masters tournament came into the club house to be grilled by reporters.

First there was Canadian Stan Leonard, who had repeated his opening 69 for a 212 total and the temporary 54-hole lead. Reporters vainly tried to persuade him to estimate what he would have to shoot today to hold his lead.

SARAZEN

"Arnold Palmer needs a birdie on the last three holes to tie you," someone broke in.

"Well, I guess the game is on," Leonard remarked, and pretty soon defending champion Palmer joined the group. He'd bagged the necessary birdie, a three on the 18th hole. Palmer, who had replaced Leonard as the second day leader, had scrambled to a 71 to match his rival's 212.

Leonard and Palmer had no more completed answering questions when Cary Middlecoff of the Diplomat Club joined the group. Middlecoff had done himself proud with a 34-34—68, four under par, for a 213 total.

Thus you can see that Gene Sarazen was correct with his earlier comment, "There seems to be more tension than ever in this Masters."

The Augusta National Course today will be no place for faint-hearted contestants, or spectators.

* * *

Even The Amateurs Are Contending

IT COULD BE the greatest finish in the history of this traditional tournament. It stands to reason the winner will be one of the top trio, but there is no guarantee. Charles Coe, the brilliant amateur from Oklahoma City, is only three strokes behind with his 215.

PATTON

Four pros and Billy Joe Patton, the popular Georgia amateur, are only four shots behind with their 216s. There could have been a bit of prophecy in Clifford Roberts posting a note reading, "In the event of a tie, there will be an 18-hole playoff Monday."

One problem could be in finding enough room for the players to make their shots. A crowd estimated between forty and fifty thousand roamed the hills and dales Saturday. They sold out the supply of 25,000 daily tickets at $5 each and had to drag out some unused ones from 1955.

Leonard Wants 'Wearing of Green'

LEONARD THOUGHT his 69 (35-34) was better than the one he produced Thursday. Certainly it was a more timely one.

"I hit 15 greens," he said, missing only the fifth, 16th and 18th. Stan's putter was his best friend. He required only 30 putts. "I'm tired," he said, "but I'd sure like to wear one of those green coats (symbolic of the Masters championship)."

LEONARD

Leonard thinks that winning the Greensboro Tournament two years ago changed the trend of his career. He'd blown that title six or seven times.

"I owe a lot to my wife for persuading me to keep on trying at Greensboro," said Leonard. "That tournament was important to me. When you blow one, it's hard to take."

Leonard was conservative only once Saturday, playing his tee shot to the 190-yard 16th, fronted by a pond, to the far right side of the green. "I'm afraid of the water," he said.

* * *

And Palmer Keeps On Scrambling

PALMER, WHO has had to scramble like mad for two days, made no secret of being displeased with his game. Once again he went to the practice area, explaining, "Before I teed off, I hit perfect iron shots. I couldn't do it on the course."

Your reporter saw several examples of Palmer's uncanny knack of getting out of trouble. On the third hole, he pushed his drive into the woody rough. He lined a five iron to the green and got a par.

"I wish someone would tell Arnold to be more careful, he's driving me crazy," a galleryite was overheard remarking. Palmer's putter, which he used only 29 times, helped offset his poor iron shots.

* * *

Middlecoff's Deuces Weren't Wild

MIDDLECOFF OPENED his comeback with birdies on the first and second holes. "I'd sure like to start the final round three-four," Cary said. "I wouldn't want to play that round over and I'd sure be willing to take my chances with another 68."

Middlecoff said he anticipated some low scoring Saturday because the elements were calmer and the boys had reached the stage where they had to make their moves.

Middlecoff

Deuces were helpful, not wild, for Cary Saturday. He scored three birdies on the par three holes. He played a four iron 35 feet past the pin on the fourth, dropped a six iron shot within 12 feet of the cup on the sixth and landed a six iron shot 12 feet from the pin on the 12th, one of the toughest of par threes. It is 155 yards and fronted by a brook.

Middlecoff suffered a bogey five on the seventh when he wedged his approach over the green. He escaped with a par five on the eighth after knocking his drive against a tree. He chipped it out with a seven and then played a two iron in front of the green.

Cary seemed confident Friday night when he told friends he felt he was going to have a good round.

Depressed, Behind Bars, Saxton Tries to Kill Self

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. —(AP) — Johnny Saxton, washed up as a prizefighter after holding the world welterweight championship twice, was ordered committed to a state hospital Saturday after he tried to hang himself in a jail cell.

The 28-year-old Negro boxer, who earned a quarter of a million dollars in the ring, landed in the police lockup early Saturday on a burglary charge.

Several hours later a patrolman found Saxton hanging in his cell, with his socks as a rope. He was cut down and taken to a hospital where doctors said there was no sign that asphyxiation had set in.

Saxton was returned to his cell and examined by two psychiatrists, Drs. Carl A. Surran and Frank B. Doggett. Dr. Doggett quoted Saxton as saying:

"If you keep me in this cell, I'll try to kill myself again."

The physicians said Saxton was depressed because he was not working and suffered from dementia praecox. The dictionary defines dementia praecox as a form of insanity "characterized by loss of interest in people and things and incoherence of thought and action."

The doctors recommended his commitment to a state hospital.

Saxton was picked up in a five and ten cent store early Saturday morning where he hid after the store closed at 5 p.m. Friday. He told the psychiatrists he knew he would get caught and wished he had run so the police could have shot him down.

The boxer was in tears during the interview with the doctors.

"He used the be a champ," Dr. Doggett said. "This life was just too much for him to get used to."

The boxer, a Newark native raised as an orphan in Brooklyn, N.Y., came to this resort to visit his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Earle.

Police said Saxton entered the store at 5 p.m. Friday. Around midnight, someone saw a light inside and notified police. They surrounded the store.

Officers said Saxton broke through the tin roof of the store, climbed out, and was captured. He was taken to headquarters in tears.

Also Get Anderson, Korchek

Marlins Eye Best Club, Get Burke, McDermott

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

The Miami Marlins made their first major acquisitions of the spring Saturday when they added Outfielder Leo Burke, Pitchers Mickey McDermott and John Anderson and Catcher Steve Korcheck to their roster.

Joe Ryan, Marlin general manager, completed the four separate deals after days of negotiations.

Burke, who is expected to fill Miami's big need for a right-handed power hitter, comes to the Marlins on option from the Baltimore Orioles.

Left-hander McDermott, the ex-major leaguer who posted a 1.86 earned run average in 92 innings with Miami a year ago, was purchased from the Detroit Tigers.

Anderson, a right-handed knuckleballer who spent part of last season with the Marlins, was sold to Miami by the Philadelphia Phillies.

And Korcheck, former football star at George Washington University, comes on option from the Washington Senators.

"We feel we've filled several important holes," said Ryan, "but we're not finished yet. There are still more deals in the works and we plan to field the best team we've ever had on opening night (April 14)."

The 24-year-old Burke, an ex-VPI halfback, has been tabbed by most observers as a future Oriole star. He had a .307 season at Knoxville in the South Atlantic League and was so outstanding in early spring drills that Paul Richards thought of keeping him on the Orioles' roster.

Burke, who led the Sally League in total bases, has a good throwing arm and possesses speed and power. He can play third base as well as the outfield.

The feats of McDermott are well known to Miami fans. After 10 years in the majors, he came to the Marlins last summer and pitched consistently good baseball.

McDermott, a Miamian, asked Ryan to do everything he could to acquire him when he learned the Tigers did not intend to recall him this spring. Ryan conferred with Rick Ferrell, Detroit general manager, and the deal was completed.

Sleeper of the four newcomers could be Anderson. The 26-year-old won only four of nine decisions here last year, but three of his losses were by one run and he had a 3.23 earned run average.

Korcheck spent the last two seasons in the service. He hit .283 at Chattanooga (Southern Association) in 1955.

'Shug' Admits '59 Plainsmen Likely to Roll

By JIMMY BURNS
Herald Sports Editor

AUGUSTA, Ga.—You meet leaders in other sports at the Masters Golf Tournament—like Ralph (Shug) Jordan, Auburn football coach, who candidly admitted his Plainsmen should be good again next fall.

Jordan, who spoke to Auburn Alumni here Friday night, says the Plainsmen have tremendous pride, which should inspire them in trying to match their past season, marred only by the 7-7 tie with Georgia Tech.

The Plainsmen invade Miami Oct. 23 for a game with Coach Andy Gustafson's Hurricanes and Jordan figures it will be a tough test.

"Gustafson will have an improved team," Jordan allowed. "I'm confident his new assistants will be of help and the University of Miami doesn't figure to have another bad season like 1958."

Last year when Jordan spoke here, his arch rival, Bear Bryant of Alabama, showed up at the Masters. The theory was Bear was checking on Jordan, who no doubt tried to line up some high school football players of the area. "I wouldn't be surprised if Bear scouts me again," said Jordan. "Bryant has done a good job of bringing Alabama back. Opponents again have respect for the Crimson tide, so it won't be able to sneak up on its foes."

Jordan is sympathetic to Coach Gustafson, who sends his Hurricanes against LSU at Baton Rouge in October.

"Coach Paul Dietzel has been saying he'll have another fine team," Jordan mused. "I saw his star halfback, Billy Cannon, in a track meet this spring and after one stride, he was going full speed. "I'm just happy we don't play the Tigers."

Auburn's spring practice, recently concluded, was highly satisfactory, Jordan conceded. He lost six regulars from his starting team. They were ends Jerry Wilson and Mike Simmons; Tackle Cleve Wester, Guard Frank Laruss; Quarterback Lloyd Nix and Left Halfback Tommy Lorino.

"I hope we'll be as good as we were last year," said Jordan. "Pride, as I mentioned, will play an important role. Our biggest concern is depth, and kicking is our number one weakness. I mean kicking in every phase — punting, extra points and kickoffs."

A step towards another great line is Jackie Burkett, who last year was chosen by the Football Coaches Association as All-America center. Burkett, a native of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., won numerous honors. Burkett calls defensive signals for the Plainsmen and will be a tough man for the Hurricanes to handle.

Alley 'Oops' Javelin To Record 270 Feet

AUSTIN, Tex. — (AP) — Giant Bill Alley of Kansas threw the javelin 270-feet, 1½-inches to better the American and collegiate records Saturday in headlining the Texas relays that produced six records and two record ties.

Alley's great toss, which brought him the vote as outstanding athlete of the meet, smashed 13-feet, ½-inch and was 1½-inches better than the American record.

Kansas and Texas tied for the championship of the university class with 58 points apiece. Lamar Tech won the college division with 42 points to 39 for favored East Texas State.

University class records included a pole vault of 14-feet, 8½-inches by Jim Graham of Oklahoma State and a mile relay of 3:10.3 by Texas.

In the College division, Texas A&I set a 3:13.5 standard in the mile relay. East Texas State did 41.0 in the 440-yard relay in the preliminaries, only to lose in the finals to a 42.0 by Texas A&I when John West pulled a muscle.

Did Gulfstream Play It Square With Public?

Troilus ran dead last in Saturday's Florida Derby.

Nobody said officially that the horse went lame. But Jockey Chris Rogers conceded afterward, "He was running so bad I would have pulled him up at the half-mile pole if it hadn't been a $100,000 race."

Troilus was the second betting choice — at $2.40 to $1 — of the small army that descended upon Gulfstream Park.

Doubtlessly many of these bettors were dismayed to learn late Saturday by rumor, radio, TV or early newspaper editions — or, perhaps, just this morning — that Troilus injured himself Friday by kicking a tendon.

Nobody told them before the Derby. Nobody knew, except track officials. They kept it to themselves until Saturday morning. That was too late for any transmission of the information to the majority of people going to the track.

Many bettors risked their money under the impression that Troilus had had no recent physical difficulty.

* * *

A Simple Duty

NO FAULT lies with Troilus' owner, Bayard Sharp, or Trainer Charley Peoples. The colt was treated Friday, then galloped Saturday morning and pronounced sound by a private veterinarian.

Sharp and Peoples put Troilus into the Florida Derby in good faith.

At least, though, the public had a right to know under what circumstances it was betting.

One Gulfstream official said it was not announced because "plenty of times a horse will have some trouble the day before a race, and run beautifully in the race." The official asked, "What if Troilus had won?"

Well and good. But by releasing the news, the track would have fulfilled its responsibility to the public which supports it.

* * *

The Right to Know

GULFSTREAM PARK has had a large part in extending South Florida's tourist season. It provides pleasure to many residents, and it contributes to employment in this area.

There is no assurance that Troilus would have won the race even if nothing had happened to him Friday.

But the public's right to know about such things as an injury to a horse before a race is indisputable.

That right was denied this weekend through suppression of information by Gulfstream Park.

Past Empty Winner's Circle Parades UM's Band of the Hour

. . . minutes later: a race, a win, and a happy crowd in the flowered horseshoe

By MEL DERRICK
Herald Sports Writer

This was the way it was (sort of, anyway) at Gulfstream Park Saturday as 24-246 improvers of the breed milled around Jimmy Donn's well-groomed track for the Florida Derly.

Sunshine and water skiers . . . Happy music and mournful bettors . . . Orchids and tomatoes lively hats and contended snores . . . horses and people.

And people.

"The only way to fight this crowd," sighed one of the nicer tomatoes, a blond in a pink dress, "is just to go home and watch the race on TV."

Nobody did.

* * *

BANDS BEGAN blaring around Gulfstream at 10 a.m., a time when most horse players were rousing for coffee and a look at the form. The morning music-making, by Caesar La Monaca's orchestra and Wally Moran's Dixieland band — and later by U-Miami's Band of the Hour — drew approximately 8,000 early risers.

Over 3,000 of them were waiting outside when the Gulfstream gates opened at 9 a.m.

* * *

IN CONTRAST with Gulfstream's rain-wrinkled opening day, Saturday was straight from the Chamber of Commerce. The only clouds were in misguided bettors' eyes.

Thousands forsook the grandstands for a chance to improve the breed in the sunny paddock area. A large mutuels board there kept them well informed.

One young man forsook even that. He slipped his shirt off, his orange Florida Derby hat down, and stretched out on the grass. Shortly, a snore joined the band music.

* * *

GULFSTREAM, striking to challenge the Kentucky Derby's "Run for the Roses" tradition, pushed forward its "Run for the Orchids" motto in $1,000 fashion. That was the going price on the horseshoe-shaped orchid neckpirce presented to winner Easy Spur.

* * *

ALL the horses didn't fly Saturday, but one member of Dick Pope's Cypress Gardens water ski troupe did. Hanging under a tremendous kite and towed by a motorboat, he soared above the infield lake as things warmed up for the big race.

He attracted less attention than visitor Lily St. Cyr did just by walking about the club house area.

* * *

THE MUTUEL take for the track, as expected, was Gulfstream's best ever for an April date. For the fans . . .

"There's nothing more disgusting," said one, stripping apart a handful of tickets after Easy Spur beat Sword Dancer in that driving finish, "than to see two horses fighting it out at the end when you don't have either one."

Hartack Had Bag of Wind In Easy Spur

Chris Rogers was crestfallen after his last-place trip aboard Troilus, the $2.40-to-$1 second choice.

"I didn't even know until this morning that he had hurt himself in his stall Friday," Rogers said. "They put bandages on him today, and he felt okay when we warmed up. I was hoping and praying he'd be all right but he was running dinky as early as a half-mile and just didnt respond."

Kelley, Easy Spur's trainer, declined comment on any effect the Friday injury might have had on Troilus' performance. He had plenty to occupy him — all of it happy.

"I figured we had it made when they came through the stretch," said Kelley.

Asked if his confidence in the colt ever wavered during an erratic early-winter period, Kelley shook his head. "You don't quit on a horse with this much speed," he said.

Kelley had to do most of the hand-shaking for Spring Holl Farm. James D. Norris, the Coral Gables resident who owns Easy Spur, wasn't there to see his stable's first $100,000 success.

Norris was in Chicago for his Chicago Black Hawks' do-or-die Saturday night Stanley Cup hockey stand against Montreal.

Easy Spur Wins Florida Derby In Last Strides and was not persevered with when obviously a beaten horse.

Easy Spur broke alertly and was much closer to the pace than usual, going smoothly into third position down the backstretch.

At the far turn Sword Dancer put Master Palynch away with authority and darted into a three-length lead. Hartack, regarding Sword Dancer as strictly the horse to beat, moved quickly with Easy Spur.

Boulmetis saved ground on the rail turning for home while Hartack took Easy Spur out toward the middle of the track for the drive. Spring Hill Trainer Paul Kelley had ordered Hartack to avoid the inner rail, believing the going was better on the outside.

Sword Dancer reached the eighth pole still two lenghts on top. However, Easy Spur began to gain slowly but steadily at the sixteenth pole and passed the game but tiring Sword Dancer 40 yards from the wire to triumph going away.

Some observers have expressed the view that Easy Spur is not bred for the classic distances, but he gave every evidence Saturday that he can handle at least a mile and a quarter.

Saturday's crowd bet $1,856,557, largest April handle in Gulfstream's history. Last year Derby Day was on March 29 and 25,449 fans wagered $1,881,609.

Tillman Sets Hialeah Mark

Herb Tillman scored a grand-slam, including the modified feature, and set a one-lap record Saturday night at Hialeah Speedway.

Tillman edged Gene Winn and Bruce Griffin in the feature. He posted a 19.10 lap record. Winning the sportsmen race was Bob Brack. Bob Masey and Ed Buyama trailed.

Barons Win As Tempers Explode

HERSHEY, Pa. —(AP)— The Cleveland Barons evened the semifinals of the American Hockey League Calder Cup playoffs at 2-2 Saturday night with a 2-0 victory over the Hershey Bears in a game capped by an eight-minute melee in which nine players were penzalized.

With 30 seconds left in the final period, Bob Perreault skated from the Hershey net and headed towards the bench. He was checked by Bill Shevtz, the Baron's left winger. The two-man clash produced instant bedlam on the ice.

Within seconds, every member of both teams and the officials were piled in a struggling mass of men, hockey sticks and equipment. It took eight minutes to restore order.

Nine men, four from the Barons and five from the Bears, were sent to the showers.

Nassau Golf Deadlocked

NASSAU, Bahamas —(AP)— Miami golfers were knotted in the lead of the 10th annual Bahamas Country Club Invitation tournament Saturday in the opening round.

William B. MacDonald and Dan Miller, both of LaGorce Country Club, and George Farrell of Riviera Country Club were in one three-man best ball team that scored a 59. A matching card was turned in by Allen Minter and Pete Smiley of LaGorce and George Davis of Nassau.

The final round is today.

Leonard Fires 69, Locks Palmer for Masters Lead

Snead, who have accounted for five Masters titles between them, shot their way out early.

Playing together in a grim reminder of their playoff for the Masters title five years ago, Snead scrambled to a 72, even par for the 6,980 yard Augusta National course, leaving him seven strokes behind.

Hogan, putting uncertainly on the front nine, came in with 76 for a 223 total.

Billy Joe Patton broke par with a 71 and tied with four seasoned pros at 216. They were Fred Hawkins, who came from far behind with a third round 68, Billy Maxwell, a 72 shooter Saturday, and Walter Burkemo and Jack Fleck, who had 71s.

It took something better than par on this still, sunny day to break up the scoring jam that existed at the halfway point of the tournament.

Coe's 67 was the best, but he had been seven strokes behind Palmer when the round started. Playing steadily all the way, the lean Oklahoma amateur finished with birdies on the 13th, 15th, 17th and 18th holes.

"I've been swinging real well and I'll surely be in there trying," he said.

No amateur ever has won the Masters although on a couple of occasions Patton and Ken Venturi gave the pros the shakes.

It was Leonard's 69, bringing him from two strokes behind, after he blew his first day lead, that set the stage for the day's drama. He had a 35 on the front nine with two birdies and a bogey, and picked up another stroke at the tricky 11th where his 3-iron shot drifted in 2½ feet from the pin.

On the 15th, a 520-yard water hole, his 4-wood approach went into the crowd at the back of the green and stopped. He lagged up a long putt and sank the next for the birdie.

'Facts' Fade, But—

Bible Still First Base For Pepper

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

A weary man with high cheekbones, a long crooked nose and a pointed chin sat in a cocktail lounge munching an apple. All about him, people were drinking and talking.

"What's your ambition, Pepper?" someone asked.

"Ambition?" John Leonard Martin looked up, surprised by the question. "My ambition is to go to heaven."

STORIN

There was a snicker. "You wanna play a harp, too?" the questioner asked.

There was a brief silence. Pepper, bellicose member of the memorable St. Louis Cardinal Gashouse Gang, stopped chewing his apple.

"Mister," he snapped, "I don't think that's funny."

Martin, a sensitive, forthright, kindly man of 55 years, recalled this incident of a dozen years ago as he puffed on his pipe in the Miami Marlins' clubhouse.

It seems it has been ever thus for Pepper. And he's more than somewhat tired of playing the role of the "strange, eccentric clown." He firmly denies any resemblance to such a character.

"Because I come from Oklahoma," surmises Martin, "people seem to think that makes me something to laugh at—an illiterate Okie with a mattress on top of my car.

"I've always managed to pay my way. I raced midget autos, played football for a chiropractors' college, owned a fighter, drove a tractor, played in a band, raised goldfish and cattle and gave my best in baseball for more than 35 years.

"I got by. Damon Runyon, Grantland Rice and all the rest said I was one of the greatest base runners of all time. Yep, I always managed to pull my weight.

"All I've got to say," he went on, "is that if there's anything wrong in reading the Bible and believing what's in it . . . if there's anything wrong in a man's wanting to live the life of a rancher . . . if there's anything wrong in managing a baseball team . . . if there's anything wrong about wanting to go to heaven when you die . . . then I'm afraid life isn't worth living."

A Bouncing Boy

IT TOOK the Wild Hoss of the Osage nearly 10 years to make the big leagues for keeps. Along the way, he played every position except catcher, developed his never-to-be-forgotten belly slide and picked up the name Pepper.

"When the Cards bought my contract in 1925," he explains, "they sent me to Fort Smith, Arkansas. The owner of the team heard how I liked to bounce around. So he told the newspapers that a new player named Pepper Martin was joining the club.

"From then on everybody called me Pepper."

Although he hit an even .300 in 128 games in 1931 (his first full season in the majors), Martin was a relatively unknown when the Series between the Cards and Philadelphia Athletics rolled around.

"I feel like a kid with a little red wagon," said Pepper before the autumn classic began. When it was over he had tied a record with 12 hits (.500 average) and had stolen five bases off Mickey Cochrane, the A's Hall of Fame catcher.

Later he asked Catcher Gabby Street, "Ain't I the same guy I was before the series? Then how come they want to pay me $1,500 a week as a vaudeville man? I'm a ball player, not an actor . . . I don't want to cheat anyone."

* * *

It Just Isn't So

ALTHOUGH the Gashouse Gang began to take shape in 1931, it wasn't until 1934 that it reached full bloom.

As Pepper recalls . . .

"It came to pass in 1934 that we were on the road 28 straight days. Our uniforms were torn and filthy when we hit New York.

"Besides, we were a noisy and boisterous bunch on the bench. There was Dizzy Dean, Rip Collins, Joe Medwick, Durocher, Bill DeLancey and the manager, Frankie Frisch.

"Anyway we beat the Giants three out of four games and Frank Graham wrote in his column: 'the Gashouse Gang from St. Louis whipped the Giants . . .' the name stuck."

Pepper Martin, '34 Pepper Martin, '59
. . . ambition unchanged: 'want to go to Heaven'

Stories about the Gashouse Gang through the years have become more fiction than fact, according to Pepper.

"I guess," he said, "I've committed more sins than most . . . I ought to be ashamed of myself for admitting any of them. But truthfully I didn't do half the carrying on I've been given credit for.

"Growing a six-day beard during a winning streak . . . yes, I did that. Throwing ice water on people from hotel windows, I did that, too.

"But," he stressed, "I never gave a sliding exhibition in any hotel lobby and I never had much trouble with umpires . . . except that time I almost choked that fellow down there in Havana when I managed the Sun Sox.

A Sport In Our Town

"For years I've been accused of throwing a bucket of water on Frisch's head as he and a newspaperman walked down a street in front of our hotel. I didn't do that, either."

What about the choking incident in Havana?

"That umpire," explained Pepper, "was wrong, awful wrong. He missed four straight close plays . . . called them all against us.

"Then he tossed Knobby Rosa out of the game and told me I had one minute to get him off the field or he'd forfeit the game. I blew my top, grabbed the ump by the throat and started to squeeze.

"Then, I said to myself, 'Lord, what am I doing?' and let go. For a minute there I was going to kill the so-and-so."

* * *

'Next to Ty Cobb'

RECORDS don't show it but Martin feels he ranks next to Ty Cobb as a base runner.

"My trouble as far as records go," he figures, "was that I wasn't permitted to steal enough. One year I stole 22 bases in 23 tries . . . and I should have been called safe the other time, too."

Pepper credits his wife, Ruby, a gentle woman with a lovely smile, for his amazing command of the English language.

"My high schooling was confined to two football seasons," he admits. "Then I met Ruby and we eloped the day she turned 18. She inspired me to read the Bible and other good books.

"I can use those big words. I know what they mean in my mind, but don't ask me to define them . . . might have trouble."

Now that their three daughters have grown up—two are married and one is in college—the Martins live a quiet, full life on their ranch in Oklahoma.

"I usually eat my Wheaties and go to bed around 9 o'clock," said Pepper. "Of course these night games are going to foul up this schedule. I'm liable to fall asleep out at the Stadium some night.

"Then," he concluded, "everybody will say that clown is at it again."

A Stitch in 10 Will Get Me In

Pared-Down Beecham Aims at Welters, TV

By MEL DERRICK
Herald Sports Writer

Miami's Jimmy Beecham, reader of good books, lover of progessive jazz, dresser of note and middleweight boxer of late, paused, smiled, and began to tick off reasons why he's switching from middleweight to welterweight ring foes.

He got as far as one.

"To win," said Beecham. "I think I can win consistantly as a welter. That just about wraps up the reasons."

Beecham, who muscles back into the welterweight class Tuesday night against ninth-ranked Rudell Stitch at the Beach, traded on even terms with the best during his two-year run as a middleweight. Twice he climbed into the top ten rankings; once he shoved up to ninth place.

"But those 'middleweights' I was fighting," he said. "They were just trained-down light heavies. They'd weigh in at 160-161, then actually come at 165. I was giving away too much reach, height and poundage.

"You get tired of that win-one, lose-one, win-one routine. So you just take stock of the situation and say, 'Well, now, let me take off this excess baggage and see what happens.'"

Beecham has no worry over sapping his strength by paring down to the 150-pound limit stipulated in his contract with Stitch. Neither does he worry too much about Stitch's ranking and probable favoritism in the non-televised fight.

"I'm down to 151½ now," he said. "I've hit 150 in the gym in the past — actually had to put on weight to stay with the middleweights — and I've never felt weak.

"Sure, it's been two years since I fought at 150, but I've always been strong. My strength was what took me through against those middleweights.

"Stitch? I saw him on TV against (Gaspar) Ortega. He's a tough fighter, a pretty fair puncher. But I think I've been traveling in a little better class."

BEECHAM

BEECHAM, who generally fights his best against the best, figures a victory Tuesday could be worth (1) a slot in the welter rankings and (2) a TV shot . . . He could be right . . . Stitch is an elder in the Presbyterian Church now, but back in his youth he used to pilfer old railroad ties for wood to burn in the family fireplace. "Learned how to box by fighting other kids for the ties," he grins . . . Gomeo Brennan, scheduled to fight the 10-round semiwindup on last week's Carmen Basilio-Arley Seifer card in Augusta, had to pull out when he sprained an ankle the day before the match. Nothing serious, but he's waiting awhile to resume training . . . Joe Netro, co-manager of Basilio, reports the fight (with a $12 top) drew a net gate of $13,590. Netro also postcards praise for Miami Beach's Eddie Coachman, who refereed the hassle . . . Boxing is booming in Havana, where Florentino Fernandez and Urtiminio Ramos drew a $17,000-plus gate last week despite tickets scaled as low as 85 cents. Fernandez chilled Ramos in the second round for his 15th straight knockout. Angelo Dundee, on a one-man mission to convince Fernandez he should fight in Miami Beach, reports over 4,000 were turned away from the Sports Palace feature.

CASEY'S BONNET: Casey Stengel, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, sits in a Sarasota dugout wearing a new spring creation—a straw hat decked out with a rah-rah pennant, crossed bats and a small figure of a baseball player swinging a bat on its brim. Stengel showed up at the park Saturday in his bonnet and said it was given him when the team was playing in Miami last week.

Oriole Lefty Cinch to Open Season

Harshman Stifles Cards In 'Prep for President'

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

Jack Harshman is ready to match arms with President Eisenhower.

The 31-year-old southpaw, who once aspired to be a big league first baseman, virtually sewed up Baltimore's opening day pitching assignment Saturday night. He did it with a neat seven-inning mound chore as the Orioles clipped St. Louis, 5-2.

There's a special honor that goes with that first day job this year. The Orioles will be meeting Washington Thursday with Ike tossing out the first ball.

If Harshman has the same stuff he had Saturday night at the Stadium, Mr. Eisenhower, a Senator fan, isn't likely to enjoy himself.

Harshman mowed down the Cards on one run and six hits before giving way to another veteran, Hoyt Wilhelm. And St. Louis shouldn't have had that one run.

Bobby Avila, an infielder playing the outfield to give the Orioles a little more batting punch was responsible for the first inning run.

The 32-year-old Mexican played leadoffer Don Blasingame's routine fly to right field into a first inning triple.

Two outs later, an oldtimer named Stan Musial uncoiled on a Harshman fast ball and sent it whipping into center field for a single, scoring Blasingame.

Thereafter Harshman had only one critical moment. That came in the seventh inning when Pinch-hitter Ray Jablonski doubled to set up the night's big play.

Lee Tate, running for Jabbo, tried to score a tying run as Joe Cunningham hit one through the middle. Ronnie Hansen, the O's slick-fielding shortstop, cruised to the right side of second base, made the stop and tossed a strike to the plate to nail Tate by 10 feet.

Hansen's maneuver must have reminded Musial of an old teammate, Marty Marion. It was that good.

The victory sent the Orioles into this afternoon's Miami Grapefruit League final with a 14-8 record. Connie Johnson will pitch against Cardinal Rookie Bob Gibson in the 2 o'clock contest.

Baltimore was out-hit, 8-7, Saturday night. But the Orioles were able to bunch their hits off Ernie Broglio and Phil Clark, two St. Louis yearling pitchers.

The O's gained a tie in the third inning when Harshman tripled and trotted home as Cunningham dropped Avila's liner to right. Bob Boyd's double, a wild pitch and Bob Nieman's long fly put Baltimore in the van once and for all in the fifth inning.

Despite the presence of Musial, who looks fit for another big year whether he plays left field or first base, the game attracted only 1,978.

Big Leagues Off and Running With Two Openers on Thursday

NEW YORK — (AP) — Baseball beats the gun Thursday with its earliest start ever after the greatest player shuffle since the end of World War II.

Once again the New York Yankees and Milwaukee Braves are favored to meet in the World Series although the going may be tougher in each league.

Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and possibly even Boston may test the Yankees. San Francisco and Pittsburgh generally are counted upon to press Milwaukee with some support for Cincinnati's new power.

The old cry "you can't tell the players without a scorecard" really is true this time. Such established major leaguers as Frank Thomas, Jimmy Piersall, Billy Martin, Eddie Yost, Vic Wertz, Sad Sam Jones, Del Ennis, Ruben Gomez, Wally Moon and the bullpen pair of Ray Narleski and Don Mossi will be wearing new uniforms.

Two new managers — Mayo Smith at Cincinnati and Solly Hemus at St. Louis — will do the master-minding. Eddie Sawyer at Philadelphia, Joe Gordon of Cleveland, and Bill Norman of Detroit will be starting their first full seasons on the job.

Owners are gambling with the weather in starting four days earlier than usual. Their bonus is an extra weekend that could be profitable both at the gate and on the network television series. As usual, the season will end on the last Sunday in September. There will be a few extra open Mondays. The nine-game Thursday-Friday opening program probably will attract about 270,000 fans.

The Thursday schedule calls for only two games. In the ceremonial opener at Washington, President Eisenhower may throw out the first ball before Cookie Lavagetto's Senators take on the Baltimore Orioles. Lavagetto said he would use Pedro Ramos, the rubber-armed Cuban, as his pitcher and not Billy Loes, acquired in a trade with the Orioles Wednesday.

The other Thursday game will be played in Cincinnati with the dashing Pittsburgh Pirates as the guests. This game provides a first hand check for one of the big deals of the winter that brought Frank Thomas to the Reds and sent Don Hoak, Smoky Burgess and Harvey Haddix to the Pirates. The Reds have a fine-looking young centerfielder in Vada Pinson and a promising rookie pitcher in Jim O'Toole.

Ramsey, Jones Key Attack

Celtics Nip Hot Lakers

BOSTON — (AP) — Boston turned to its bench strength for a pulsating 118-115 comeback National Basketball Association playoff victory over Minneapolis Saturday with Kentucky fireman Frank Ramsey and sharpshooter Sam Jones in key roles.

The Celtics took a 1-0 lead in the best of seven championship series as they defeated the Lakers for the 19th consecutive time.

Through the efforts of rookie of the year Elgin Baylor who scored 34 points and 10 year league veteran Vern Mikkelsen who added 23, the Lakers stormed back from a 12-point halftime deficit to battle Boston to the wire.

It took a pair of free throws by Ramsey and some fancy dribbling by Jones to eke out the decision despite the fact a late spurt carried the home team to a 115-103 bulge.

FSU Netters Defeat UF

GAINESVILLE —(P)— Florida State continued its sports domination over Florida with a 6-3 victory in tennis Saturday.

The only athletic competition between the state rivals which has gone to Florida this school year is football. The Gators beat FSU's Seminoles, 21-7, last Nov. 22.

Since then FSU has defeated Florida in basketball, swimming twice, golf, baseball and tennis twice.

By DICK EVANS
Herald Sports Writer

Six local bowling teams will compete in the WIBC at Buffalo next month.

Headed for the "big tent" are Pete's Hotpoing Floridians, Springs Villas, Bowlerama, Coliseum, Ann's Beauty Studio and the Nassau Development Co.

The Floridians also will compete in a special match game in New York and in the National Doubles tournament at Queens.

YOU'D have to go a long way to find better bowling than displayed this year in the Sheehan South Florida Classic at Bird Bowl.

John Durr (205), Bob White (203), Bill Barrett (203), Doc Kerr (203), Len Springmeyer (203) and George Nenezian (202) are averaging above 200 entering the stretch run. Elliott Brandon, Stan Gurwitz, Joe Robitaille and Jim Chesnutt are only a pin shy of 200.

The 3,216 state record turned in Thursday night by Pabst is just another of the league's many crowns.

* * *

HARRY RICH, F & G Construction and Greenthistle finished 1-2-3 in the Metro All-Star league. Bill Barrett (197.50) and Earl McNab (197.04) paced the averages.

* * *

AN INTERESTING question was brought up when the Metro All-Star League announced it would move from Bowland to Hialeah lanes.

If a bowling house organizes a league, does it remain the property of the establishment or bowlers?

This doesn't apply to a trade or club league like the Women of the Moose which will move from Playdium to Cutler Ridge next season.

THE ELECTRICIANS and Plumbers will meet in a special tournament today at Paradise. The sanctioned handicap tournament will involve the top 16 teams from each league . . . Bob Steadman posted a 201 game two weeks ago—his highest in history. Last week Bob rolled a 235 in the Hialeah Employes League . . . Eva Hicks converted the 7-9-10 split in the Clovergals' League . . . Pauline Stickler rolled a 587 in the South Dade All-Star action at Bowl-O-Mat . . . Tex Mannings' 192 average leads the PAA League at Bowlerama . . . John Metzger is averaging an amazing 222 in the Central Boulevard Scratch League at the Palace.

ETHEL COOPER received quite an ovation after converting the 7-9-10 split in the Bird Bowl Classic League . . . Evelyn Fields converted the equally rugged 8-10 in the Major League at Coliseum . . . Don't be surprised when 210 is established as the new handicap figure for men's tournaments . . . A Cloverleaf bowling ball, neatly painted green, showed up at Coliseum last week . . . Julia McGlothlin, a 69-year-old, has been bowling only one year. She's averaging 106 in the Early Birds League at Bowlerama . . . Cora Babcock bowled a 242 and 580 in the PAA League at Playdium . . . Carl Gustafson (173.68) and Art Kraft (173.73) are battling for the Hialeah Employees average leadership.

Key West Turns Back Southwest

KEY WEST — Mike Hughes, a junior righthander, struck out 14 and scattered three hits as Key West's Conchs beat Southwest High, 5-3, Saturday night.

Three errors in the first inning led to three Southwest runs, most scored against Key West this season.

Freshman Carl Taylor, who pitched a one-hitter against Coral Gables earlier this season, hit a two-run homer in the first inning as an outfielder. Ronnie Young got two singles for the Conchs.

Tampa Rips Amherst

TAMPA — (P) — The University of Tampa baseball team jumped on two Amherst pitchers for seven runs in a big first inning and coasted on the cushion to a 9-4 victory Saturday. Bill Rouse, Tampa's first batter, hit a home run. Manuel Perez hit a grand slam blast later in the inning.

Rockne Memorial

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — (UPI) — Bill Cerney, a reserve back who was known as the "Fifth Horseman" behind the famed "Four Horsemen" on Notre Dame's 1924 football team, will be the main speaker Sunday at the 28th Knute Rockne memorial breakfast.

Chisox Pick Sarasota For Training Camp

TAMPA — (P) — The Chicago White Sox Saturday announced plans to move their spring training baseball headquarters to Sarasota, effective in 1960.

A statement on the move from Tampa came from Charles A. Comiskey, vice president of the White Sox.

He said through Ed Short, the club's publicity director, that public apathy necessitated the move.

Comiskey said no contract had been signed with Sarasota officials but that an agreement had been reached on a five-year basis.

"We are not mad at anybody," Comiskey said. "If we could have drawn just a few more people, I don't think the move ever would have come about."

McClain, Vollenweider 'Hot Prospects'

New Faces Spice Rugged UM Football Session

By DICK EVANS
Herald Sports Writer

It was the same old play (spring football) Saturday on the same old stage (University of Miami field) with the same old director (Andy Gustafson.)

But the horde of new leading men were performing from a new script with new desire.

William McClain had a starring role on this 12th day of spring practice. The 6-1 quarterback repeatedly hit his targets, in the Hurricanes' first actual game-type scrimmage.

James Vollenweider is possibly the toughest hombre since Wyatt Earp. The 190-pound sophomore halfback from Schofield, Wisc., possesses devastating power.

Two plays after having the wind knocked out of him, Vollenweider battered three crushing yards for the game's fourth touchdown.

Sophomore Ends Frank Reinhart (200) and Bill Miller (175) left little to be desired. Gus, however, must find someone who can block Reinhart if he hopes to keep Green team Quarterback Theron Mitchell alive. Reinhart repeatedly tossed Mitchell for embarrassing losses.

There were other fine performances turned in by newcomers:

Halfbacks Lee Wrinkle and James Bruno know how to catch a football, Fullback Bill Diamond can run, Bill Brickman is a coming center, halfbacks John Ellis, Don Prosser and Larry Shook can shake a mean hip; End Larry Wilson gives football that extra mile; and Alden Herter (Honolulu) and Stan Markowski look like strong punters.

This doesn't mean, however, that such old leaning posts as quarterbacks Fran Curci and Mitchell, halfback Bob Rosbaugh, Larry DiGiammarino and Doug Davis are throwing in the sponge. They were the big guns in the first two (White) teams' 31-0 scrimmage victory.

"We're just trying to find the personnel for two good solid teams," the conservative Gus said following the two and half hour slamming. "We'd like to find maybe two and a half teams . . . but we can't hope for any more."

Gus, working atop his Gusmobile while the camera crew worked from a nearby building, shouted both praise and criticism at his athletes. "Now you're working like a team," he would shout. "That's a pathetic effort" followed.

As a whole, however, Gus thought it was a good workout.

"They did a good job with a whole new offense," he said. "I liked both their effort and attitude."

Curci and Rosbaugh hooked up on a seven-yard toss for the White's opening touchdown. Alfred Dangel, Lou Groza's field goal protege, hit two for four on extra points.

McClain sighted DiGiammarino with a 28-yard toss to make it 12-0. Curci's 40-yard pitch to End Jack Herman set the stage for Frank Bouffard's two-yard buck for touchdown No. 3.

Shook shook loose for 65 yards on a punt return and the "shooked up" Vollenweider crashed over for the fourth score. The workout ended while Rosbaugh, behind a beautiful fake by Curci, sailed 50 touchdown yards with a pitchout.

End Frank Wilson fractured his wrist and probably will miss the remaining eight days of spring practice. Guard Larry Babb limped from the workout on a reinjured left leg.

A Coral Gables Swimming Association medley relay team broke the Junior National record Saturday night in the Metro-Miami International Swim Regatta at Curtis Park Pool.

The Gables "A" team—composed of Dave Disspain, Roy Rohe, Jim Fitzgibbons and John Bernard—swam the 200 yards in one minute, 51 seconds, slicing a full second off the old record.

PREP PICKUPS

By Ray Crawford and Dick Evans

Don't Forget the Vaulters, They're Part of the Meet

Pity the poor ol' pole vaulters. They are the lonliest men at a high school track meet.

Long after the glamorous dashmen, the big-bicepped shot and discus throwers and the long-striding distance runners have showered and dressed, the pole vaulters are doggedly working at their trade.

In the three big prep meets here this year — the Miami High Relays, the University of Miami High School meet and the Coral Gables Invitational — pole vault competition lasted until nearly midnight.

By the time this muscle-tearing event reaches the showdown jumps, the crowd has gone home, scorekeepers are impatient and meet officials conducting the pole vault are irritable.

For instance, at last Friday's Gables invitational, the meet's outcome hinged on the pole vault. Edison led North Miami, 47¼ to 47 points through all other events.

Two jumpers had cleared 12 feet and Edison's Ronnie Lester was preparing to try this height. He made one trial run, then walked off the running strip to rub some grip compound on his hands.

"Come on and jump, Lester, you're holding up eight others," an official yelled. Lester eventually won the jump at 12 feet, 6 inches to cinch Edison's first place, but the only witnesses were the other jumpers and a few lingering coaches.

Wouldn't it be better for spectators and competitors if the pole vault were started in the afternoon? After all, the pole vault is one of track's most interesting events.

Broward's Wright Still Unbeaten

SOUTH BROWARD'S Alan Wright continues to rack everybody in the 100 and 220 yard dashes. The defending state champ, who turned in several 9.7 times last year, hasn't reached that figure this year, but he still is unbeaten.

Wright got off to a bad start in the Gables Invitational 100 yard dash, but his 10 seconds effort was good enough for a meet record.

Worried Himself Out of Victory

WORRYING COST Winter Haven's crack miler, Jack Blair, a chance to win the Gables Invitational event. His coach explained, after Myers failed to finish in the first five, that Myers sometimes tensed-up from worrying. "He could be best in the state," Coach Ausley said.

"He can run 4:37 with no strain," said a teammate, "but all he talked about during the drive over here was how nervous he felt."

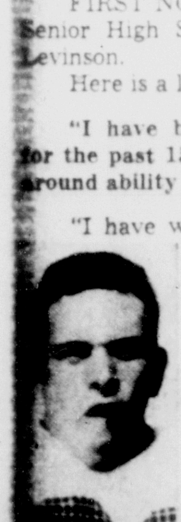
Beach's Levinson Boosted

FIRST NOMINATION for The Herald's 1959 Outstanding Senior High School Athlete award is Miami Beach's Barry Levinson.

Here is a letter from a former athlete lauding Levinson:

"I have been watching high school players in the area for the past 15 years and I have yet to see a boy with the all around ability of Barry Levinson.

"I have watched this boy play football, baseball and run track. If he were on a Big 10 school he would be the most outstanding athlete in the state . . .



LEVINSON

"He runs a 10.1 hundred in track and never puts on a pair of track shoes to practice because he is too interested in baseball. I hear he is a professional prospect. In baseball there is not one in the city who can compare with him. In football he has the longest touchdown runs in the city and of eight touchdowns, he scored six over 60 yards. If that isn't a great feat with the type team he was playing with, what is?

"Barry is polite, modest and a definite am man . . . he has my vote as the greatest high school layer in this area."

Collegians Win, 88-80

LOUISVILLE —(AP)— The lege All-Stars turned back chita, 88-80, Saturday night wrap up the championship the Pan-American basket trials.

The All-Stars, only undefeat team in the three nights of , earned the right to place and no more than seven of its men on the 20 man squad that will train for the Pan-Am Games in Chicago in late August.

The remaining players will be picked from other teams which took part in the trials here. Oscar Robertson, Jerry West and John Green, were the powerhouses for the All-Stars.

Rose, McKinney Rack Records As AAU Swimming Meet Closes

NEW HAVEN, Conn. —(AP)— Murray Rose and Frank McKinney, Olympians in 1956, murdered American and meet records Saturday night as the three-day National AAU indoor swimming and diving championship reached a peak ending.

Rose, a Southern California sophomore from Australia, scored a triple by winning the 440-yard freestyle in 4:18.8, chopping 2.8 seconds off his previous mark. He had already won the 1,500 meter and 220-yard freestyles.

McKinney, Indiana Sophomore from Indianapolis, retained his 220-yard backstroke crown in 2:16.1, knocking eight-tenths of a second off his former record.

Joe Hunsaker, Illinois junior, broke the American mark in the 200-yard medley, a new event in this meet. His time of 2:07 improved on the 2:07.5 registered in 1956 by Al Wiggins, Ohio State.

Southern California, paced by Rose, easily won the team title.

Eclipsed by the savage assault on records was the winning of a second gold medal by Norbert Rumpel, Southern Illinois University. He captured the 100-yard breaststroke Saturday night to go with his 100-yard breaststroke title.

Lance Larson, Southern Cal freshman, successfully defended his 100-yard sprint championship in :49.2. Frank Legacki, Michigan sophomore, won 100-yard butterfly in :53.6.

Michigan's Josef Gerlach won the three-meter dive, scoring 505.7 points. The meet ended with New Haven Swim Club's successful defense of its 400-yard medley relay title.

Canadiens Subdue Hawks, 5-4

CHICAGO —(AP)— Claude Provost's goal with less than a minute and half to play carried the Montreal Canadiens to a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks Saturday night and earned the defending world hockey champions a berth in the Stanley Cup finals.

The crowd of 18,521 — second only to the 20,004 who packed Chicago Stadium in a regular season game in 1947 — held up play for about 15 minutes by tossing debris on the ice. Two infuriated fans dashed onto the the ice and took swings at Referee Red Storey after Montreal's fifth goal.

This display preceeded a roaring chant of "we want Storey." Several fights broke out in the stands behind the Montreal bench.

The Canadiens, gunning for an unprecedented fourth straight title, will meet the winners of the Boston-Toronto series for the championship round which opens in Montreal Thursday.

Provost's goal, his second of the night, came on assists from Don Marshall and Phil Goyette, exactly four minutes after Ted Lindsay pulled Chicago into a 4-4 tie at 14:32 of the final period.

Cup Playoffs Go to Limit

Courageous Bruins Nip Rough Maple Leafs, 5-4

TORONTO —(AP)— The Boston Bruins survived a rash of second period injuries and beat back a dramatic comeback by the Toronto Maple Leafs Saturday night to defeat the Leafs, 5-4, and send their National Hockey League Stanley Cup semi-final series to the seven-game limit. The final game will be played in Boston Tuesday.

Bronco Horvath, star center on the Bruins' most destructive line with Johnny Bucyk and Vic Stasiuk, scored the winning goal at 12:56 of the third period, putting out the Leaf fire when Toronto seemed headed for victory and an end to the series.

Bruin rearguard Jim Morrison caught a shot in the mouth. Blood was gushing from a slashed upper lip as he went off for repairs, returning in a matter of minutes. Fifteen stitches were needed to close the cut.

Boston defenseman Bob Armstrong pulled a groin muscle, but he carried on. Toppazzini may be a doubtful starter Tuesday.

Horvath's goal, which stunned the Leafs and the 13,819 customers, was set up beautifully by defenseman Leo Boivin. He carried the puck into the Leaf end zone, passed 40 feet across the ice to Horvath and the 170-pound center fired a hard shot behind Leaf netminder Johnny Bower.

Cesta Series Playoff Set For Monday

The jai alai world series final at the Miami fronton, originally scheduled Tuesday, has been postponed until Wednesday to allow for a special Monday night playoff of a second place tie.

The U.S. team of Guara-Guarita won the final elimination round to pull out of a three-way deadlock for third and tie the second-place Spanish team of Piston I-Azpiri, which failed to score a point.

Guara-Guarita and Piston I-Azpiri will meet in a 15-point partido at 7:30 p.m. Monday, and the winner will play the Italian team of Echeverria-Churruca for the Championship Wednesday.

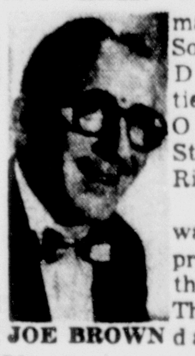
Beach Race 'Open'

By JOE BROWN
Herald Greyhound Writer

The 29th running of the Tex Rickard Memorial, scheduled Monday night at Miami Beach Kennel club, may be one of the most even races of all.



JOE BROWN

Qualifiers for the Rickard race include Colebrook, Jarmaine, Dixie's Son, Rocky's Dream, Bettie Bess, Will O'Wisp, Big Stick and San Ring.

Bettie Bess was the "surprise dog" in the eliminations. The flashy daughter of Mar Heat — Bettie Mohegan captured her heat by beating Will O'Wisp. This was the first time Bettie Bess had traveled the 2,166-foot Rickard marathon route.

Colebrook, third choice in his trials, won over the heavily favored Jarmaine by one length and his performance stamps him a strong threat in the big race Monday.

Starters and seasonal records: Bettie Bess, 26-12-3-5; Will O'Wisp, 25-7-6-7; Big Stick, 23-6-3-3; San Ring, 21-4-6-2; Colebrook, 27-8-5-5; Jarmaine, 16-3-5-3; Dixie's Son, 26-6-3-5; and Rocky's Dream, 21-5-1-3.

And these dogs will meet in the Rickard Consolation Monday: Canadian Pacific, Scrounger, Flip That, Irish Mix, Get Happy, Naja Hannah, Sassy Zip and Cactus Hunter.

Miami Beach closes April 16.

Biscayne Kennel club's International Championship race will have an Australian entrant for the first time. Pompadour Lass was nominated for the classic Saturday by George H. Winston of Miami Beach. The dog has won six of seven starts.

Joe Massey of England earlier nominated his Silvery Airways. This week he added Stephanotis.

Pompadour Lass recently set a record of 25 2-16 seconds for 465 yards at Devenport, Tasmania.

American Bows In Table Tennis

DORTMUND, Germany — (AP) — Red China's Kuo-Tuan Jung and 36-year-old Ferenc Sido of Hungary reached the finals of the World Table Tennis Championships Saturday after Dick Miles of New York staged a great comeback to gain the semifinals.

Jung eliminated Miles, 1948 U.S. champion in a gruelling five-set semifinal. The scores were 22-20, 23-25, 12-21, 21-18, 21-8.

But before bowing to Jung, Miles rallied after a jittery start for a 21-19, 21-18, 21-15 victory over Jui-Hua Yang of Red China.

Schlapik Takes Westview Final

Miles Schlapik won the Westview men's club championship Saturday, defeating Hal Hornstein, 5-4, in the 36-hole final match.

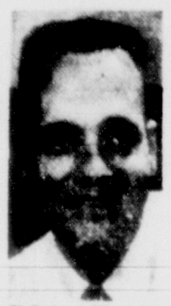
Fishing with Vic Dunaway

When These Snook Hit a Lure, It Sounds Like a Gun Going Off

My attention was focused on a promising mangrove pocket straight over the bow of the boat. I cocked my arm to cast, and then I almost jumped into the water. A few feet behind me—where Lloyd Knight was fishing—a rifle shot cracked the stillness. At the same time there was an explosive splash.



DUNAWAY

In the split second it took me to turn around, the excitement was over. Lloyd, his casting rod held loosely in his hand, was staring incredulously at the black water, where a yellow Creek Chub Darter bobbed silently among a widening stream of ripples.

Then Lloyd reeled in his line, but the Darter stayed put. It had been broken from the 15-pound nylon. That was the "rifle shot" I had heard.

"Did you see that snook?" Lloyd asked. "His head was big as a boat cushion."

"I saw him," answered Tommy Williams, our guide. "I bet he would weigh 30 pounds."

Bob Knight had not seen it, nor had I. We would have been better off if we had, for the unexpected noise really shook us.

* * *

Lost: Six Darters

WE GOT that plug back. However, some smaller, but equally vicious, relatives of the whopping snook were not so generous. In a half-day fishing along the remote creek, at least six of the yellow Darters were ripped off their anchorings.

At day's end we counted 10 snook. Three times that many struck, cavorted, and flopped away to safety.

Let's see if I can remember how to get there.

Tommy Williams' boat is pretty fast. It cruises at almost 30, and it took us a little more than two hours, straight run, from the time we left the Flamingo marina until Tommy told us to start casting.

We ran through Whitewater Bay and Oyster Bay, and out into the Gulf at Shark River. Then we proceeded north to a certain stream, turned into it, and twisted upstream for some 45 minutes.

To sum up these directions, it was a heckuva long way; about as far, I suppose, as you can get from a boat landing in the Ten Thousand Islands.

If further directions are required, I can only suggest that you get in touch with Williams at Flamingo.

* * *

The Winnahs!

WE WERE proud of our catch. But, at the same time, we were somewhat dubious as to who had got the better of the encounter—us or the snook. After all, our average was not so hot.

That night in the Flamingo dining room, we finally decided we had won.

Those crisp-fried snook fingers tasted a lot better than the Darters we had left for the snook in the creek to chew on.

Good Neighbor

Hopps, Ayala Top Net Seeds

A select field opens play at Flamingo Park, Miami Beach, Monday in the 11th annual Good Neighbor Tennis Championships. Ten nations will be represented in the tournament.

Seeded in the men's draw are Luis Ayala of Santiago, Chile; Jack Douglas, Santa Monica, Calif.; Mario Llamas, Mexico City, and Warren Woodcock, Australia.

Rated right behind these pre-tourney favorites are Francisco Contreras of Mexico, Don Kierbow, Los Angeles, and Jack Frost, Monterey, Calif. Not to be overlooked is University of Miami's tennis captain, Jerry Moss.

Janet Hopps, Seattle, Wash., No. 7 nationally, is top seeded in the women's division, followed by Christiane Mercelis of Belgium, Gwyneth Thomas, Cleveland, Ohio, and Mimi Arnold, Redwood City, Calif. Chief threats are Mrs. Barbara Davidson, Milwaukee; Marie Martin, Australia; Mrs. Laura Lou Kunnen, Clearwater, and Mrs. Adrienne Ayares, Baltimore.

Last year, Ayala lost in the finals to Australia's Mervyn Rose and Miss Hopps bowed to Brazil's Maria Bueno.

Here's Catchy Tuna

A 338-lb. bluefin tuna and a record 132-lb. swordfish led six new toppers last week in the Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament.

The tuna came out of Cat Cay. The swordfish was caught off Key Largo and posted at Tom Cadenhead's Mandalay Fishing Camp which now claims two likely winners in the current tourney.

Mrs. Anne H. Culleton of Key Largo boated the swordfish on 40-lb. line to beat the former Met record set in 1953. A 38½-pounder was caught that year by Gordon Roberts of Miami.

The tuna was fought on 50-lb. line by C. Dabney Thomson of Cincinnati and brought in at East and West Docks as the outstanding catch by Cat Cay contestants.

A 44-lb. barracuda posted by Robert P. Haggmann of Clayton, Mo., was just three pounds shy of last year's winner. It was hooked and boated off Marathon and registered at Davis Fishing Camp.

Light tackle anglers showed three impressive gains. Dr. Leonard Berg of Key West whipped a 27-lb. cobia on plug casting gear and 15-lb. line.

Bart Foth of Gettysburg, Pa., regained the fly casting leadership with an 11-lb., 3-oz. bonefish. The catch was made off Islamorada on 10-pound leader. Capt. Cecil Keith Jr. was guide.

Sad Saga of a Novice Sailor

Love That $!)?'-](Boat!

By DICK EVANS
Herald Sports Writer

Men in white suits told me I had come to the right place.

It was the first night of the United States Power Squadron's free piloting course.

The professor (classes are run on a college level) asked how many of the 100 students had previous boating experence.

I raised my hand. I had seen The Old Man and the Sea.

Then they passed out free student booklets full of outlines, questions and charts for the 10-week course.

Included in questions are these beauts:

A nautical mile is —— feet?; Intermediate fathoms not on the lead line are called —— ?; What is a cross signal —— ?; The Motor Boat Act divides boats into classes, according to length?; What is the penalty for not having required equipment aboard a: pleasure boat ——?; boat for hire —— ?; The arc of visibility of each red or green running light is from —— to —— ?

This course makes the auto driving examination look like something a man from the dark ages thought up.

However, it proves one thing. If you carry all of the necessary safety equipment like life preservers, floatation cushions, fire extinguishers, extra fuel, pump, charts, spare water, distress signals, suntan lotion, lights, spare parts and so forth, passengers must stay ashore. There's no room left for people on a 16-foot boat.

After one lesson, this old salt decided to head for Biscayne Bay.

The launching was accomplished in only 35 minutes, thanks to the modern trailer and hitch. A "pro" does it in three minutes.

After everyone was safely tucked aboard, I decided to try my motor. We hit the beach again before it started turning over.

With a depth chart of shallow Biscayne Bay tucked aboard in a dark place, I headed for open water, and 40 yards later was safe — high and dry on a sandbar.

I grabbed all of my yachting literature and started to bone up on how to get off a sandbar.

Four hours later I found out: wait for high tide and float free.

Next I pointed for the inland waterway and deep water. But a "Queen Elizabeth" type steamer (at least 22 feet) pushed me out of the channel and into mud.

I worked free and back into the inland waterway, only to find myself surrounded. Boats to the front and rear, a marker to the left and a pelican to the right. I put out my hand for a right turn (a holdover habit from my highway days) and headed for the pelican. He moved. I was safe . . . but aground again. This time I hopped out and pushed us from one sandbar to another.

Six hours after launching I paddled back into harbor, having used four thimble fulls of gasoline, ten years of my life and scared the wits out of some other old salts.

It required another 30 minutes to back the trailer to the launching site.

My class and experience at sea had taught me one lesson: If you can't beat the sea . . . leave it.

Sunburn Regatta Launches Big Spring Sail Card

By JOHN UNDERWOOD
Herald Sports Writer

First up in the springtime order of major league sailing events is today's Sunburn Regatta, a Biscayne Bay Yacht Club production held annually in the southern-most reaches of Biscayne Bay.

More than 80 top-drawer skippers are expected to compete in 17 classes. A national championship is on the block in the National One Design.

There will be three heats in each class — exception being in the cruising—with morning competition beginning at 9 and again at 10:30 and the afternoon cycle starting at 2 o'clock. A skipper's meeting is scheduled for 8 a.m.

The Sunburn is billed as the oldest of Florida's organized sailing events. Exact age is obscured by times when the regatta was little more than diversion from the chowder party, but it's been big time for years and one guess is that it's at least 50 years old.

State champions, national champions and former champions of all sorts are expected to set sail today. Perhaps the most notable entrant is Mrs. Pat Duane, petite mother of two from Delray Beach who skinned them all in the Moth class (she won the state title) before turning to a Flying Dutchman rig.

Ken Klare, national Moth champion from the Miami Yacht Club, will sail, as will Ding Schoonmaker, third in the Star class nationals, if he returns in time from Nassau where he competed in the internationals.

The schedule:

Class	1st Heat	2nd Heat	3rd Heat

SIX MORE BOATS have been entered in the 184-mile, Miami to Nassau Power Boat Race scheduled for April 15. This brings the fleet to 18, two under the limit.

Latest additions are Richard Stephan of Fort Lauderdale, 40-ft. Custom; James Wynn of Miami, 20-foot Thunderbird; Woody Woodson of Hialeah, 18-ft. Thunderbird; Dr. Sinet Simon of St. Petersburg, 33-ft. Chris Craft; Alfred Martin of Miami, 17-ft. Marliner, and Ross Fairbanks, Miami Beach, 37-ft Special.

Replaces Ottis Mooney

Palmer Named South Stars Coach

GAINESVILLE — (AP) — Dub Palmer, head football coach at Pompano Beach High School, has been selected to replace Miami Senior Coach Ottis Mooney as one of the coaches for the South All-Star football team.

The annual Florida All-Star grid game is scheduled here August 8.

Mooney resigned the post due to business complications. Palmer's Pompano Beach team lost only one game last season and was rated among the top ten high school teams in the state.

Palmer will work with Sebring Coach Glenn Odham. Last year the South defeated the North in the star event.

It was also announced that Myers Hand, fullback from Quincy High School, will play for the North All-Stars.

Manchester Wins

LONDON —(AP)— Manchester United blanked the Bolton Wanderers, 3-0, Saturday and joined Wolverhampton Wanderers at the top of the English Soccer League standings.

Martha Foote Wins Indian Creek Title

Martha Foote defeated Margie Knight, 6-2, 6-2, Saturday to win the club championship tennis tournament at Indian Creek. In a semifinal match, Margie Knight had beaten Libby Foote 6-1, 6-2.

Netters Clash Today In S. Florida Loop

Fort Lauderdale netters will test North Miami Beach's four new courts today as the South Florida Tennis League swings into its second week.

In other matches, Country Club of Coral Gables will be at Miami Shores; Henderson Park at Moore Park; Hialeah at North Shore and Flamingo Park at Hollywood.

MASTER PALYNCH had his customary speed, saved ground and gave way suddenly. THE CHOSEN ONE dropped back steadily following a quick start. RICO TESIO tired after making a brief bid on stretch turn. Indiana Lineman Signed by Cards

CHICAGO —(AP)— Lineman Tony Aloisio of Indiana, a Chicago Cardinal future draft choice last year, has signed for 1959. Aloisio, 215-pounder, was the Hoosiers' regular defensive end as a sophomore in 1954, then spent two years in the army. In 1957 he played 369 minutes for Indiana at end and last year was switched to center.

Shoe Boots In 6 at Jamaica, Wins Feature

Willie Shoemaker

NEW YORK —(AP)— Wee Willie Shoemaker rode six winners, including Isendu in the $27,650 Paumonok Handicap, at Jamaica Saturday. A crowd of 37,738, largest of the season, watched the Brookfield Farms horse score a half-length triumph.

Evenly weighted at 123 pounds, Isendu and Calumet Farm's Kentucky Pride were in a head and head duel most of the way with Isendu on the inside.

Kentucky Pride, the 3-2 favorite though he had never beaten Isendu in two meetings, was second by a length and a half over Viscount. Nan's Mink was fourth.

The sensational riding of Shoemaker, only jockey to win the national championship four times, stole the show from the feature. He had mounts in eight of the nine races.

Shoemaker won the opener with Darling Linda ($8.40) and the second with Little Leaguer ($9) for a $33.20 double. He finished out of the money in the third, and had no mount in the fourth.

Then Shoemaker won four straight, with Land of Hope ($11), Black Hills ($4.50), Isendu, and Our Dad ($3.30). His mount in the ninth was Dad's Delight, who finished eighth and last.

Isendu paid $5.50, $2.70, $2.30. Kentucky Pride returned $2.80, $2.30, and Viscount was $2.90. The time for the six furlongs was 1:10.4.

Pete's Folly Wins at Laurel

BALTIMORE — (AP) — Pete's Folly moved out of last place at the half-mile pole Saturday and went on to win the $29,775 Wilwyn Handicap by 2½ lengths at Laurel.

Pete's Folly, sixth in last weekend's $100,000 John B. Campbell Memorial Handicap, responded to handriding by Harold Keene to cover the mile and 70 yards over a "good" track in 1:43 1-5.

Coupled in the betting with stablemate Hare Raising, Pete's Folly returned $14, $6.60 and $3.40. Plion, a neck in front of Air Pilot, paid $12.40 and $6. Air Pilot, who paid $2.80, was the 2-1 favorite ridden by Howard Grant leading rider of the recent Bowie meeting.

Forest Hills Awarded Cup Challenge Round

NEW YORK —(AP)— The U.S. Lawn Tennis Association Saturday awarded this year's Davis Cup challenge round to Forest Hills and in the process ruled out the west coast unless new facilities are built.

President Vic Denny — himself a westernor from Seattle — made the announcement after a morning-afternoon meeting of the administrative committee.

He said Forest Hills, the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., and Boston College's new 28,000-seat football stadium all were considered seriously.

"But," he said, "it probably would ahve cost us about $80,000 to erect new seats and lay grass in the Rose Bowl. Furthermore, the West Side Tennis Club people in Forest Hills have the know-how and experience of running such tournaments."

Ironically, the West Side Club was cool to the idea of being host. With the challenge round scheduled for Aug. 28 29-30, that left only four days before the National championships and the feeling was that the revenue from the Davis Cup might cut into the nationals.

It was also decided at the meeting that Alex Olmedo and Earl Buchholz will be the official U.S. representatives in the big European tournaments. Mrs. Beverly Baker and "probably" Darlene Hard will represent the women.

Giants Uncork 21 Hits; Yanks, Braves Explode

By the Associated Press

Willie Mays hit three home runs and a two-bagger as the powerpacked San Francisco Giants took their spring hitting show on the road Saturday.

The Giants cut loose for 21 hits in a 17-4 victory over the Cleveland Indians at Salt Lake City, with Mays batting in six runs.

Jackie Brandt and rookie Roger McCardell also homered for the Giants who clubbed starter Gary Bell and four other Indian pitchers. Johnny Antonelli went seven innings for the Giants and was touched for all the Indians runs.

In Florida, the New York Yankees and Milwaukee Braves warmed up for their pennant defenses with impressive batting displays.

With the opening games less than a week away, the Yanks slammed three homers to beat Detroit, 6-5, at St. Petersburg, and Milwaukee banged out 15 hits, including two home runs, in a 9-3 decision over Cincinnati at Bradenton.

Kansas City edged Philadelphia, 6-5, at West Palm Beach, Pittsburgh shaded the Chicago White Sox, 10-9, at Tampa, Los Angeles beat a team of Dodger "All-Stars," 5-1, at Vero Beach, and Boston defeated the Chicago Cubs, 8-7, at Dallas.

Mickey Mantle, the American League home run champion, hit his third of the spring. Rookies Cletis Boyer and Dick Sanders also homered to give Duke Maas a 6-3 lead when he retired after seven innings of pitching.

The Braves took batting practice against Don Newcombe who suffered through the entire game for the Reds. Wes Covington homered for the second straight day. Frank Torre had three hits, one a homer. Hank Aaron also hit safely three times, and Eddie Mathews broke out of an 0-for-14 slump with two singles. Lew Burdette worked seven innings for the Braves, giving up seven hits.

The Athletics scored twice in the ninth, with Harry Chiti delivering a pinch hit double, to edge the Phils. Kent Hadley homered twice for the A's.

Pittsburgh rapped three White Sox pitchers for 16 hits. Pete Runnels and Vic Wertz drove in three runs apiece, but it took a ninth inning error by Cub Second Baseman Tony Taylor before the Red Sox won it. Walt Moryn hit a three-run homer for the Cubs.

600 Social Workers to Meet Here

Social workers will gather in Miami this week for their yearly appraisal of progress in helping people solve their problems.

Attending the four-day forum of the Florida Conference of Social Welfare beginning Thursday will be those working in all kinds of social fields.

They'll hear of the newest approaches to old problems — such as the breakdown of the family unit, juvenile delinquency, mental health. And they'll consider broadening their activities to new fields — such as keeping old folks happy as well as healthy, and following up on the mental patient after he leaves the hospital.

The 600 delegates will break up into discussion groups at the Biscayne Terrace and Everglades Hotels.

Meeting together at 10 a.m. Thursday, they will hear Columbia University Professor Alfred J. Kahn speak on "Social Work in Our Times." At the closing session at 10 a.m. Saturday, Florida Supreme Court Justice Stephen O'Connell will explain present court problems and proposed revisions.

Theme of the conference, set by Conference President Dorothy D. Hayes of Florida State University, will be "Florida Which Way: Apathy or Action?"

The 600 delegates will include professional social workers, public officials, board members of various agencies and representatives of United Funds throughout Florida.

12 Twisters In 42 Years For Miami

Miami has been one of the nation's major cities for tornadoes during the past 42 years, the weather bureau reported Saturday — but added that the Florida breed of twister is comparatively mild.

Twelve tornadoes have been recorded here since 1917, putting Miami in a tie for second in tornado incidence with Cincinnati and Wichita, a weather bureau report said. Oklahoma City led the 14 twisters.

But whereas Oklahoma City suffered 43 deaths in all from tornadoes, and a total of about one and one-half million dollars damage, only five persons have died here — all in one 1925 storm — and total damage is estimated at under $300,000.

Actually, said Miami's acting meteorologist, Walter Davis, many of the twisters recorded here "weren't real tornadoes — they don't compare with the vicious storms in other areas."

In the summer especially, he said, there are numerous twisters that are actually waterspouts over the ocean or the Everglades which never touch populated areas — or never touch ground.

Theology Study Urged

The New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Giuseppe Cardinal Pizzardo, prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Seminaries and Universities, has urged wider opportunities for the study of divine knowledge.

In a message to the fifth annual meeting of the Society of Catholic College Teachers of Sacred Doctrine, the prelate hailed the growing interest in human science but asked: "Can we not apply the beautiful mind God has given us to the study of the very science which makes him known to us?"

Representatives of more than 200 Roman Catholic colleges over the nation attended the two-day meeting in the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Miamian Faces U.S. Sentence

Mrs. Frances M. Dolmage, 53-year-old Miami court stenographer, was convicted in a Baltimore federal court Friday night of evading $9,297 in income taxes between 1950 and 1954.

The District Court jury deliberated two hours before finding Mrs. Dolmage, of 615 NE 25th St., guilty on all five counts with which she was charged.

She was released under $5,000 bail pending a motion for a new trial by her attorney, Fred Botts of Miami. Judge Roszel C. Thomsen withheld sentence.

Mrs. Dolmage, wife of an 88-year-old retired dentist and a former Washington resident, was tried in Baltimore because she filed her income tax returns there during the period in question.

FEDDERS
World's largest selling brand
THIN ... AND LOW

FEDDERS air conditioners for any home or commercial need are available from Miami Super Cold, says Cecil Kirby, shown above. Kirby has provided quality appliances and expert service in Miami since 1928.

Miami Super Cold Now Has New Fedders Units

Many Miami home owners still remember the unusually cold weather in recent years. Those who are seriously thinking of year 'round home comfort know their best air conditioning buy is a unit which heats and cools the room.

"The air conditioner we recommend is Fedders," says Cecil Kirby, owner of Miami Super Cold. "Those people interested in the best value for their money are sure to find it in Fedders. However, we sell other makes that may be suited to their particular needs.

"We have a Fedders unit to meet every need, starting with new one h.p. unit for only $189."

Miami Super Cold has made it a policy to back up everything they sell with expert service for 30 years. In fact, Kirby's experienced technicians are qualified to service any make air conditioner. The firm also has a large stock of replacement filters, including special ones for those who suffer with asthma or hay fever.

"The new Fedders air conditioners have 'High-Intregrity Features.' They give basic air conditioning values that assure the finest performance in famous thin and low styling by Raymond Loewy.

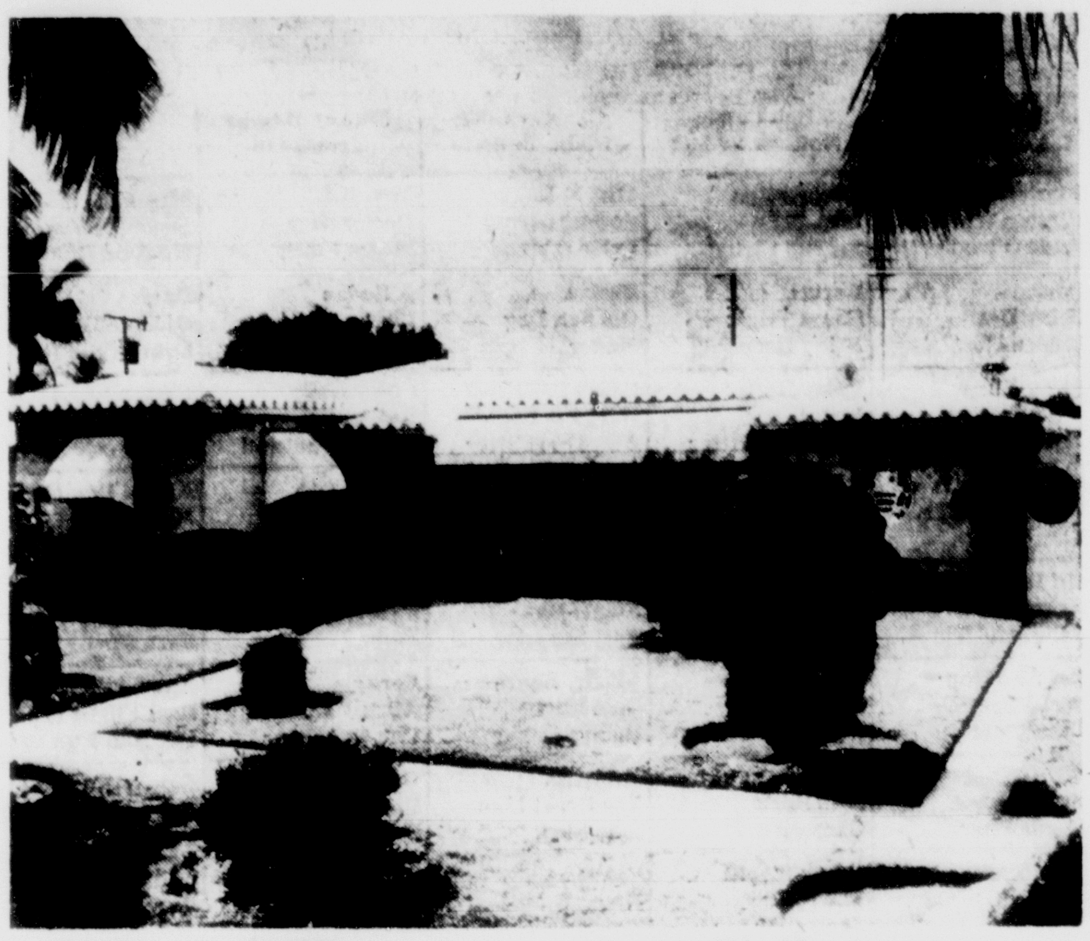
"One of the new Fedders features is a whisper-quiet operation with a volume control! This means better cooling with less noise. Other Fedders quality advantages include twin-cylinder compressors which cool faster, bigger cooling coils for greater efficiency, a voltage compensator which assures effective cooling even where voltage is not 'standard,' plus many more!"

Miami Super Cold is equipped to handle any air conditioning job, large or small, with careful attention to detail. Recognized as a qualified air conditioning contractor, the firm is a member of the Air Conditioning and Refrigeration Association of Florida.

"A free survey and estimate of your air conditioning needs will be made when you call FRanklin 3-7614," Kirby added. "Naturally there is no obligation for this service."

Three free parking lots are located across the street from Miami Super Cold, a division of the one and only Kirby-Tuttle Co., 41 SW First St.

Lasting Quality Is Claim of White-Tite Roof Coating



MORE THAN 22 MONTHS have passed since this roof was cleaned, sealed and coated by White-Tite on the home of Mrs. E. H. Smith, 30 NE 95th St., Miami Shores. No mold or mildew has formed on the barrel tile roof since the White-Tite process was applied. "We are proud of our quality and lasting work," says Jesse Scalzo, owner of the firm. "First the roof was thoroughly cleaned, and then the edges of the tile were sealed by our special process. The sealing process offered by White-Tite rebinds all loose tile and provides better drainage from the roof, as well as giving extra protection against hurricane winds. After the sealing process, two coats of paint, using the White-Tite process, were put on the entire roof on consecutive days. White-Tite also features a three coat process for gravel roofs giving it permanent bond to the roof. All cleaning and coating work is guaranteed for one year against mold and fungus. Financing can be arranged with a small down payment. We handle all of our own financing. White-Tite is a member of the Miami-Dade County Chamber of Commerce." Scalzo has had more than 13 years of experience in the roofing business. Free estimates, without obligation, may be obtained by calling White-Tite at NEwton 5-3603 or NEwton 3-8511 in Miami.

The Answer to Your Battery Problems
An inadequate generating system is the basic cause of battery troubles. The increasing load of accessories takes more current out of the battery than a conventional d.c. generator can put back in. On vehicles, slow driving, long idling periods and short trips aggravate battery trouble. The result is a dead battery — frequent recharging and resulting in short battery life. A costly, heavy-duty battery is no solution.
The Answer Is Replacement Of The Conventional D.C. Generator With The Revolutionary L-N ALTERNATOR SYSTEM.
Your vehicle will always start easily because the battery will be used for starting only. And the battery will last much longer. L-N Alternator Systems generate ample current for the electrical load. POWER 2-WAY Radio and electrical accessories without battery troubles.

1—It's usually evident when PRUDE is hurt (Pride). — Not Pride; it's more in keeping with a proud person's nature that he conceals it when his pride is hurt. PRUDE, a person who is overly proper, fits better.

4—After being lonely for years it's often a JOY to mix freely with one's fellows (Job). — It's at least usually difficult, or a Job, to do so. It might not be such a JOY, however. One might have been out of touch too long.

5—A proud husband usually likes his wife's clothes to be of RECENT design (Decent). — Usually understates with Decent. For that matter, even husbands who are not so proud might well like their wives' clothes to be decently designed. RECENT is better with usually, which allows for cases in which he prefers to see her in a favorite costume, whether RECENT or not.

6—We're apt to feel sorry for children who are APED by their parents (Awed). — Surely we definitely do feel sorry for children who are Awed by their parents. When the parents themselves act like children, it might not have such a harmful and lasting effect on the youngsters.

11—People who are known to SAVE a lot of money often attract many borrowers (Have). — The restraint in often is better with SAVE because such persons are careful with their money. People who have a lot of money might not be so careful with it, and they more frequently than often attract borrowers.

12—A conceited woman is apt to disdain a proposal of marriage from a man she regards as BOOR (Poor). — Poor is weak, because a man might be poor and yet have appearance, social qualities, breeding and prospects. A man who is a BOOR might have none, or few, of those qualities.

13—A cynic might well say that the more a man seems to HEED her, the more a woman tends to exploit him (Need). — Need goes too far, even cynically. When a man Needs her it arouses a woman's protective instincts. HEED is more reasonable; she might have little or no regard for him.

14—How hard it often is to correct a child's tendency to be MEAN! (Lean). — Correct implies that the tendency is undesirable or wrong. There maybe nothing wrong in his tendency to be Lean, thin. That a child's tendency to be MEAN is a fault cannot be denied.

Down

1—Young women are often strongly attracted to a bachelor they regard as a POSER (Power). — They tend to regard a POSER, a person with affectations, as a challenge. As for Power, too much depends on the type of power he holds and on how he uses it.

2—We're apt to resent being told that a DREAM we feel strongly about is fantastic (Dread). — Apt to resent doesn't go far enough with Dread; we might have good grounds for such fears. Our DREAM might well be based on less substantial ground.

3—A flirtatious wife is apt to make a doting husband FONDER (Wonder). — Wonder is weak because it is so vague. Wonder about what? His good fortune — or his bad luck? FONDER is more explicit and more true to life.

4—We usually admire a man who when a victim of a mean JAPE keeps quiet about it (Jade). — At first sight, Jade, a worthless woman, seems a good answer, but reflection shows that this keeping quiet might mean that she could go on to victimize others. There's less likelihood that the perpetrators of a mean JAPE, joke or trick, will go on to harm others.

7—A person who is instinctively LOVED by children usually has a kind nature (Moved). — Instinctively has little point with Moved, which means only that the person's feelings are touched. It has more point with LOVED. This concerns the reaction of children, who often rely largely on instinct in their reactions toward people.

8—Life must be somewhat dull for those who never have occasion to LEARN (Yearn). — Life would be more than somewhat dull for those who never have occasion to Yearn. To Yearn after something might well be the essence of living. Learn is better with the restraint here.

9—Broadly speaking, those who GIVE cheerfully set us all a good example (Live). — Not Live. Scoundrels might well Live cheerfully, and give nothing but bad example. GIVE is better because, broadly speaking, such persons give ungrudgingly and with good grace.

10—We often have reason to regret sympathizing with a man about his FOE (Woe). — FOE is more to the point; we might be drawn into taking sides against that FOE, thus making him our enemy, too. Woe is somehwat vague; it covers all manner of woes. His troubles might be genuine and worthy of our sympathy.

Soviets Have Bonn Uneasy

Miami Herald-Chicago News Wire

BONN — The Germans are uneasy about Soviet efforts to make West Germany appear as the only barrier to a settlement of all outstanding East-West problems.

What worries the Germans most is the fear that the Soviets will succeed.

The tone of Moscow's notes and statements suggests that Bonn will be blamed for any subsequent failure should the foreign ministers' and summit conferences reach no useful agreements.

In some of these comments, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer already has been accused of trying to "sabotage" any peaceful settlement.

At the same time, the Soviets appear to want to avoid any direct clash with other Western countries for which the Germans couldn't be made the goats. The Soviet embassy in East Berlin is speaking in much more subdued tones about air corridors than it did earlier last week.

Threatened "complications," it is now explained, referred to the alleged dangers of accidental collision rather than to any deliberate interference with high-flying American aircraft as occurred last week when an Air Force transport was buzzed repeatedly by three Soviet fighters.

Will Blood Spots Help Solve Murder of Mary Meslener?
. . . blood which dripped on floor of death car, arrows

Police Guard Car For Murder Clues

The car in which airline clerk Mary Meslener was believed slain was sealed and brought to Miami Saturday where Metro investigators hope to glean a clue that will solve the February murder.

But in Miami, Metro Public Safety Director Thomas Kelly refused to say whether the car had arrived or where it would undergo tests.

The car, owned by the pretty Miami airline employe, turned up in Tampa Friday — 40 days after her body was found sprawled on a Miami river canal bank on Feb. 23.

Although police were tight-lipped as to what the contents of the car would prove, they they were sure of one thing — the car, a 1958 blue Nash Rambler, was driven some time during the last week.

A. W. Bowman, 33, an employe of the Rider Truck Rental parking lot where the car was found, told police he first saw the auto "about a week ago."

He thought nothing about it for several days, he said, until he noticed blood stains on the rear floor of the auto.

Blood spots on the front seat, a puddle of blood on the right rear floor, three bobby pins, a white bottle cap, several empty cigaret packages, and a man's English-style black cane umbrella were found in the car.

The car still bore its original license plate, but clear plastic seat covers had been slashed off the front seat.

The victim's husband, Frank Meslener, said he was certain that neither his wife nor any member of the family had ever owned a black umbrella.

Meslener also disclosed that the clothes his wife was wearing when the body was found were not her own.

U.S. Denies Beefing Up Laos Army

VIENTIANE, Laos —(AP)— "Asinine" was the term used by the director of a U.S. Military Aid program to describe Communist accusations that the U.S. is beefing up the Laos army into an aggressive force.

"It would take three or four days just to bring some of these battalions together," John A. Heintges, civilian program chief said.

Propaganda broadcasts from Peiping, Hanoi and Moscow say the U.S. is bringing in large stocks of equipment and personnel to bolster this nation's 25,000-man army.

The last U.S. shipment included 10 jeeps and 10 trucks in March to replace wornout materiel and the last personnel to arrive were eight civilian technicians, Heintges told a reporter.

U.S. aid here is administered solely by civilians and the only U.S. military personnel in the country are attached to the military attaches' office at the U.S. embassy in Vientiane, he said.

They Don't Know What They Shot

A four-foot "thing" with a face like a rat and a body like a pig hopped from the grasses of the Miami River Saturday and attacked a dog, before being shot dead by workmen who decided it must be an agouti.

The 50 or 60-pound animal had grizzled hair, no tail, four-toed feet and rodent-like teeth.

"We were doing some work near the river when we heard the dog barking and saw this thing going after the dog," said Mike Bunetta, operator of a salvage firm at 3400 NW South River Dr.

"Two of us got pistols and it headed back for the river. We pumped at least 10 shots into it before it fell in the water and died," he said.

"It was really scary seeing it attacking the dog. It's the weirdest thing I ever saw. I'm not sure what it is."

The dictionary, however, shows a picture of an agouti, a rodent usually found in South and Central America and the West Indies, which looked like Miami's "thing." But agoutis are described as being "about the size of a rabbit."

"That must be what this thing is," said Walter Bielecki, who works with Bunetta, "but it sure is a big one."

British Halt New Global Air Service

LONDON —(AP)— British authorities halted their new round-the-world air service and complained the project was being deliberately frustrated by Northwest Airlines.

The Civil Aviation Ministry accused Northwest of hampering efforts by the British Overseas Airways Corp. to obtain a permit for operating across the Pacific.

A ministry statement claimed Northwest was trying to pry permission out of the British government for landing rights in Hong Kong.

"Such tactics are completely unacceptable and amount to an attempt by Northwest Airlines to use the procedures of the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) as a means of bringing pressure on the United Kingdom government either to concede valuable traffic rights under duress or to forego the exercise of rights already granted by the U.S. government," the statement said.

The CAB has delayed granting BOAC a permit for operating between San Francisco and Tokyo pending a hearing of objections raised by Northwest.

U.S. airlines contend BOAC transpacific service will cost them about 13 million dollars a year in lost revenue.

Campbell Statement Has Gordon Miffed

Hard feelings beween County Manager O. W. Campbell and Commissioner Alex Gordon persist, although Campbell's appointment of James Picola as budget director was warmly received by the board's Gordon-led budget probers.

Gordon is miffed at Campbell's handling of a statement he agreed to make on charges by Harry Toulmin, Picola's predecessor, that the commissioner was determined to wreck Metro.

Lsat Tuesday Gordon put the question to Campbell cold-turkey: Did he agree with Toulmin? Campbell agreed to put his answer in writing and make it public.

Campbell says he later changed his mind about the procedure of releasing the statement. "I wrote it and sent it back to Gordon," Campbell said. "He can release it if he wants to." The county manager declined to reveal what he told Gordon.

"Campbell changed his mind about more than the method of releasing his statement," Gordon said. "At our face-to-face meeting he said he couldn't honestly call me obstructive to Metro. But in his letter to me he said my actions could be construed as obstructive."

Gordon will ask Campbell for a "clarification" on Monday.

Why Stephens Quit His Job

ANGUS STEPHENS' exit from the courthouse after being a top man in the county solicitor's and state attorney's offices long enough to chart a promising political course, means abandonment of politics for a quiet law practice, he says.

"I was at the crossroads and had to decide which way to go," he said, as he left his $14,000-a-year job as State Attorney Richard Gerstein's administrative assistant.

It is known that he considered running for criminal court judge last year against Judge Gene Williams. Then, that he hoped for an appointment in anticipation of Judge Ben C. Willard's retirement.

But Judge Willard scotched that repeatedly while Stephens was prosecuting cases in his court.

"I'm not going to step down for a long time for any whippersnappers that want my job" and similar remarks were beamed in Stpehens' direction.

He would not think of running against Judge Willard, Judge George E. Schulz, or his friend Dick Gerstein.

If he sticks to his present purpose, public office is losing a sincerely honest candidate.

Their Playtime Was Expensive

SURE ENOUGH, on April 2, about 10 hours after the deadline, 13 home owners appeared to file homestead tax exemption applications.

Several said they just had returned to the city from vacations, figuring when they left a month ago they had plenty of time.

Expensive playtime, seeing as how the exemption amounts to an actual tax saving of $200 on county bills and $85 on city of Miami bills.

The New Glass Can Shatter, Too

IT USED to be that almost super-human strength was required to open the heavy oaken doors against winds blowing through the courthouse lobby.

So they recently installed aluminum-framed plate-glass doors thatswing both ways.

Several days ago, strong winds came and blew a full-length pane right out of the door, scattering small pieces of glass 20 feet into the lobby.

It happened at 8:45 a.m. just after the 8:30 crowd and just before the 9 a.m. crowd — so nobody was hurt.

So, in replacing the glass did they use shatter-proof safety glass?

Indeed not.

After all, nobody was cut in the first crash.

When the courthouse was built 32 years ago, there were no doors there at all and the 1926 hurricane whipped right through the block-long lobby.

Does Exterior Need Lighting?

MIKE OLIVER, courthouse electrical maintenance expert, believes the exterior of the building should not be neglected while so much money is being spent on dolling up the interior.

He would like to see modern floodlights to brighten what he says is a city landmark.

Several months ago he revived the beacon light that has been dark on the tip of the courthouse tower for seven years.

He uses the light himself as a beacon guide while in his fishing boat at sea, he said.

"It now can be seen far out at sea, as it used to be when the courthouse tower was first built," he said.

EAL Urges CAB Study Fare Slash

Eastern Air Lines has asked the government to take a long look at National Airlines' fare-cutting plan.

National wants the Civil Aeronautics Board to approve a 25 per cent night coach fare reduction for passengers traveling on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The slash would cut rates from $46.80 to $35.10 and go into effect April 20.

Eastern, Northwest, Northeast and Delta Airlines followed National's proposal with identical requests of their own. Eastern said its was made to be competitive with National in case the latter plea is granted.

In a second letter to the CAB written Friday, Eastern asked for a thorough investigation and called the proposed tariffs "unjust, unreasonable and unduly discriminatory" against passengers traveling the remainder of the week.

Here are 3 things to avoid when you borrow money: 1. Red-tape delay, 2. High payments, 3. Hidden Costs. Years of experience have shown us how to cut away all annoying details and get you the money right away—with payments that you know you can make easily. Our costs are sensible and clearly explained beforehand. There are no appraisal or inspection charges.

Whether you phone or visit us, we are glad to give you all information on home loans—NO OBLIGATION whatever.

HERE is the last word in modern home building accomplishment. No expense has been spared in architecture, engineering and decorating. As you enter you will be impressed by a sense of quality and completeness, from the white tile floors in the living area to the decorator selected light fixtures. The basic requirements have not been slighted either, with 400 Amp. electrical service, well and pump for the oversized pool and sprinkler systems, and separate central heat and air conditioning. The "Mutchler" kitchen is something you have seen only in the magazines. And the 4 baths are works of art in tile and color. To complete all of this it is located in a walled estate area. Just off Old Cutler at Davis Road ½ mile South of Sunset. Sure, its expensive but drop by anyway, just to see it.

HEDGE AGAINST INFLATION!
BECAUSE of serious illness, owner now offering for sale at greatly reduced price, one of the more desirable properties close-in to downtown Miami, possessing probably the largest advertising potential of any building on West Flagler Street. Improvements consist of large 3 story masonry and steel building. Has 32 large well furnished apartments and 12 stores. Apartments easily convertible to 90 hotel rooms which should possibly more than triple the income. The building could also be adapted for offices or other business and commercial uses. Faces on 3 streets. Cost of reproduction today would probably be upward of $400,000. For quick sale price has recently been reduced $70,000 from real asking price. Today $150,000 can purchase this property. At this price the property is one of the best buys in Florida. Investigate. For details call S. Oliver O'Bryan at FR 1-3592

Fast and Safely with DOCK easy
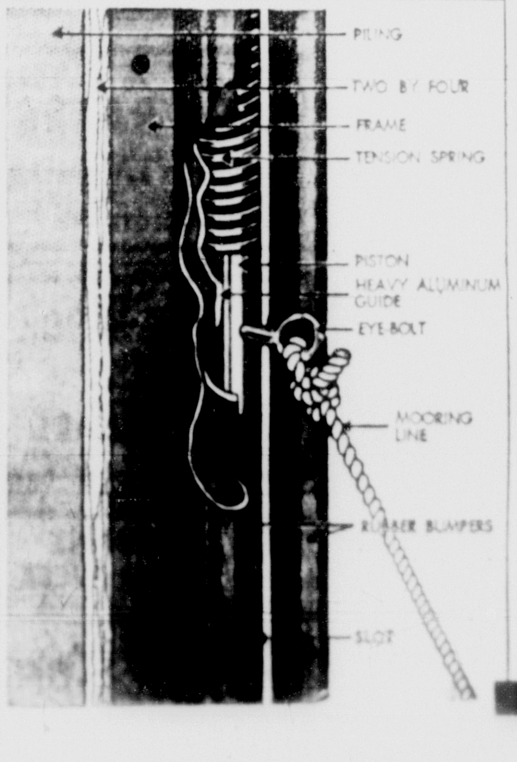
BOAT MOORING
Pat. 2,873,712

Dock-easy will be Demonstrated this week at 2855 N.E. 30th Street, Pompano Beach, Florida.



DOCK-easy was designed to simplify the mooring of your boat into a safe and fast operation. To cast-off or make-fast is so easy a child can do it. But further than that, it protects your boat from chafing, rubbing and bumping the dock or piling.

In operation, DOCK - easy holds your boat snugly against protective rubber bumpers forming the outer edge of the DOCK-easy frame. The mooring lines are held taut at all times while the boat is moored, automatically adjusting to the rise and fall of the tides and the action of winds and waves. When not in use, the lines are held high and dry, yet within easy reach from the cockpit floor or deck.

EXCLUSIVE

FOR the young in heart who wish to get above ordinary production class automobiles, this 1959 TS hardtop Borgward sport coupe is one of the smartest imported cars seen in Miami. Although there are only 11 in all South Florida, you may have seen it at the Dinner Key Imported car show and noticed it was priced at $3,995. Now, save over $1,000 and since it is already financed with a Miami bank, you can take over 5% payments of $76 month after my equity. Will accept trade-in. If you are looking for an elegant car still under factory warranty, drive out 2027 Alhambra Circle, Coral Gables or call HI 6-2924. Private, no dealers, please.

30 MILLION PEOPLE

In an article by an outstanding public relations authority on WHY FOREIGN CARS! Based on a very careful survey by the British Automobile Manufacturers' Assoc. this phenomenal number of Americans aspire to be different.

Why Foreign Cars

These are the people, it turns out, who are not completely enchanted by mass entertainment, packaged relaxation, and canned prescriptions for their leisure hours. Many of these people, it has been learned, wear British woolens or Paris styles, drink Scotch whiskey or Dutch beer, smoke Havana cigars or British pipe mixtures, and even prefer the music of a German named Bach to that of Elvis Presley. In short, these people aspire and are selective in their aspirations.

Thus, the success of the imported car in America. It represents a way of life for the selective, discerning American individualist. Obviously, if every one in the United States wanted just transportation, or a mass-produced mobile accessory to every-day living, only Detroit would be selling automobiles here, for Detroit builds more than enough cars to go around . . . and they are very, very good cars. But now, a growing number of people want something more than the present American conception of the mass-produced automobile.

These people are what Madison Avenue defines as "motivators." They are the articulate minority, the pace-setters, the style-makers, the people other people follow, or talk about, or strive to emulate. What actually happened to the imported car back in 1949 and 1950 was that the "motivators" bought it, drove it, enjoyed it, romanticized it, then talked about it—and a merchandising phenomenon known as "sales radiation" was in full swing.

We must repeat, advertising budgets for imported cars in these days were either non-existent, or roughly the equivalent of one day's advertising expenditure by Detroit's Big Three. But a much more potent selling force took the field. The American people sold imported cars. They are still doing so. At the moment, it would be hard to say how far this trend will continue and what its ultimate effect upon the imported car market here will be. I have heard many imported car dealers, after listening to an imported car owner boasting about his automobile, cry out in anguish, "If I had one salesman that good, I'd double my sales in thirty days!"

Manufacturers were quick to realize that increasing acceptance of their products in a distant land invested in them vast responsibilities. They saw what needed to be done and set about doing it.

First they tackled the twin problems of service and parts. They created service schools here in the U.S., in which mechanics and service managers could be trained by factory-approved methods. Then they began stock-piling parts in large parts depots, often located near major airline terminals, and they streamlined the mechanisms by which parts could be brought here swiftly and distributed efficiently to all sections of this country.

Unable in those days to interest domestic car dealers in their franchises, the imported car manufacturers, through their distributing organizations or agents, built their own dealer organizations. Since there seemed to be no likelihood of overproduction in the foreseeable future, they argued that dealers could hold a price line that would ensure high profits. And they capped this argument by convincing dealers that a stable price structure was possible where the consumer public was geared psychologically to pay what was tantamount to a fixed price.

It is unlikely that these arguments would have proved fruitful had not events taken a course that stressed their logic. It was not long before dealers realized that an increasing demand for imported cars, in a market where no surpluses existed, effectively reduced price competition between dealers. The evils of over-trading and low-margin wheeling-and-dealing, then beginning to be so prevalent in domestic car selling, never got a foothold in the imported car field. It is doubtful whether in the long history of American marketing any automotive product ever attained pricing and trading-practice stability as rapidly as did the imported car.

Meanwhile, the imported car manufacturers took a step which was to increase public confidence in them and in their product, and which was to ensure the permanence of their market here.

They formed American subsidiaries of their companies, like the Jaguar organization here in North America today, which enabled the manufacturers to operate efficiently and wisely in what was then to them a new market, and to keep in close day-to-day touch with their distributors and dealers and their problems.

Thus, between 1949 and 1955, the imported car manufacturers planted themselves firmly in the American market and began operating, in a modest measure, along the same marketing lines as their Detroit counterparts. These American subsidiaries, as autonomous as it was possible to make them, assumed full responsibility for product and corporate advertising, public relations, market research, merchandising and selling. They employed American advertising agencies and market analysts to guide them. If the dollar weight of their promotional efforts was on the light side, at least they were able to proceed sure-footedly in their approach to the American buyer.

The imported car dealer, in turn, made one great contribution to the success of the imported car in this market. That contribution was enthusiasm—enthusiasm for the product, enthusiasm for the rediscovered sport of motoring, enthusiasm for a way of life epitomized by the imported car and its new American owner.

Since enthusiasm for a product has a way of translating itself into knowledge about the product, and product knowledge is still the most important selling tool yet discovered by man, imported car dealers became salesmen at a time when domestic car dealers were fast becoming no more than order-takers. The former knew what they had to sell and, as a consequence, knew the best way to sell it.

I think it is safe to say that imported car dealers back in those days knew more, and today certainly know more, about suspension, steering, performance data, gear and axle ratios, carburetion, and torque than their domestic car counterparts. Out of such stuff is hard selling made. And hard selling, at point-of-sale, which in the automotive industry is at the dealer level, produces results.

May I add, parenthetically, that the imported car dealer who could not sell the products he handled soon found himself out of business. He found himself, much to his embarrassment, talking to prospects who knew a great deal more about imported cars than he did.

He found out, in fact, that a characteristic of imported car drivers and owners is that they are emotionally involved with their cars. They derive great satisfaction out of driving them and owning them, so naturally they know a great deal about them. You do not fool an imported car buyer with three-tone paint jobs, turret tail lights, prestomatic-variable-glide transmissions and vista-vision windshields.

The imported car buyer wants facts about the automobile that interests him. He wants to buy the car that is exactly right for him and his personal or family requirements. And since the requirements of imported car buyers are apt to be widely diversified, the range of imported cars offered here to meet them is as diversified. As I mentioned earlier in this article, I believe that the word "diversified" is the key-word in explaining the success of the imported car in the American market.

There are basically three kinds of imported cars that are receiving increasing acceptance in the United States. There are the out-and-out sports cars, like the MG, the Jaguar XK series, the Austin-Healey, the Porsche and others, and the sports sedans such as the Aston Martin, the Jaguar 3.4, etc.; the luxury sedans like the Rolls Royce and Bentley, the Jaguar Mark IX, the Mercedes-Benz, etc.; and thirdly, the enormously popular economy cars like the Hillman, the Morris, the British Ford, the Renault and the Volkswagen.

The above automobiles range in price from $1,500 to $20,000. They are automobiles which, in literally hundreds of details, are widely diversified. We, in the British Motor Industry, have a slogan, "A Quality Car For Every Purpose, Every Purse," which might well be applied to all imported cars.

I believe that this very diversity of products . . . diversity of performance, diversity in economy of operation and diversity in size and styling . . . is a direct answer to what the buyer is looking for when he chooses an imported car over an American one.

As the automotive products emerging from Detroit tend to become more and more standardized so that all American cars much resemble one another in length, breadth, weight, design, horsepower and performance, the imported car stands alone in offering the selective buyer what he is seeking. Because of this very circumstance, it must be apparent that imported cars seldom compete with domestic automobiles for the dollars of American car buyers. You may be sure that the buyer, who has decided upon an imported car because of its diverse features, will not settle for anything else.

It would be impossible to discuss the expanding market for imported cars here without mentioning another factor which has contributed to that growth. I am referring now to motor sport, and the effect it has had upon imported car sales. It comes as no news to readers of motor magazines, I am sure, that motor sport today is one of the fastest growing spectator sports in America. It is dominated by imported cars.

Motor sport, by its very nature, is synonymous with dash, glamour and excitement, commodities Americans have always sought in large doses. With imported cars leading the way, this modern sport has created a climate of its own. It has influenced men's and women's styles; it has invaded the area of colorful society; it has drawn recruits from the fields of acting, journalism, TV and radio, polo, big game hunting and even arctic exploring.

On the publicity side, motor sport magazines have sprung into existence and have enjoyed a healthy growth; newspapers have hired sports car columnists to report this new and exciting sport; radio and TV have followed suit and, most noteworthy, motor sport has been catapulted into a position of meriting sixth place in total lineage covered in major U.S. publications devoted to the sporting scene.

In order to evaluate this circumstance, it must be remembered that America's traditional sports are baseball, football, basketball, bowling, horse racing, hockey and so forth, and that in less than a decade a hitherto unknown sport has joined in importance the top few of them.

Imported car "fans," themselves, have done much to clothe the imported car in an aura of glamour, excitement and romance. Jaguar owners organized themselves into a national club as far back as 1954. Regions of the club sponsor races, hillclimbs, rallies, concourse d'elegance and a variety of motoring and social events. Owners of MG's, Porsches and Volkswagens are similarly organized, and even the exalted Rolls Royce has its loyal and vociferous owners who are banded together under the banner of the marque. Marque owners salute each other on the highways by waving, blowing their horns and flashing their lights. A fraternity spirit runs high here.

I stated a few paragraphs ago that the imported car is clothed in romance. If anything at all is clear to us, it should be obvious that the imported car has attained a bright and romantic position in the fabric of American life; and that in one way or another it has become imbued with a degree of romanticism that has not attached itself to an automotive product since the days of the Stutz, the Mercer, the Locomobile and other glamour cars of a now bygone era in the United States.

Perhaps this has come about because domestic cars have lost most of their romantic appeal and have become prosaic adjuncts to household equipment or, what may be worse, objects of barter between buyer and vendor, in which price and price alone is the last remaining tool of selling and motive for purchase.

Now, the question! Is the increasing sale of imported cars in the U.S. good for our economy?

Let us answer it this way. In 1957, the U.S. led in the export of automotive products and actually exported 40 per cent of such products consumed by the world. Our nearest competitor was Great Britain, with an export total of 25 per cent of world market. Since imported cars represent only six to eight per cent of our total domestic consumption of automobiles, it is apparent that the trade picture is, in the Yankee tradition, very much in our favor.

Additionally, dollars earned by countries exporting automotive products and selling them here are used in large measure to buy American commodities in short supply at home. For instance, automotive dollars earned in this market by Great Britain are spent mainly to purchase American wheat and coal and many other commodities. The sale of imported cars in the U.S. has been, therefore, a substantial pump primer for American business.

It must be noted, also, that imported car dealers represent several thousand independent business operations, paying taxes and employing thousands of American employees. Add to the latter the thousands of employees of the manufacturers' subsidiaries on the executive, sales, parts and service sides, and the thousands of American workers involved in the transport, handling and maintenance of imported cars, and you have an annual payroll figure that will lead to a conclusion that the imported car business has become a very useful segment of our national economy.

What is the future of the imported car in the U.S.A.? Its future is a bright one. As long as American society produces increasing numbers of people who want specialized automobiles to meet their specialized needs, imported cars will gain in acceptance. This acceptance will be expedited and perpetuated by our industry, based on the twin policies of careful attention to manufacture and its equivalent in service.

Michigan's Ills Going To Voters

Financial Crisis Poses 'Protest'

LANSING — (AP) — Michigan's financial crisis will overshadow other issues Monday in the nation's first statewide general election of 1959.

WILLIAMS

Democratic and Republican leaders have pitched the respective campaigns to an appeal for "protest" votes.

Each party has urged voters to find the other at fault for a state general fund deficit ballooning toward 110 million dollars by June 30, and for new taxes in prospect to straighten out state finances.

Republicans control both branches of the Legislature, which is at loggerheads with Democratic Gov. G. Mennen Williams over a solution of state money ills.

Robert M. Montgomery, state elections director, has predicted a turnout of 1,250,000, or about one third of the state's registered voters. In the last comparable election in April of 1957, 1,124,000 ballots were cast. Democrats swept all offices than at stake.

Voters Monday will fill 12 statewide education offices of which all but one are part time, unsalaried posts on various boards. The exception is the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction. This job pays $17,500 a year.

In nonpartisan balloting, two eight-year terms on the State Supreme Court are at issue. Three constitutional questions will be decided, all of them minor.

In one of the Supreme Court contests, Justice John D. Voelker, a nationally known author, is seeking reelection.

Voelker wrote the best-seller novel, "Anatomy of a Murder," under the pen-name, Robert Traver.

Executive Faces Jail For Bribes

SCRANTON, Pa. —(AP)— A business executive faces a possible six-year prison sentence for bribing an Atomic Energy Commission auditor.

A Federal Court jury of seven men and five women convicted Louis Isaacs, 54, of Bribery.

Vincent R. Hoefling, of New York, the AEC auditor, testified he visited Isaac's plant, the Metal Research and Development Corp., of Exeter, Pa., to obtain information for the commission. Hoefling said Isaacs offered him $500, and he accepted it on orders from the FBI.

Another witness, Vincent G. Dougherty, a special FBI agent, said Isaacs at first denied the bribe, then admitted it, but gave no reason for offering the money.

U.S. District Judge John W. Murphy deferred sentencing, pending an investigation. The maximum sentence is three years in prison for each of the two counts on which he was convicted, and up to $1,500 fine on each count.

Are We Spoiling Our Children?

Any parent who stops to think about it wonders if he is doing right by his children.

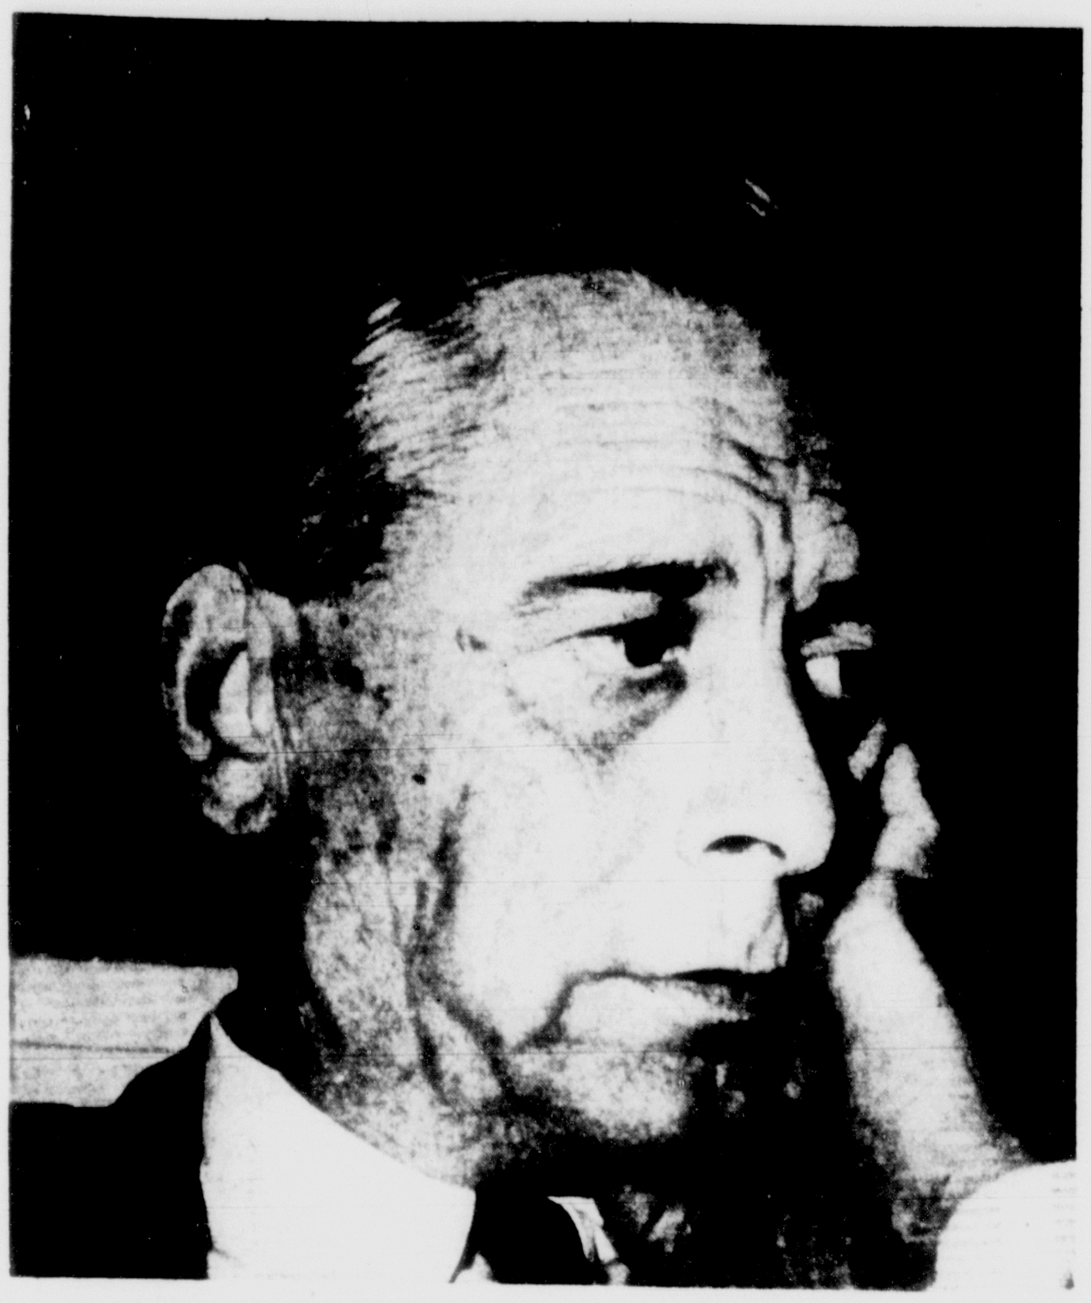
The Herald has been hearing more and more complaints that "I'd like to do right by them but the pressures around me are too great."

So we asked a group of parents to come in and talk about whether children are being spoiled. They talked about their children and other people's children.

The reporters who questioned them were parents, too. They sometimes had to restrain themselves from being participants rather than questioners.

There were a lot of opinions expressed, a lot of flat statements made, all of which did not go unchallenged.

And after it was over with there was a little soul-searching on the part of both the panelists and the reporters.



—Herald Staff Photos by Bill Sanders and John Walther

THE AUTHOR — Philip Wylie, writer and observer of life, is the father of one daughter, now married. He and Mrs. Wylie live at 7450 SW 47th Court.

Materially... By Jeanne Voltz

"The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings," run two lines of Robert Louis Stevenson's verse.

But parents and observers of today's children wonder if the world isn't full of too many things, all with a price tag on them.

"The only respect we have is for people who make junk," says the Author scornfully.

"Our homes are just museums of junk and we have to find some place to throw it out. We shoo the children in front of machines to entertain them so we can go out.

"Nothing matters but money or things."

The Business Man admits that perhaps clubs where his daughters sail or play tennis are a symbol of something parents think they should give children.

"It's a question of buying youngsters things they see their friends have."

The Mother of Three says "Yes, my children are spoiled to a certain extent," and puts the blame on keeping up with the Jonses.

* * *

Is Money Everything?

WHO ARE THE JONESES?

SOMETIMES THEY ARE THE PARENTS, THEMSELVES.

"Some children ask their fathers for money to get a little attention," says the Social Worker. "Money is the only thing father understands."

"Parents have a misconception of what makes children happy," says the Mother of Nine.

"They buy children one thing, then another and another and still don't give them what they want: love and security."

"We find children in trouble whose parents have bought things, lots of things, for Johnny," says the Social Worker.

"They thought they were showing love. But Johnny didn't think so at all."

The boat, the motorbike or whatever that is bought for Johnny may be not for Johnny at all, but for his father, she points out.

THERE ARE OTHER JONESES OUTSIDE THE FAMILY.

The Joneses are a teen-age society which calls for a new dress for every party, a car when they're 16, thinks the Architect's Wife.

The Joneses are teenagers who whine and finally get what they want, believes the Mother of Four.

Or they are $15,000-a-year fathers who feel they have to show they're making good salaries, believes the Publicists.

"People in really high income brackets, at least the ones I know, seem to be more conservative about buying lots of unnecessary things for their children," he says.

'Too Much Protection'

THE PARENTS ARE DISTURBED. The Architect's Wife and the Business Man say they'd like to raise their children in small towns "where they don't see so many of their friends with so many things."

The Business Man would like to get out of the "rat race," the social whirl, the cocktail party—going because your friends do.

Television and other advertising keep children's minds on things to be bought.

"If they see a cute commercial they want to buy this cereal or that soap," says the Mother of Three.

Keeping up with the Joneses or whatever the cause, most of these parents have had problems of supplying what their children think they need.

"Doesn't it depend on whether parents are away over their heads trying to keep up?" asks the Social Worker.

"Yes, I think parents set the pace for children," the Mother of Nine says.

And there's a trend toward overprotection, the Author thinks.

Some fancy games, TV sets and the like are showered on children to keep them safe from skinned knees and stubbed toes, he says.

All of the mothers say that at times they must say, "No," and give as the reason "this is the way we do it in our family."

The Author says he gave his daughter few things she didn't need, except perhaps a big wedding.

"I didn't give my daughter some of the fancy clothes and trips she wanted to take and a car she finally wanted," he says.

"She didn't have a tantrum. Why, no, I was her father and still had a little gram of authority."

The Social Worker points out it is important to be consistent. If you tell a child she can have $10 for a dress, make it stick. But give in on the non-essentials.

"What difference does a bar of soap make, whether it's this TV brand or that?" she asks.

* * *

About Allowances

PARENTS THINK TRAINING CHILDREN to use money through allowances helps them understand they can't buy every oddment under the sun.

The Social Worker suggests allowances should start in first grade or before and be increased each year to cover more of the child's wants and needs.

She doubts that a child can be spoiled

In Guidance... By Eleanor Hart

Teach your children love of their fellow man, faith and kindness and they won't go wrong . . . not too far wrong, according to The Herald's panel of parents.

Who guides the kids in the quest for values in today's challenging world? YOU, the parents.

And it matters not whether you indulge them with a swimming pool, a yacht club membership or a cash bonus for an excellent report card, the final tally sheet goes back to you.

But don't be frightened. The old-fashioned securities of love, faith and kindness have not lost their punch.

"Love your children, teach them to love others, and you won't get off the track," believes the Mother of Nine.

But whatever you do, be consistent.

* * *

Supervision's a Must

IF THE ALLOWANCE is only 25 cents a week (as it must be in this family), skip the apologies.

"You've got to learn to face the realities of life," says the Architect's Wife.

All parents agreed on the need for supervision.

"True, we may do too much for our children," says the Business Man, "but if we can keep them occupied, whether it's at the yacht club or in dancing school, it's better than having them doing nothing in the neighborhood juke parlor."

Love Comes First

"I ALWAYS TRY to know where my children are," says the Mother of Three."

"I'm always there when they come home from school," says the Mother of Four. "But I must admit I'd like more time to myself."

"We HAVE to have discipline," says the Mother of Nine.

"If you teach children right and wrong, raise them properly, use the woodshed when it has to be used, you have nothing to fear," the Business Man adds.

"Five minutes of love is more important than five hours of your time," reflects the Publicist, whose family time is at a premium. "A child knows if you're a phony."

And Discipline

"DISCIPLINE is a way of life," observes the Social Worker.

"A child can't grow up to be a mature adult without it. But, alas, many parents can't discipline children because they aren't disciplined themselves."

"My child never threw a tantrum after she was seven," says the Author. "Kids are really wonderful when you consider how infamous their parents are.

"But then I just like kids," he admits.

THE SOCIAL WORKER — Lois Parks, executive director of the Mental Health Society of Greater Miami, is the only non-parent on the panel. In her work she deals with problem parents and problem children.

So You're Expecting a Baby!

Childbirth is an epochal event in the life of any family. And nowadays, thanks to modern science, childbirth is easy and safer than ever. In this timely and timeless series, a Chicago science reporter, Robert S. Kleckner, discusses pregnancy in easy-to-understand language. He writes about the fears of mothers-to-be, personality changes in pregnancy, food cravings and what they signify and the drama of the delivery room. Kleckner also answers many questions which worry expectant mothers.

By ROBERT S. KLECKNER

The doctor looks at the slip of paper and says two fateful words to the woman seated beside his office desk.

"It's positive," he tells her.

Now that she knows she is pregnant, the woman experiences a profound reaction.

It may be joy. It may be panic. Or it may be bewilderment.

Obstetricians and gynecologists who have had long experience with how a woman's mind works when she is going to have a baby agree on one point.

Fundamental traits of the personality of the mother-to-be are likely to be magnified during this time.

Her attitude reflects her education, background, married life, and her preparation, or lack of it, for motherhood.

All medical men emphasize that most women — big, little, smart, stupid, young or not so young — can have babies. Women have been doing just that for a long time. Some can carry a child and give birth more easily than others. Most, barring unforseen complications, can and do have children with little pain.

As for danger — since 1935 the maternal death rate in this country has dropped by more than 80 per cent, while fewer babies die at birth or during the first months of life.

Still, doctors and others concerned with maternal welfare deplore the fact that too few of the young people now being married have been prepared physically or emotionally for parenthood. Proper preparation helps produce happier marriages, easier births and healthier infants, they say.

Examinations At Early Age

A GROWING NUMBER of specialists believe that pelvic examination of females should begin gradually and routinely at an early age, and continue annually.

There are several reasons for this.

One is that such procedure, established before puberty, eliminates mental shock and feelings of taboo. Children, these specialists say, accept it as no more significant than examination of teeth or tonsils.

Another reason is that delayed examination of pelvis and breast may be too late to correct conditions that might prevent normal marriage relations and childbirth, or cause disease.

In a pioneer series of such examinations done in Chicago, some 500 malfunctions, malformations and other disorders, including two cancers, were discovered among 1,622 females between the ages of 3 and 21.

No matter how much or little she knows about pregnancy, the first thing a woman should do, when she thinks or knows that a baby is on the way, is to consult a doctor.

If she doesn't already have a physician whom she trusts and respects, she cold find one. City or county medical associations will be glad to suggest the names of several obstetrical specialists from whom she can make a selection

Getting the right doctor is imperative.

Basic Questions On First Visit

BOTH DOCTOR AND PATIENT should obtain answers to certain basic questions during the first visit.

The prospective mother, or her husband, should inquire as to the doctor's fees and how they may be paid. An itemized estimate may be requested, if desired, so that the parents will know what services they are getting, as well as their price.

As for the doctor, on the initial visit, he will want to know the patient's marital and menstrual history; data regarding previous pregnancies and children, if any; previous illnesses and operations; whether she has had abortions, spontaneous or otherwise, and data about contractions. (the term now replacing "labor pains") in any previous pregnancy.

He will also want general health records in the families of both husband and wife, and a record of her current physical condition.

It is also likely that on this visit the doctor will make an initial pelvic examination and take various measurements. He will determine the date on which the baby may be expected.

Advice which he will probably give will include instructions for physical care which she should observe for herself.

It is important to calculate, from the first day of the most recent menstrual period, the dates when menses would reoccur if she were not pregnant. During those times, she should refrain from specified activities, to avoid added stress at those times.

During the first visits, the doctor will inquire into the patient's nutrition, hygiene and exercise habits, and make corrective suggestions when necessary. He will advise that any necessary dental work be done early, too.

Her visits to the office are usually scheduled for every three or four weeks during the first six months; every two weeks during the seventh and eighth and thence weekly until the birth.

At these times, the doctor, among other things, checks her weight, blood pressure and urine.

Also blood typing on both prospective parents will be done to determine if any incompatibility exists, requiring special attention.

At the beginning of the sixth month, examination usually is made to determine the heighth of the expanding womb, and the size and position of the baby.

With these routine steps accomplished, the process of having a baby is well under way. It can be a beautiful experience or a rugged one, depending on the prospective mother as well as on her doctor.

Pregnancy Ills Traced To Emotional Causes

DETROIT — (AP) — Mental characteristics which a woman has repressed all her life may show up during pregnancy, a Cleveland doctor says.

About one out of every 11 women who develop mental disorders does so while pregnant, asserts Dr. J. Dudley Chapman, chairman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Cleveland's Brentwood Ostoepathic Hospital.

His remarks were prepared for delivery at the annual convention of the American College of Osteopathic Pediatricians and Gynecologists.

He explained that there is growing support for the idea that many disorders of pregnancy — such as nausea, vomiting or overeating — may be emotionally caused.

Furthermore, he said, the use of psychiatry was suggested when it was noted that many abortions seemed to have no traceable physical cause.

He said some women apparently develop an "abortion habit" just as others may develop accident habits.

"This habit may be detected and broken by well directed psychosomatic treatment," Chapman said.

Chapman said the obstetrician is in the best position to detect these conflicts and fears, and therefore must be conscious of their possibility and willing to take the time to let an expectant mother reveal her feelings about pregnancy.

"If he can offer corrective therapy or refer the patient to a psychiatrist for severe problems, he may be able to avert a possible abortion or miscarriage and ease the physical burden of pregnancy."

Sweet Potato Grows a Vine

A hanging vine can be grown from a sweet potato by planting it in a hanging basket or pot of sand, then watering occasionally.

The leaves, dark green, will resemble ivy.

Want To Dance With King Hussein? Ask Him

WASHINGTON, D.C.
DEAR HERALD READERS:

Latch onto your royal prerogatives, girls, if King Hussein comes to your city.

What I mean is, if you want to twirl in the arms of an absolute monarch (he has a parliament but he has the power to dissolve it) — all you have to do is get yourself invited to a dancing party for the King. The rest is up to you.

Believe it or not, it is the Jordanian custom for women to ask the king to dance. This was announced at two dancing parties attended here by the 24-year-old Hashemite Hussein, direct descendant of the Prophet Mohammed.

Contrary to the customs of European royalty—where you not only wouldn't dream of asking a king, or the Duke of Edinburgh, say, to dance with you, but you wouldn't even speak unless first spoken to — Jordanian royalty has another system.

Back in Amman this system began perhaps for political reasons. In short, if the king asked one ambassador's wife to dance and not another, he might be afraid that the country would take it as a slight. So he avoids the problem by giving the women the prerogative.

This doesn't mean you are supposed to mob the small-statured, courageous young man described by some as the last hope of the Arab world. But this is how Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt and Mrs. Richard Sanger, wives of State Department experts; yours truly, and a flock of pretty young things his own age happened to "cut a rug" with His Majesty at the party given by Jordanian-born Washington builder, A. Joseph Howar, who constructed the Moslem mosque in this city.

Advice for a King at His Own Dinner Party
. . . Rep. Frances Bolton of Ohio and Hussein of Jordan

If the king doesn't want to dance, all he has to do is sit down (he doesn't have to wait until ladies are seated), and it is up to the hostess to see that this is smoothly possible and that there's "a majesty-looking place ready for him," said Mrs. Sanger.

How did he dance? Easily, well, and very properly, although his entourage would allow no pictures taken while he was in action . . . He's especially good at the waltz, fox trot and samba. He doesn't jitterbug, he said with a smile.

ELSEWHERE around the town:

— Gwen Cafritz desperately searching for her guest of honor at her annual Easter Day reception . . . The Cafritzes' party this year was in honor of the dean of the diplomatic corps, Nicaragua's Ambassador and Senora de Sevilla-Sacasa who stood in the receiving line with them. But the latter, sister of Nicaragua's dictator Samoza, got bored and surreptitiously slipped downstairs to the Cafritzes' built-in "night club" where the fun was going on. Her husband and hosts were fit to be tied.

Italian Ambassador Brosio awarding Republican hostess Mrs. Robert Low Bacon the Star of Solidarity for having chairmanned the Washington showing last year of Italian fashions . . . Said the polished diplomat at his embassy decorating party, "I regret not being French on such an occasion and having the opportunity of officially kissing Virginia Bacon, but I ask permission to do it unofficially." Whereupon he embraced her . . . The next day he tossed a party for Princess Pacelli, patroness of the wonderful Italian Boys Town.

"Why I can't even do that!" exclaimed Jean.

Ambassador Alphand in his "toast" talk at dinner saying, "There is something like a love story between France and the U.S. which is very different from their feeling with other countries." . . . It takes a Frenchman to put romance in international relations!

Belgian Ambassador and Baroness Silvercruys getting ready to pack up and pull out of the beautiful Belgian Embassy right after King Baudoin's visit set for May 11 . . . Louis Sheyven (pronounced Shayvenne) will be the next Belgian Ambassador to occupy the beautiful white chateau-style embassy that was built by Ray Baker and his wife Delphine Dodge, the motor heiress. It is almost an exact copy of the palatial Detroit home of Mrs. Horace Dodge.

ATHENIAN SING was held a few days ago in Neely Auditorium. Twenty campus groups participated in the sing. This included ten fraternities, eight sororities, the Independent Men, and the Nuclians. During the intermission, the audience was entertained by the Tri - Tones, a trio of girls, who were winners on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts program. The proceeds from the Athenian Sing went to the Women's Emergency Scholarship Fund, which is officiallly named after Dean of Women, Nora Chaffin.

Engineers Swing UF Election

By FRED FROHOCK
Herald Correspondent

U of F

Fred Frohock

GAINESVILLE — Surprise, surprise.

The sleeping giant of past elections, the College of Engineering, awoke with a start in last week's UF student elections and the Banner Party — 500 bloc votes down — amazingly won an election impossible to win.

Joe Ripley, Banner Party candidate and now president-elect of the student body, defeated the Campus Party's Blair Culpepper in one of the most hard-fought — and expensive — campaigns seen in years.

But more significant were the surprising facts revealed to the political powers on campus.

1. A majority of organized votes can be overcome.

2. Those that carry slide rules are not all fools.

The Banner party, caught short in bloc votes when the shuffling of fraternities and sororities halted, banked their hopes especially on the latter fact.

They concentrated their campaign on the key uncommitted group on campus: the independents, but with special, never-tried-before emphasis on the engineers.

To do this, they put independent engineers up as candidates for two of the top five offices in student government: vice president and secretary-treasurer.

They reasoned that the engineers would be disgruntled anyway after being refused money by the Student Executive Council for the Engineer's Fair — the Council being controlled at that time by the nucleus of the new Campus Party.

They couldn't have been more right.

By noon on voting day, the College of Engineering had broken its old voting record, and by closing time, 628 votes were in — 458 of which went for Ripley.

Significantly, Ripley's final margin of victory from the entire student body was only slightly more than one per cent.

The surprise interest shown by this previously ignored faction on campus is credited not only to the shrewdness of the Banner Party, however, but also to the fact that "open poop" was used for the first time in years.

Political banners could be —and were placed on almost every square inch of campus space, expensively generating inerest among the independents.

'I'll Watch the Experts From the Sidelines'

NEW YORK — Just suppose you were already top of the best dressed list, had amber eyes and a poetic 96-pound figure. You had diamonds and Diors, chinchillas and sables—your taffy hair was coiffed by Carita.

Then one morning you awoke in the pastel light of your duplex to find you were the first "Lady of Fashion." Your beloved husband (publisher of 14 newspapers, plus radio and TV stations) had bought for you the controlling interest in Vogue, and along with this, all the other Conde Nast publications which include House & Garden, Glamour, Brides in Britain, and Jeune Mariee in France.

The life of our heroine Mitzi Newhouse hasn't always been a fairy tale. She has worked hard, side by side with her husband Sam (son of a Russian immigrant) raised two sons (Si Jr. and Donald) and with ease runs their exquisite New York apartment and a charming country home in New Jersey.

We dropped in one morning to see the new owners of Conde Nast. Steaming coffee and tiny pastries were served in a small lemon-and-white Louis XIV salon, and the Brazilian butler almost kneeled while passing.

Miniature Mitzi, looking like a gentle doe, and her almost-as-small Sam, were full of their usual warmth and simplicity.

"Of course I'm excited," she said. "The magazine field is quite different from newspapers, and it seems to me that Vogue is perfection, so I prefer to watch the experts from the sideline."

Mrs. Newhouse sensibly buys her clothes twice a year (fall wardrobe in Paris) sticks to four suits and about eight cocktail and dinner dresses.

She rarely buys a long gown because her Sam doesn't like them on her. Her diet is kept strictly to 1,100 calories a day. She eats a Spartan lunch, (cottage cheese-tomato) and a good dinner with wine, and occasionally goes on ice cream binges but strictly the new low caloric type.

The photography over, Sam rushed for his overcoat and hat.

"Take it easy, dear," she admonished. He smiled, gave her a kiss and rushed out saying, "Well, you want to be married to a successful publisher!"

Our High Seas Need Traffic-Cops

BUZZING-THE-TOWN . . . In the literary world Alvin Moscow's just published "Collision Course" (Putnam) hit a bull's eye on the eve of our third marine disaster . . . With the recent luxury liners Santa Rosa and Constitution colliding with the tankers Valchem and Jalanta respectively, it seems that our high seas need a few traffic cops.

This gripping story of the Andria Doria and the Stockholm shows that mechanical devices can never quite overcome the human factor.

Mary Margaret McBride's latest autobiography "A Long Way From Missouri" (Putnam) is written in her usual easy homespun manner, and Mary never forgets to mention those rich thick fattening desserts that she ate all the way up the ladder, on her struggle for success in this town of skyscrapers . . .

The quiet exclusive Drake (now of the Zeckendorf chain) has finally succumbed to celeb-publicity. The famous Cecil Beaton has now turned his fine hand to interiors and gave a cocktail party there to show off his newly decorated suite in a Vermeer mood . . .

He does chalk walls with painted black beams, bare wood floors with the Persian rugs hung from large brass rings in the doorways.

A sofa is covered with Dutch blue silk and flanked by a pair of brilliant yellow wing chairs, and several others of the Renaissance period. On each window sill, a bright red geranium pot is framed by crisp white curtains.

Sloan Lunched With O'Dwyer

STEAM HEAT was turned off, but the gathering spots for celebrities were sizzling . . . At "21" Paramount's better-half Tilly Balaban, wearing a smart white felt hat said she was off to Rome . . . Sloan Simpson was tucked in a corner with her ex and former Mayor Bill O'Dwyer . . .

Lunching with writer Toni Howard O'Donnell, Esther (Mrs. Ed) Anthony reminded us that two years back we had discussed her wedding gift of a connubial couch to her new daughter-in-law Doris O'Donnell (Toni's niece) saying that if the marriage didn't work she wanted the bed returned.

"Well," said Esther, "I'm getting it back."

Thursday night's audience for "Don Carlos" at the Met just wasn't chic, but Verdi we love.

Lady Suzanne Wilkins called to tell us that her late explorer husband's ashes were finally scattered at the very north of the North Pole . . . The memorial services were conducted from the U.S.S. "Skate" by Cmdr. James F. Calvert.

GRAPEFRUIT WAS ODDITY

At the turn of the century, the grapefruit had great snob appeal. It was a curiosity, and only the elite had tasted it in expensive restaurants in big cities.

Art Works On Display

Color Goes To Your Feet

Color is the keynote in spring and summer shoes.

The perennial patent and smooth kid vie for honors with a brighter navy, balenciaga brown, bone beige, bright clear red, and a grayed yellow green.

Persian pink, white, turquoise, yellow, mauve, orange, bright blue and red violet strike other bright notes in the post-Easter parade.

Are We Spoiling Our Children?

Materially...

Jeanne Voltz

by being given too many material possessions.

"If the child is spoiled, he's deprived," she says.

The Mother of Nine agrees that "children can be overindulged or underindulged without hurting them if they are loved and secure."

Her older children get 25 cents a week allowance, not enough to cover a movie plus popcorn. They don't seem to feel especially deprived because they have to borrow on next week's allowance for a movie.

The Mother of Four's 17-year-old son has had and sold a car. His father got a loan from his credit union to buy the car. But the teenager paid for it from earnings from a part-time job.

After a few months he asked to sell it. With insurance, payments and repairs it took all his money.

"He had to get it out of his system strictly on his own," says his mother.

The Mother of Nine's 13-year-old son is an enthusiastic skin diver. Some skin diving is expensive for a family of moderate means.

He mowed lawns to earn money for skin diving equipment.

* * *

DON'T EXPECT LOVE in exchange for giving a child things, and you can't spoil him by giving, thinks the Mother of Three.

The Publicist says the idea of not buying things for children just for the sake of depriving is unsound.

"I don't care how much something costs, we give it to our daughters if it has utility," she said. And that utility may be only in giving the children happiness.

And the Author thinks a Society of Things may not be permanent.

"Americans are terribly restless about this," he says. "Look at these parents! And when Americans know the chips are down they get up and dig the Panama Canal through it."

These are the people who did the questioning:

JEANNE VOLTZ, homemaking editor, and her husband Luther, editorial writer, have two teenagers, a boy and a girl. They live in Coconut Grove.

ELEANOR HART, who conducts The Herald's Column With a Heart in which readers seek advice on problems, has a teenage girl and boy. She and her husband, Noel Ratelle, a marine mechanic, live in the northwest section.

DON SHOEMAKER, editor of the editorial page, is the father of a 7-year-old daughter. The Shoemakers live in Miami Shores.

FREDERIC SHERMAN, real estate editor, has two boys, 12 and 7. The Shermans live on Key Biscayne.

In Learning...

By Don Shoemaker

Don Shoemaker

Do we spoil our children in school?

Do we spoil them at home by overindulgence in TV? Movies? By demanding too little of them in cultural achievement?

And do we spoil them in a more subtle way — by failing to provide adequate schools and teaching staffs?

Most parents in the panel (and some among the questioners) tend to believe that they don't spoil their own children in any wise—but, oh, those neighbors!

Which is to say, probably, that the answer to most of the questions above is at least a tentative Yes.

* * *

THE BUSINESS MAN THINKS the trouble is that "we want teachers to raise our children." The Author is a little stronger in his feelings:

"In effect we starve teachers and treat them like dogs . . . The teaching wage scale shows that we, the American adults, really have contempt for education and the arts."

Yet the Mother of Nine thinks the well-regulated home makes up for deficiencies, if any, in school.

"We have fixed periods for homework," she says. "The children need an ample play period after being confined in school. But after that we have an hour to an hour and a half of supervised homework."

Her husband helps her with the studying brood.

However, the Author gets an echo from the Publicist. Though his children are not of school age, he observes that teachers "are dedicated people . . . but not responsible because they are paid less."

"In my book, says the Architect's Wife, "two people can sit in that rocking chair on Cloud 9. They are the teacher and the nurse."

* * *

WHAT SHOULD WE DEMAND of our children in their quality of classwork?

The Mother of Three, whose oldest child has finished her formal education and whose youngest is in junior high school, suggests that we spoil our children by demanding too much of them.

"If my children get C's," she says, "I'm happy. That's average."

"Don't worry about art and music," says the Mother of Nine. "Either the child has the aptitude, or it hasn't. I always look on the effort side of the report card. That's the important one."

Some condemn, some uphold the practice of "paying" children for making good grades. Evidently it's a common practice.

But the Mother of Four demurs. "We are the only family in our neighborhood that does not pay its children for A's. I think we're right. I think the other way is overindulgence of the worst sort."

* * *

HOW MANY FAMILIES read together?

"I have always urged my daughter to read anything she wishes," says the Author.

"If parents read, so will the children," says the Social Worker."

"We are a reading family," says one mother. "We enjoy our books together.

"One bad thing about it, however, is that children chide other children who read. They call them 'brains.' Of course, adults are just as bad."

One family has a youngster who wants to be a baseball player. "He wouldn't read, and we didn't make him," says the mother. "But we got him interested in a book on baseball, and then he drifted to other books."

* * *

WHAT ABOUT DISCIPLINE in schools. Are children being over-indulged there?

Not much, if at all — according to the panel.

But most agree that there are too many activities after school. These tend to get beyond control, so that mothers are racing hither and yon in an attempt to keep up with their childrens' activities.

AND TV?

"Children spend more time with TV than with anybody in the house," says the Business Man.

All the panel does not agree with this. Some ignore it. While those who have it concede that it can be a form of spoiling their children, none admits to over-indulgence.

* * *

Or Ourselves?

By Frederic Sherman

Frederic Sherman

You can start with the question of whether a child can be spoiled.

If you assume it can be done, you then must search long and hard for the parent who is willing to admit his children are the victims of overindulgence.

Those kids down the street are being spoiled rotten. Our own youngsters are given certain privileges only after they have demonstrated a great sense of responsibility.

As it gets more troublesome to find baby sitters, you tell yourself your 10-year-old son is really mature enough to be left alone with the 5-year-old brother.

After all, television will keep them occupied and out of trouble. And you can always call about 9 o'clock to make sure they have gotten off to bed.

When you get home around midnight, maybe the kitchen lights are on and the living room rug is askew. But the children are sleeping peacefully and it was probably the dog that skidded on the rug.

It gives you a great deal of satisfaction to feel that older son is right there taking charge of things when you have to be out for the evening.

It does until the younger one, brimming with guilt feelings and a desire to attract some attention, blurts out at breakfast, "Charlie tried to burn me with a match and chased me all over the house."

And the older boy, the one who had demonstrated all that sense of responsibility, snaps back at the 5-year-old level with, "Well he started it."

It is then that you realize you are spoiling yourself.

* * *

THE TV SET GOES ON early Saturday morning and stays on until 11 o'clock because it gives you the chance to sleep late. The car is purchased for the 16-year-old because it saves all that chauffeuring.

The man who can afford every whim complains, "We do too much for the children but I don't know how we got into the whirl. It would be different if we were living in a small town, but life is just different here in Miami."

The woman with nine children doesn't worry about it. Salary limitations are tight reins on rights and privileges.

But she says, "You can overindulge or underindulge your children and it won't hurt them a bit if there is a warm feeling of family affection in the home."

And discipline. Everybody agrees the children have to have it. Not only do they need, they welcome it. A mother put it best: "Discipline is a reassurance of security."

When we stop at a red light, we are demonstrating both a fear of reprimand and a respect for rules that protect us.

* * *

THERE IS MUCH TALK of spending more time with the children and there are assorted excuses for not doing it.

The iconoclassical writer doesn't offer any excuses.

"You have to be a father, not a pal. Children are too protected these days by fearful parents. Let the kids run faster and fall harder.

"The only goal should be children who will grow into mature adults. This is the only real form of immortality."

* * *

BUT AFTER ALL THE HOURS of talk about how much allowance money, how much leeway on the family car, how much TV and how many new dresses, you have not found the answer to the big question:

"Is my child spoiled?"

So you ask him.

He answers in 12-year-old style, "What do you mean? That I get too much? Well, you can't say it's being spoiled if all the other guys get to do it. I don't mean allowances because some fathers make more money.

"But if everybody is doing something and I get to do it, then it's not being spoiled."

But how do you give your child the courage to be different?

Says the writer, "Parents must have the nerve to be different before their children can have the courage."

Who Said Germans Like Sauerkraut?

BONN — (WNS) — German women are calling for a propaganda campaign to convince the world that they are not "sauerkraut eaters."

In a poll of West Germany, only 3 per cent of the women listed sauerkraut among their favorite dishes.

The dishes they favored were pork sausages, soups, boiled beef and pastry.

"Tastes are changing as fast as the German woman's figure is slimming," explained dietician Frieda Haupt.

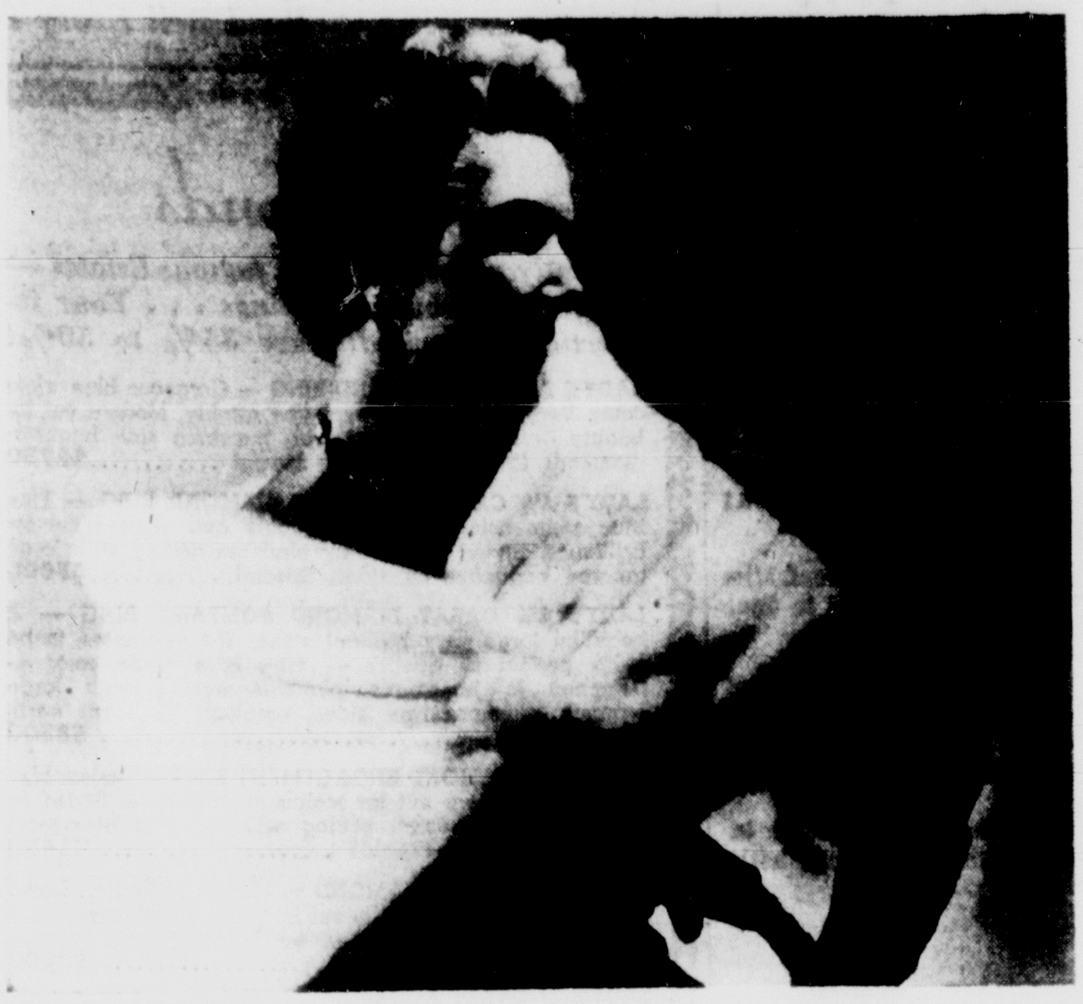
Warm Weather Furs



Small Mutation Mink Shoulder Covering

. . . is one answer to wrap for air-conditioning

By BEVERLEY WILSON
Herald Fashion Editor

Here's a problem of etiquette that's probably more frustrating in Miami Beach than anywhere else in the country. What to do with your elegant mink wrap, when it's really too warm to wear it.

Even such a fur enthusiast as John Bacher, who founded one of the very first fur salons here around 1932, agrees it's poor taste to wrap yourself in your mink when the temperature hovers at 80-degrees.

But enter air conditioning, to cloud the etiquette picture in a way Emily Post never dreamed of.

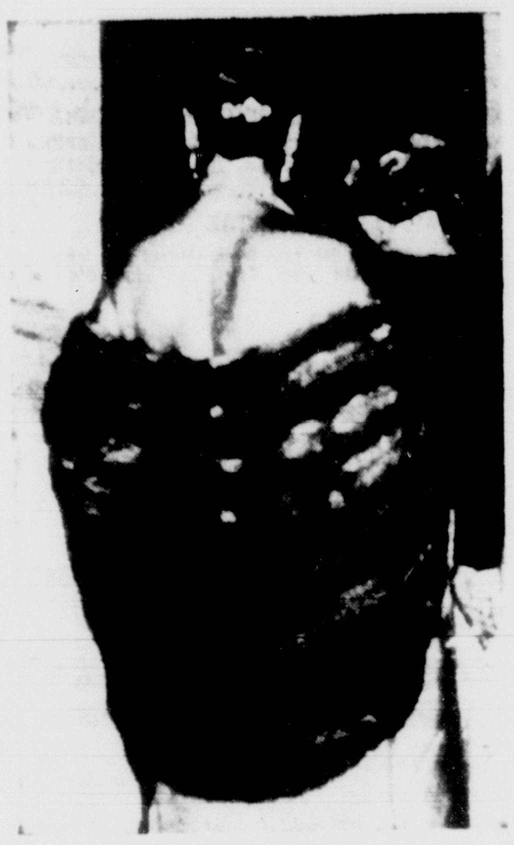
The vast number of air-conditioned hotels, restaurants and private clubs in the Miami area, some of them kept at deep freeze temperatures, makes some sort of cover-up necessary — once you're indoors.

Answer, says Mr. Bacher, is a brief little shoulder wrap, such as the chic mink pictured—decorative and warm, but not overly conspicuous.

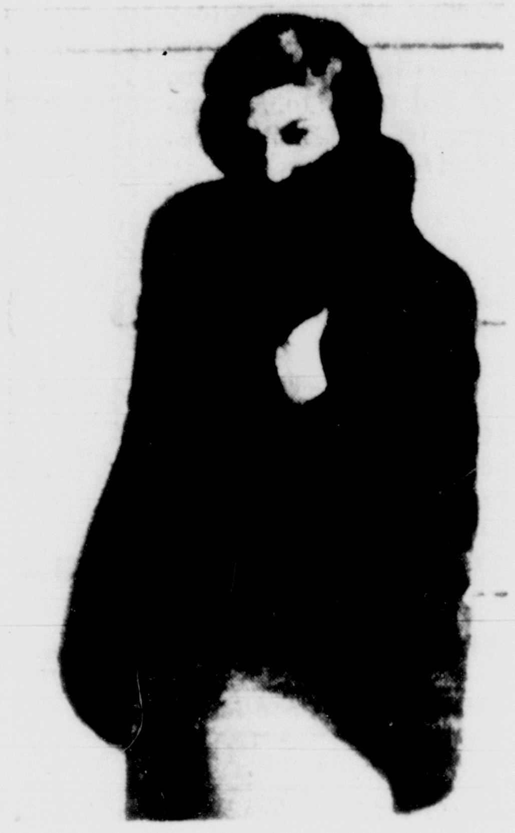
If you still prefer to carry the omnipresent sweater, you might follow the lead of Palm Beach fashion plate Mrs. Winston Guest, and have the sweater lined in ermine for over-the-chair interest.

Mr. Bacher is an expert at coping with problems of furs and climates. When he first brought his fur salon down from New York to Miami Beach's Flamingo Hotel in the early 1930's, Florida's winter temperature was generally even milder than it is now. Air-conditioning was unheard of. And fur pieces were hip-length and all-embracing, as attested to in the accompanying picture, taken at the old Coral Gables Biltmore Hotel in 1936.

Yet, women were as irrepressible about wearing their furs as they are now.



HOW TO WEAR a mink wrap when it's really too warm is demonstrated by woman entering a Miami Beach hotel on a balmy evening this past winter.



EXPECTING SNOW? No, it was a warm night in 1936 when this picture was taken at the old Coral Gables Biltmore Hotel.

White Gloves Give Her Away

By her mink stole or jacket, you can tell an American woman in Paris.

But if she left the mink at her hotel one day, a careful observer could still pick her out by her gloves.

Her omnipresent white glove for daytime is a rarity among Parisians.

Do Teens Help Out at Home?

Do today's teens have household chores?

There's been a rumor going round—probably since Grandma's day—that teenagers today don't perform household tasks anymore. They're so busy with club and social life, as well as school work, that they beg off things like dishwashing.

Today's Herald Teen Panel, which alternates at Dade County's public schools, talks about this "home work" rumor.

By JEAN WARDLOW
Herald Staff Writer

Do teens have household chores to do? My, my yes. But they vary, according to this week's Herald Teen Panel.

"I think a lot of parents feel they're being protective of their children, that they're too delicate," said a Tech High girl. She's a girl who does most of the womanly chores in her own home because of an invalid mother.

But a Miami High girl immediately replied, "I think most parents just leave it up to the kids. And really, going to school takes a lot out of you."

And another Tech High girl said in agreement, "It depends a lot on the home situation as far as how many chores you have to do."

"I know my parents are interested primarily in my education," said a Miami High boy, "in my making good grades and preparing for college.

"So they leave it up to me to allot my own time. Their first preference is my getting as good an education as possible."

"You can't do anything at night," said a boy panelist. "You have too much homework. Mine has almost doubled from last year."

He said that he's expected to "keep my room straight" and "help around the house," which includes "setting the table, things like that."

Other panelists said that younger brothers or sisters tend to these chores, or take turns with them, but claimed his didn't help — "I'll trade you two marbles for my little brother," he said jokingly to another panelist. Complaints that younger brother or sister don't do their share came from two other panelists, too.

* * *

ONE BOY pointed out that "the kids don't have a lot of free time like most people think. You're lucky just to get to sit down and relax because of clubs, the stress put on homework, sports activities . . . Lots of afternoons I don't even get home until six."

Another boy added that when the weekends come he has, in addition, two jobs — a bagger in a food store, and working for an aircraft maintenance company.

But both boys said that their household chores include cutting the lawn, running errands for their parents and cleaning their rooms, making their beds.

The girls seemed to have daily jobs to do, although they, too, varied.

"My mother is pretty busy," said one girl, referring to her mother's community and club work, "so I have a lot to do." Her jobs include vacuuming, making beds "and I cook when my mother's running late."

Another girl's mother works. "It all depends on who gets home first," she said explaining what her chores are. They include dish washing, making beds.

A Tech High girl said that "my mother is ill and I have everything to do . . . all the responsibility is on myself." Meal planning and preparing, household clean-ups are daily chores for her. And weekends include heavier cleaning as well as laundry.

So when it comes to household chores, teens are right in there working — even when they have outside money-making jobs.

What Are Teens' Jobs?

These are the household jobs which today's Herald Teen Panelists do every week — not all of them, for "chore schedules" differed in each case:

Clean room
Make beds
Wash and /or dry dishes
Help prepare dinner
Cook dinner
Run errands
Vacuum
Do laundry for family
Do yard work

Only one job did all the panelists have in common — clean their rooms. This is a usual Saturday job.

CJA Names 'E' Day

Sunday, April 19, is "E" Day on the calendars of the Combined Jewish Appeal for that's the day Mrs. Meyer Eggnatz will direct a city-wide, door-to-door solicitation.

Mrs. Eggnatz

More than 2,000 women have volunteered to ring door bells on "E" Day, named for the 1959 exodus of refugees from eastern European countries. According to CJA Chairman Jack Carner a substantial portion of CJA funds are allocated for the rescue and resettlement of these refugees in Israel and other free countries.

Mrs. Eggnatz, a board member of Temple Beth Sholom and honorary president of Mt. Sinai Auxiliary, conducted a similar campaign in Baltimore in 1948, 1949 and 1950. Sunday's campaign will extend from Golden Shores to South Miami. Mrs. Yaakov Rosenberg is vice chairman for Miami and Mrs. Jean C. Lehman is vice chairman for Miami Beach.

HIBISCUS AND CANDLEGLOW make it a romantic night for Bunny Barnes who dated South Miamian Dexter Coffman vacationing from Admiral Farragut. They were among 125 teenagers helping Barbara celebrate.

Socialites Relax on Andros

By MARGOT SANBORN
Herald Columnist

ANDROS TOWN, Bahamas — We were maneuvered out of our usual hectic routine by our sea going pals Aline and Addison Vars for a week end at Andros on their beautifully appointed yacht Stirling III. The boat is so fancy it even has an organ on board that actually works!

At all resorts there is a best moment in the day. At Andros Town it's sailing back to the yacht club with a hefty catch of fish aboard, smelling better than any other fish because they've been caught by you!

Swedish multi-millionaire Dr. Axel Wenner-Gren, who owns over 100,000 acres on Andros, is financing the resort's Lighthouse Club and the nearby homesite development. He is here for a fortnight with his brilliant and chic spouse, Kansas City born Marguerite. She has mastered the Swedish language so thoroughly she's published three books of poetry in Swedish (that's not easy even for a Swede) . . . with them are their houseguests Evelyn and Alexander P. de Seversky, the famous flyer. "Sasha," as he's affectionately called by his friends, is seriously considerng Andros as a site to settle. "The Jet has brought the world so much closer I'll be able to commute to N.Y. and Washington in practically no time," he explains.

* * *

On our arrival we found the Lighthouse jumping with the social set living it up luxuriously and comfortably. Nassau was well represented by Stafford and Winnie Sands here on their yacht Enchantress. That's the yacht, incidentally, that Princess Margaret went off on for a few days of relaxation on her last visit to Nassau. The Sands' pretty teenage daughter Teddy and three of her chums from Westminster School in Atlanta — Lyn Murphy, Sallie Simmonds and Amy Card — were along. Stafford, who usually avoids the frivolous, cut up a few fancy steps with Winnie. She holds many world's records in the piscatorial department and, incidentally, is the only woman who will compete in the coming Cat Cay Tuna Tournament.

Young and old alike joined in the impromptu shenanigans. The younger members had a limbo contest, but had no limbo bar so one was improvised using a broom. Others who got into the spirit of the gay atmosphere were Campbell Greendige in sartorial splendor, doing a mean calypso and personable publisher Alan Gould, giving a quasi pro rendition of the Whiffenpoof song with every one joining in the chorus.

"Lord if you can't help me, please don't help that grizzly bear" was one of the old native numbers which also almost broke up the show! Towards evening's end many of the guests went to Coakley Town just across the water from the select resort, where the native population cuts loose with the customary Fire Dance!

* * *

On board some of the yachts docked at the club were Ogden Phipps on the Vergemere with their outriggered fishing boat Cynthia in tow. From Cleveland were the Willis Clarks on the Joker III. Martin Vogel of Washington, D.C. was on the Broadview III.

Socially prominent Dayton, Ohio, industrialist Louis Polk has been commuting in his huge plane between Dayton, Nassau and Andros while his very comely bride sops up the sun. Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Horn have taken one of the cottages for a month with their three small fry.

Other distinguished visitors on the island were His Excellency the Governor Sir Raynor Arthur and Lady A houseguesting at Grey Walls with Capt. and Mrs. Peter Wilson. The Harold Hacketts of N.Y. and Westhampton Beach, L.I., N.Y. (he's board chairman of Official Films) here for a month of relaxation? (who cares, there's always Pierre, the Swedish masseur) . . .

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Milligan of Evanston, Ill., flew in on a private plane with the Harry Moirs of Glencoe, Ill. and Norman Curice of Minneapolis. First time visitors to the Bahamas are the Fred Pullmans of Chicago, Ill., (vice president of Northern Trust Co.) who arrived by plane, as did genial W. M. Jarman (Chairman of General Shoe Corp.) with Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Mills (Exec. V.P. of National Life Insurance Co.). They all hail from Nashville, Tenn.

Transplanted Yankee: 'I Despise Coffees'

By AMY VANDERBILT

"DEAR MISS VANDERBILT:

As a transplanted Yankee, I would like to express my opinion of the prevalent method of entertaining here — 'the coffee'.

"Frankly, I despise them. The hours are usually from ten to eleven-thirty, which means that if you do your own housework, you have to drop your chores, struggle into your best bib and tucker, and if you live in a large city, perhaps drive some distance.

Amy Vanderbilt

"When you arrive you are presented with a cup of coffee and a nickle-sized doughnut or sweet roll.

"You try to make conversation with several strangers — for almost invariably your hostess has chosen this measly means of repaying her invitations and social debts.

"How much more 'gracious' to entertain in the afternoon when her guests are more free to enjoy themselves. Their household tasks are behind them and they are ready to get dressed up and enjoy a little socializing, too.

"Truly, I am no chowhound, but if I invite guests to my home for a gathering that calls for my best silver and china, I like to honor them with something a little more elaborate than what is generally served at a 'coffee'. Frankly, I think the 'coffee' rates with the cocktail party — the cheapest and easiest way to get rid of one's social obligations.

J. A., AMARILLO, TEXAS.'

When I was in Texas, I couldn't understand either how so many attractive young women could be on hand, dressed in their best at eleven o'clock when everyone assured me that household help is practically impossible to get.

However, when I asked about it, I was told that most of the houses from which the young women came were air-conditioned and, therefore, virtually dustproof.

It was a matter of making the beds and putting the dishes into the dishwasher and they were finished for the morning.

Many told me, too, that their children were on three shifts in school and that this kind of morning entertainment was more convenient for the mothers than anything in the afternoon.

It is nice indeed to entertain in kind, if you can, but if you can't for one reason or another, any kind of entertainment that you can conviently manage can keep your social life shining. This includes coffees. Some contact is better than none at all. Don't you agree?

Child Mistreated? Pick Up Phone

By MARGARET ANDERSON

COLOGNE — (WNS) — In this Rhineland capital anyone observing a child being mistreated knows just what to do — telephone 43-43-89.

This is the telephone number of the local office of Germany's Federation for the Protection of Children. This nationwide organization, with headquarters in Hamburg, has 96 chapters in the larger German cities.

Every chapter has a full-time staff of physician, psychologist, lawyer and nurses who minister to mistreated moppets — mistreated in the majority of cases by their parents.

Ludwig Hitz, chairman of the Northrhine Westphalia state organization, reports that every telephone call, every letter (nearly all anonymous) are carefully sifted by the childcare federation.

Why is the Federation necessary — why not let the authorities protect the children? Hitz explains:

"Few persons will report child mistreatment directly to the officials — there is a fear of 'officialdom' in Germany. Too, it is a matter of sheer volume. You would be surprised how much child mistreatment goes on."

Hitz is scornful of the "little monster" tag. "The parents are the monsters in most of the cases we handle," he says. "And we get some hair-raising cases."

Hitz' "angels," as some mistreated children have called them, act in effect as intermediary between barbarous parents and the authorities.

No More Foggy Letters

Members of Coral Gables Chapter, National Secretaries Association, shouldn't write "foggy" letters after Monday.

That is when Mrs. Lucille Bussell, training supervisor for the Southern Bell Telephone Co., will give the secretaries a short course on how to write short, clear letters.

"Foggy" letters, according to the company-developed course on writing, are those with long words and longer sentences. Mrs. Bussell will explain the formula for taking a "fog count" and give the ten check points for a better letter.

The program starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Southern Bell office in Coral Gables, 250 Alhambra Circle.

Secretaries and all office personnel are invited to the workshop, but if you don't attend and could use the ten points to check your letters, they are:

Be concise. Use short sentences. Avoid repetitions. Avoid rephrasings. Be natural. Be specific. Be direct. Use active verbs. Be affirmative. Write and rewrite, then rewrite again.

'Was Our Daughter Wrong?'

By ANN LANDERS

Landers
Ann

DEAR ANN:

Our 17-year-old daughter fancies herself an authority on all subjects. Please decide for us who is wrong.

Recently we invited an exchange student for dinner. We also invited the school principal, my husband's boss and his wife. I was mortified when I noticed our daughter had tucked a napkin under her chin and was vigorously mopping up gravy with her bread.

Now, Mrs. Landers, Marie was reared with the best of everything. She never in her life saw such behavior at OUR table. I caught the boss' wife staring at her, obviously shocked.

Then I saw the exchange student at my daughter's left, also with a napkin under her chin, mopping up gravy. It became apparent Marie was attempting to keep the foreign girl company with these atrocious manners.

The next morning I told Marie she behaved like a boor, that she should have corrected the ignorant foreigner and should not have put herself on the same low level.

Marie said the girl trembled with fright when she discovered no one else was eating like that. Her thought was to make the guest comfortable.

I say Marie owed it to her parents to use the manners she was reared with.

AMERICA'S FIRST SETTLER

DEAR FIRST SETTLERS
(You're Indians, of course):

Sometimes we can learn from our children, and this is one of those times. Mother.

Your daughter demonstrated character and humility when she placed feelings ahead of etiquette.

Your reference to the "ignorant foreigner" exposed your ignorance. Manners vary according to country. In China a loud belch is a compliment to the cook.

A 17-year-old with such solid values is a credit to her parents. Be proud of her.

Strict Schedule for Royal Wedding

Crown Prince Akihito and his commoner fiancee, Michiko Shoda
. . . look at a photo album in his Tokyo mansion

By RONALD P. KRISS

TOKYO — (UPI) — The Japanese, known around the world as perfectionists with a railway timetable, are applying a touch of their famed precision to the April 10 wedding day of Crown Prince Akihito.

A crowded schedule faces Akihito and his commoner fiancee, Michiko Shoda, and it leaves little room for delays.

An error in timing could, for example, upset the police department's detailed plans for keeping order among the one million spectators expected to line the 5.5-mile wedding procession route. It could also create a nightmarish traffic snarl.

The day officially begins for Akihito at 9:10 a.m., when he leaves for the Imperial Palace, and ends at 9 p.m., when he and his bride place offerings of rice cakes before a Shinto altar in his temporary residence, Togu Palace.

For Michiko the day begins hours earlier, probably before sunrise. She must leave her home in southern Tokyo by 6:30 a.m. for the drive to the Imperial Palace in the center of the city.

Those extra hours are to give Michiko, like any woman, time to dress.

Michiko will go directly to the Kuretakeryo, or black bamboo hall, within the moated palace. There she will spend more than two-and-one-half hours in the ritual act of donning the "junihitoe," the traditional 12-layered wedding gown.

Akihito, like many western bridegrooms, will not see his bride-to-be until moments before the ceremony. He will arrive at the palace at 9:25 and put on his wedding robes.

Michiko will join him at 9:40 a.m., and the couple will then walk together down a Z-shaped corridor to the sacred, cloistered Imperial sanctuary, the Kashikodokoro.

At 10 a.m., the ancient Shinto wedding rites will get underway. After the 15-minute ceremony the newlyweds will retrace their steps along the Z-shaped corridor, while the 1,000 guests scheduled to attend the ceremony will leave the sanctuary.

At 10:45, Akihito and his princess will return to the sanctuary to perform Shinto rituals before the koreiden, the shrine of the imperial ancestors and the shinden, on tabernacle.

Then they will return to the black bamboo hall, where they will spend three hours changing clothes — Akihito to swallow tails, Michiko to an off-the-shoulder cocktail dress — and eating lunch.

At 2 p.m. the imperial couple will report their marriage to the Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako in the Nishinoma, or the west room, on the third floor of the imperial household agency building. This 20-minute ceremony is known as the choken-no-gi.

Akihito and Michiko will drive through the palace gates and across Nijubashi, the stone double bridge, at 2:30, in a gilt-and-maroon carriage drawn by four bay horses.

Most Japanese will get their only glimpse of the wedding day ceremonies during the 50-minute procession of the newlyweds from the Imperial Palace to Akihito's Palace.

The couple will drive for one mile along the outer edge of the moat, swing west until they reach the Yotsuya district, then head south, skirting the outer garders of the Meiji shrine — where the spirit of Akihito's great-grandfather, the Emperor Meiji, is said to reside — until they reach Togu Palace.

Two more ceremonies await the imperial couple before they can call the time their own. At 4 p.m. they will exchange cups of wine. Five hours later, they will place rice cakes in front of a Shinto altar. Then they're free — for the rest of the day, that is.

The Stocky Scholar Who Played Cupid

Dr. Shinzo Koizumi

TOKYO—(AP)—When Crown Prince Akihito marries his pretty commoner Friday there will be no more joyful person in this joyful nation than a stocky scholar with a war-scarred face.

He is 70-year-old Dr. Shinzo Koizumi, who played cupid to the prince's romance with Michiko Shoda, the flour miller's daughter.

Dr. Koizumi, former university president and private tutor to Akihito for the past 10 years, was instrumental in smoothing the way for the choice of a commoner as Japan's next empress.

When Akihito expressed interest in Miss Shoda, whom he met playing tennis in August, 1957, it was Koizumi who acted as the middle man in getting her reluctant parents to agree to a marriage.

He visited the Shodas to request postponement of decision on any proposals for the hand of their 24-year-old daughter.

After the young couple had become officially engaged, Takeshi Usami, director general of the imperial household board, told parliament that it had been an arranged match, one in which Michiko had been approved by court officials.

The statement caused very few of the young generation of Japanese to abandon their love match concept of the engagement. It was widely assumed that Usami, as head of the imperial bride selection committee, had a position to uphold and a tradition to maintain.

Michiko had, of course, been screened along with thousands of other young ladies on the committee's list. And she had been approved by the board as basically eligible.

But very few persons think it likely the match would have come off so smoothly without Koizumi's persuasive efforts.

No Easy Cure for Phobias

SUMMIT, N.J. — (WNS) — Are you afraid of heights? Closed spaces? Open spaces? Darkness?

Do you tremble and lose your voice when you get up to speak before a group?

If you are overcome by any of these sensations, you are suffering from a phobia.

Phobias, says Dr. O. Spurgeon English of Temple University Medical Center, are very similar to the nightmare state of a child. "A phobia never springs up capriciously or without full cause. It appears only in an individual who has suffered much anxiety."

Neither encouragement nor tranquilizers will cure a phobia, Dr. English advises.

"Phobias are not cured by waiting for them to disappear, nor by semihumorous admonition to 'just forget about it and go ahead.'

"The patient must be shown that his phobia is a personality problem with the crux his isolation and lack of faith in others to care for and protect him."

Quick Dinners—from the Pantry Shelf

A Souffle Supper Inspired by Bounty of Your Pantry Shelf
. . . with stewed tomatoes and, in foreground, vegetable salad

By Jeanne Voltz

Herald Homemaking Editor

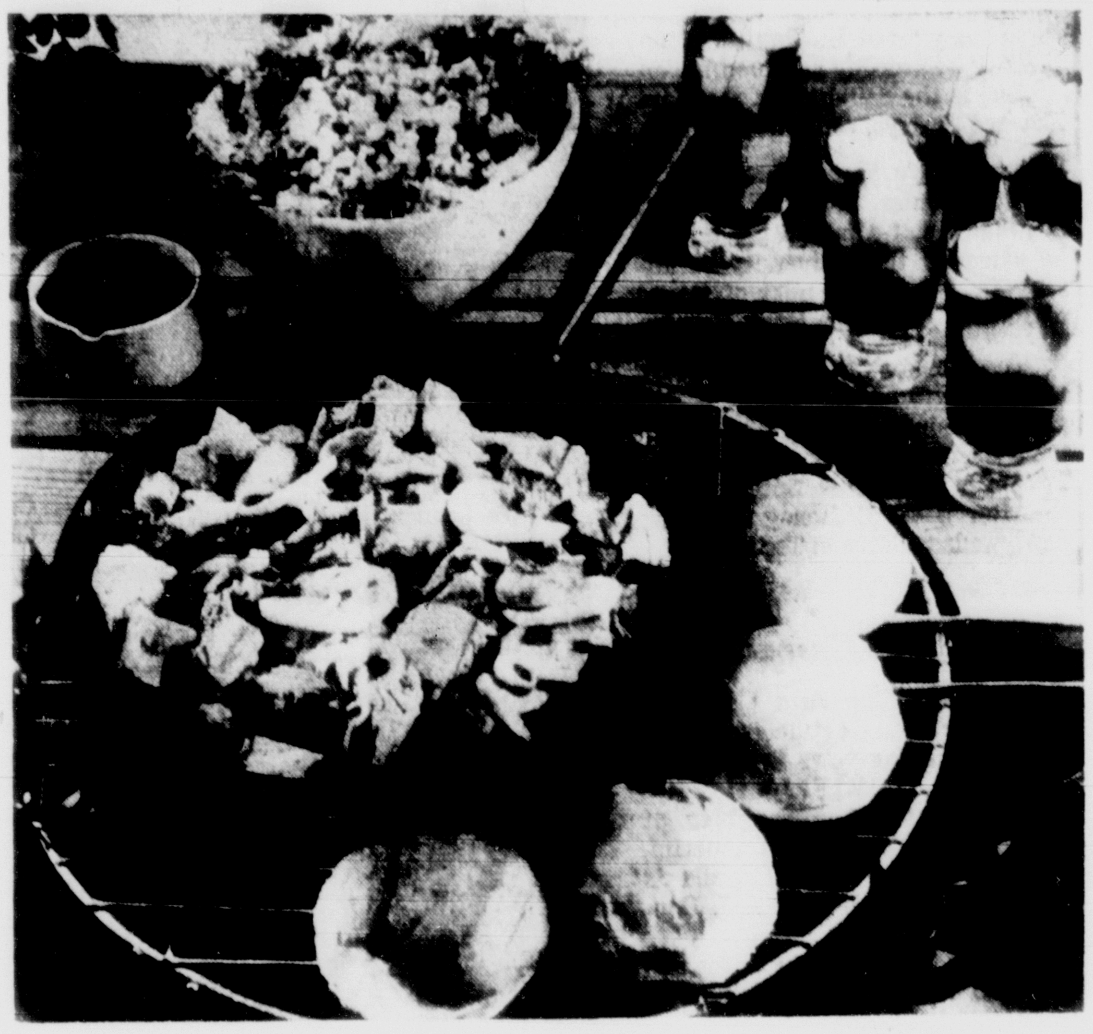
Anybody, well 'most anybody, can proуce a good supper with lots of time to plan it and go to the supermarket.

But it takes ingenuity to whip up supper on short notice using food on hand. Plans change at the last minute and you eat at home, after all, rather than go out. Or two extra mouths show up—and lamb chops will stretch just so far.

All kinds of emergencies can crop up. And here's where a pantry shelf comes to the rescue.

Old Mother Hubbard would never have made a go of short notice meals. For a variety of foods on the pantry shelf is the first step. But second, and maybe more important, is using pantry shelf foods with imagination.

On this page are two pantry shelf suppers. Foods in them are basically staple, but woven into menus you'd be proud to serve to guests.



Spur of the Moment Barbecue Also Can Come from Pantry
. . . canned tuna to serve on buns with a spicy barbecue sauce

Cook's Choice Pantry Shelf Supper

This is a "cook's choice" because the main dish, an elegant souffle, can be made with whatever is on hand. It can be canned fish, cooked or canned chicken, turkey or meat or cheese.

Cook's Choice Pantry Shelf Supper

PANTRY SHELF SOUFFLE
STEWED TOMATOES
VEGETABLE SUPPER SALAD
CHILLED APRICOTS, COOKIES

A souffle always makes an impression. But it isn't difficult—providing guests are assembled to eat the moment it is served.

PANTRY SHELF SOUFFLE

4 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
½ cup mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
4 tablespoons milk
1 to 1¼ cups canned flaked fish, minced chicken or turkey, chopped meat or grated cheese
4 eggs whites
1 to 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 teaspoon minced onion

Gently stir flour, salt and pepper into mayonnaise. (Beating or overmixing will cause curdling but will not affect the final product.) Add milk slowly. Stir in fish, poultry, meat or cheese and seasonings (suggested below). Beat egg whites until stiff. Gently fold mayonnaise mixture into egg whites until thoroughly blended. Fold in parsley and onion. Pour into a greased 7-inch casserole and bake in a slow over (325 degrees) 40 to 45 minutes. Serve at once. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

SUGGESTED SEASONINGS: with fish, 1 teaspoon lemon or lime juice; with poultry, dash of nutmeg or paprika; with meat, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce or dash of dry mustard; with cheese, dash of cayenne or dash of hot pepper sauce.

Stewed Tomatoes

There are two schools of thought on stewed tomatoes. One uses sugar, salt and maybe a sprinkle of basil. The other calls for garlic, salt, lots of black pepper and NO sugar.

Simmer tomatoes with your choice of seasonings until most of the liquid is evaporated, then toss in a few cubes of bread to thicken and simmer a few minutes longer.

Vegetable Supper Salad

1 1-pound can green lima beans
3 tablespoons French dressing
⅓ cup mayonnaise
1 small onion, sliced
1 cup chopped celery
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 1-pound can whole kernel corn
Lettuce or other greens
Green pepper strips

Drain beans and mix with French dressing. Chill in refrigerator 15 minutes. Mix onion, celery, salt and pepper with mayonnaise. Drain corn and add to mayonnaise mixture. Chill in refrigerator. Combine bean and corn mixtures. Arrange salad over greens in bowl. Garnish with green pepper strips. Makes 6 servings.

Pantry Shelf Barbecue

The tuna barbecue is done in a skillet, so can be cooked outdoors or in the kitchen. No buns? Chunks of French bread or plain white bread, toasted if you like, stand in nicely.

Pantry Shelf Barbecue

BARBECUED TUNA BUNS
GARDEN VEGETABLE SALAD
ICE CREAM WITH FROZEN
STRAWBERRY SAUCE

And any cook who has faced an emergency can figure out canned fruit for dessert if the freezer doesn't hold ice cream or strawberries.

Barbecued Tuna Buns

2 7 ounce cans solid pack tuna
⅓ cup sliced green onions
¼ pound mushrooms, sliced
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon celery salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 medium-size lemon or lime, sliced
2 tablespoons French dressing
½ cup catsup
¼ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
8 hamburger buns, split in half

Drain tuna, reserving 2 tablespoons oil. Heat tuna oil. Add gree onion, mushrooms, salt, celery salt and pepper. Cook until lightly browned. Add tuna and lemon and cook 5 minutes.

Combine French dressing, catsup, chili sauce and brown sugar. Mix well. Heat to serving temperature in a small saucepan. Meanwhile toast buns. Remove lemon from tuna mixture. Arrange tuna mixture on toasted buns. Top with tomato mixture. Makes 8 servings.

Garden Vegetable Salad

2 cans mixed vegetables, drained, or 2 packages frozen mixed vegetables, cooked and drained
½ cup French dressing
Crisp salad greens

Combine drained vegetables and French dressing. Toss gently to coat well. Chill in refrigerator 30 minutes. Drain well and arrange on crisp salad greens. Makes 8 servings.

Are Face Creams Over-rated?
by Helen F. Porter

Helen F. Porter

As a beauty consultant for many years, I've tried almost every face cream . . . creams with vitamins, queen bee jelly, hormone creams, medicated creams, and on and on.

Most of these creams have a catch-phrase ingredient which is played up in advertising, and a greasy ingredient which coats the skin surface to give the appearance of smoothness.

If you're like me, with a tendency toward dry skin and its resulting premature lines and wrinkles, you've probably found that almost any cream does some good, but you've never been really satisfied.

Recently, I was asked to try a new face cream which, as usual, contained a unique ingredient — this time essential polyunsaturates, a long word for important natural elements found in young, healthy skin.

The research director who developed this cream told me how, for years, scientists have known the value to the skin of these essential polyunsaturates, but have been unable to put them into cream form because they turned rancid and lost their potency. He told me how his staff discovered the way to "stabilize" polyunsaturates in a cream. While other creams may contain some polyunsaturates, in this cream they are stabilized so they stay fresh and potent.

I have been using this light, greaseless cream for over a month now . . . and I love it. My skin looks and feels healthier, more radiant, more alive. Excess dryness and unnatural lines disappeared in a matter of days. My pores seem finer and my skin is clearer, smoother, and younger-looking than it has been in years.

On the theory that the best way to rate a cream is to try it yourself on your own face, I asked him to make a trial size available. (Prince Matchabelli makes it. It's called Polyderm Compensating Cream and is sold in three sizes, $2.00, $3.50 and $5.00 at leading department and drug stores.) You can get a five-day trial size jar by sending 25c and your name and address to Polyderm, c/o Prince Matchabelli, Dept. [illegible], P.O. Box [illegible], Mount Vernon, N.Y.

Tell Us What We Should Spend For Clothing and Amusements

By MARY MILLER
Budget Consultant
Mercantile National Bank
Of Miami Beach

Money Clinic

A good many people who fill out the Money Management questionnaires and send them to me, take a short cut.

They fill in only their absolutely fixed expenditures, and ask me to tell them what they should spend in the other categories, such as clothes, amusements, etc.

It would be nice to be that wise, but no budget counselor is. I can suggest some figures which, if added up, come to the right total.

But only the spenders themselves know whether those particular figures will work for their own families.

I have received such a questionnaire from a family I'll call the Bakers. The family consists of husband, wife, and baby; the monthly take-home pay is $422.65. They are saving $28.14 a month, in addition to which the husband is contributing about $14 to a pension fund.

This makes a total monthly saving of about ten per cent of their income. This is a good percentage when compared to national averages.

However, if they want to increase their savings, they will have to trim some of the other figures in the suggested budget.

All figures in the suggested budget would have to be adjusted to meet the Bakers' own needs. For instance, how much it costs to operate a car depends upon how many miles you drive, how much gas the car uses, how old and in need of repairs it is.

Clothing expenditures vary with your standard of dressing, the care you take of your clothes, the skill with which you shop. Home furnishings, repair and maintenance expenses vary with the age and condition of your home and its furnishings.

Personal expenditures depend on the way you live — does the husband buy expensive lunches, or carry his own? Does the wife spend a good deal at beauty parlors, or does she wash her own hair and do her own nails?

Do they entertain much or little?

The accompanying chart shows the Bakers' budget plus the suggested distribution of the amount "unaccounted for".

If you want help with a family money problem, write for a MONEY CLINIC questionnaire, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope, to the Home Money Management Service, Unit 4, P.O. Box 630, Miami Herald, Miami.

SAYS DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Mesta And Cafritz Kiss And Make-Up

By BETSY BUFFINGTON
Herald Staff Writer

'Tis true indeed that Perle (Call Me Madam) Mesta and Gwen Cafritz have made up that decade-long spat, says daughter-in-law Enid Sanford Cafritz.

Winners' Circle

In witness thereto Mrs. C. invited Mrs. M. to her fabulous Easter Sunday shindig for 700. Among those not there were Enid and husband Cal who spent Easter with Enid's parents, the Roger Sanfords of Miami.

Rumor has it that the famous Mesta-Cafritz altercation started with some slightly slurring remarks from Mme. Mesta about Gwen's family tree . . . and more rumor has it that Mrs. Cafritz came back with "The only thing Perle Mesta reads is a cook-book and a phone book."

S. JUNKUNC III, Chicago art connoisseur who's a Ft. Lauderdale vacationer, keeps his 300 Chinese paintings in an atom bomb proof shelter under the house.

Well he might: his is one of the world's finest collections of paintings from the Sung Dynasty (960-1279 A.D.) and earlier. There are only about 500 Sungs and pre-Sungs all told.

In the past two years Mr. Junkunc has showered the Lowe Art Gallery with rare Chinese art objects mainly procelains. And he'd never even seen the building until this week . . . last time he was here it was only a blue-print.

Money Is His Magic

By HELEN VAN HOY SMITH
Herald Staff Writer

PALM BEACH — Frank Hale's said to be indulging in "pipe dreams" again. Once when he told of plans for the Royal Poinciana Playhouse people just shook their heads and said it couldn't be done. But the Playhouse, considered the most beautiful small theater in America, has just completed its second season.

Now the former vaudeville-dancer turned yeast-magnate is said to be dreaming of a summer music festival in Palm Beach — part of his plan to make this resort the cultural center of the United States.

He can close his eyes and see the festival staged on four to six barges moored out in the lake, extending from the ornate playhouse. He and composer Mario Braggiotti will probably be in Europe this summer "festival shopping."

Another one of his dreams concerns converting the old Palm Beach Playhouse into a small theater for the presentation of Shakespearean dramas and other classics and for experimental theater.

The old Playhouse was a converted slathouse of the razed Royal Poinciana Hotel. It was used for several seasons and possessed great charm.

The charm, it is said, will be retained, but the house itself would be improved and made more comfortable.

Frank Hale has a magic wand. Money.

MR. AND MRS. Willaford Ransom Leach were hosts to some 400 guests last Sunday night at La Fontana, their ocean front home, honoring their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Rees, III of Atlanta.

The illuminated fountain, the twin patios with torchiers illuminated the statuary and planting, and the gay crowd made a delightful party scene.

The "Lord Nelson" pub on the ground floor was popular, and tables here and there in the patios, on the loggia and in the dining room held delectable delicacies.

The three Rees children, two boys and girl, played the accordion, clarinet and piano during the evening, the music wafting out on the blossom scented air.

MR. AND MRS. HERBERT MAY (Mrs. Marjorie Merriweather Post) have been at Whitehall for a spring visit.

Among those she greeted cordially during intermission was Mrs. N. B. Spingold, the former Madam Frances, who costumed Ziegfeld's Follies and was one of the nation's top designers.

NEW YORK — (WNS) — Metropolitan Opera star Jerome Hines has his head back.

On the evening of March 2, while Mr. Hines was singing the title role in the opera "Boris Godounov," Mr. Hines' head — an exact replica in plaster which he used as a guide for the intricate make-up job he applies as "Boris" — disappeared from his dressing room.

Now, a little over three weeks after its disappearance, Mr. Hines and his head have been reunited. The robber: a teenager who appeared head in hand to explain that she took it as part of a sorority initiation.

The Handicapped Help Miami's Industry

They Look Different but Do Top Work

John Jackson, 24, is a drill press operator.

With his machine, he turns out hundreds of index pins and hinges for aluminum chairs.

Judging by the quality and speed of his work, he's not different from other drill press operators.

But when you see him, you know he is different. He works his punch press from a wheel chair. He lost both legs in an auto accident.

Jackson works for Opportunities Unlimited, a nonprofit organization operated entirely by physically handicapped people. The organization does sub-contract work for Adams Engineering Co., one of South Florida's biggest aluminum manufacturing firms.

John Jackson is one of the reasons the firm last week was awarded a special citation from the Florida State Chamber of Commerce for "outstanding efforts in promoting equal opportunity in employment for the physically handicapped."

* * *

ADAMS has handicapped workers among the 400-odd employes at its Biscayne Blvd. plant. And it sub-contracts aluminum fabricating work to Opportunities Unlimited.

Charles Silvers, Adams Engineering's president, said the physically handicapped worker fits profitably into the assembly lines at his plant.

And the State Chamber of Commerce has long plugged for hiring handicapped workers, once the ignored and unwanted men and women of the nation's employment force.

"We first hired a young blind woman, Kathleen Miller, to work right in our plant at 19300 Biscayne Blvd.," Silvers said.

"She has only 50 per cent vision, but her efficiency in trimming backs and seats of our upholstered chairs convinced me we could and should use other workers like her."

Opportunities Unlimited is housed in a large, barn-like room at 3416 Northwest 54th St. — near other industrial plants. Their plant hums with the same energy and noise that comes from its neighbors.

* * *

"I DON'T NEED legs to work my drill press," Jackson says cheerfully.

Albert Boulanger, a tall, 36-year-old worker whose voice bears the twang of his native New Hampshire, looks perfectly normal.

"And I am," he says, "as long as I'm seated."

When he walks, though, Boulanger's cerebral palsy condition makes it evident why he cannot work in an ordinary industry.

Daniel Reagin is totally deaf, but he gets his job done.

"Sure, we are helping ourselves," says Zol Zitter, the "boss" at Opportunities Unlimited, "but we are helping Miami industries too.

"We do our work well, have practically no absenteeism and we love our jobs. A handicapped man MUST work—it gives his life meaning."

Your Buying Habits May Change Living Cost Index

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Labor Department wants to revise its consumer price index because American spending habits have changed a great deal in the past 10 years.

Among the reasons: Americans now buy more television sets, cars, and home appliances — and less dress clothes.

The present index is based on the spending habits of Americans in 1950. To get the index, the government prices about 300 commodities and services in 46 cities.

The index, popularly known as the cost of living index, comes out every month. The system for figuring it could be revised by January 1964 for an estimated $4,600,000 the department says.

In testimony just made public, Secretary of Labor Mitchell asked a House appropriations subcommittee for funds to start the revision.

Mitchell testified that the index' basket of commodities, prices and services was growing out of date because of these changes in American life:

FAMILIES are larger. There are more old people and more children.

THE POPULATION has grown 15 per cent since 1950 and has shifted geographically. A higher proportion of families now live in the Southwest and West, where needs are different from those of the North.

FAMILIES ARE moving to the suburbs, where people spend less on dress clothes and outside entertainment and more on houses and gardens.

FAMILY INCOMES are higher, even when account is taken of higher prices. More money is spent on more television, cars, travel, education, and medical care. A smaller proportion of income is spent on food. Food expenditures themselves go more heavily for frozen foods, meats and fresh fruits.

Ewan Clague, commission of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, testified he thinks, "there is at present good confidence in the index the way we are now preparing it." But he agreed it should be improved.

Each change of one index point adds or subtracts as much as 200 million dollars in the annual wage bill of over four million workers under contracts with cost-of-living wage adjustments, Clague said.

In addition, he said, the index is important in government policy decisions.

And the public, he said, uses it even for such things as raising alimony payments.

AT&T Needs Room

NEW YORK — (AP) — American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the world's biggest public utility, is making plans for the biggest annual meeting in corporate history.

More than 25,000 of AT&T's army of 1,600,000 shareowners have notified the company they plan to attend the 74th annual meeting April 15.

As a result, the company has moved the meeting place site to the commodious Kingsbridge Armory in the Bronx. The old meeting rooms at 50 Varick Street were strained to capacity by more than 2,500 in 1957.

Up for ratification by shareowners this year, is a directors' recommendation to split the stock 3-for-1 and boost the dividend 10 per cent.

A spokesman for AT&T, which operates more than 80 per cent of the nation's telephones through its Bell System, said the armory probably could accommodate 25,000.

But experience has shown only 30 to 50 per cent of shareowners, who signify they intend to attend annual meetings, actually get there. That would place the crowd somewhere between 7,500 and 12,500.

Wall Street Perspective

Business Aims For All-Time Record High

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press International

NEW YORK — The second half of 1959 now shaping up in the minds of the experts promises to bring an all-time record business high.

Recently no one wanted to predict beyond the first six months of the year which are seeing buildings of inventories against strikes in the steel, rubber, metal and railroad industries.

Now things are changing and the outlook is brightening.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, the experts say there's nothing to fear over a shooting war prospect on the Berlin situation.

SECONDLY, and very important for our economy, it is held that unemployment will fall to a new low for this population. That, of course, means production at a record rate.

And all this may come about with no inflation or at least a minimum of inflation.

We've been joking about our 48-cent dollar, but resenting Europeans saying that our currency wasn't holding up to such things as the pound sterling, French franc and Italian lira.

There were times when the dollar was in trouble simply because we were giving away money, investing dollars abroad, or buying more than we were selling to foreign nations.

* * *

EVERY NATION thinks its currency is the best in the world. Back in the post-war days of the 1916 plus era when the German mark was plunging down, the German fraus carried a bushel basket of marks to buy a loaf of bread.

They were sure the mark was okay but the price of bread was crazy.

We haven't hit anything like that and aren't likely to do it despite our inflation march. We are a producing nation and our dollar still is a strong currency.

We've been worrying over a loss of gold to foreign nations. But the gold exodus is lightening and there could be a reversal of the flow before long.

We are told that we are pricing ourselves out of foreign markets, that foreigners have adopted our assembly lines with cheap labor and are ready to cut our throats.

We've been buying a lot of small foreign automobiles. Some steel products have been coming in at prices under our production costs.

Textiles have been flowing in from Japan and working against our industry here. Oil from abroad comes in at a much cheaper rate than it can be produced in Texas.

* * *

AND TO TOP the thing off, our corporations are moving abroad in their expansion program. They are building plants in the common market area of Europe and other sections. Thus they'll be able to produce profits. And they'll be able to get dollars out of this country.

This leads to the belief that industry will build abroad and cut its spending for new plant and equipment here.

Without new plant and equipment building there can be no boom in the economy.

Well, it just isn't so. Our companies are still spending a lot of money on expansion.

There has been a small rise in this spending and it is expected to increase further in the second half. That type of building is big for the recovery movement.

New plants with greater efficiency will mean more ability to compete with foreign producers. Labor also is giving the productivity angle a good look with unemployment high just now. There'll be a bigger drive for efficient output which will give us back some of our lost competitive edge.

This all means we are going to price ourselves back into the world markets in the very near future.

Aluminum Prices May Be Boosted

NEW YORK —(UPI)— Aluminum producers will seek to hike prices around a cent a pound this summer in answer to rising demand and expected wage boosts, Purchasing Week Magazine predicted.

The magazine said production and use of aluminum this year will outstrip 1958 by 8 per cent and should "just pass" the 1956 record.

Unions Propose Pay Cut to Continue Trains

ATLANTA — (AP) — Two railroad labor unions have offered a substantial wage concession in an effort to prevent discontinuance of the Central of Georgia Railway Co.'s Flamingo passenger trains between Atlanta and Albany, Ga.

Public Service Commission Chairman Matt L. McWhorter said it is the first time, as far as he knows, that labor unions have made such a concession in order to keep a train operating.

The offer was made in a letter from B. G. Byington, general chairman of the Central of Georgia unit of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

Byington said he was advised by T. E. Temple of the Order of Railway Conductors and Brakemen that his organization would join in the proposal.

Byington's offer was for crews represented by the two unions to make the complete run from Atlanta to Albany. At present the crews are changed at Macon on each trip.

He said that under the present contract each of the crews is paid under the monthly guarantee and that by running the crews straight through it would cost the railroad about $23,000 a year less.

In seeking authority to discontinue the trains the railroad reported it was losing about $49,000 a year on their operations. Upon receipt of Byington's letter McWhorter postponed further consideration of the railroad petition on the Flamingo until May 1.

Records in the case show that the schedule time between Atlanta and Albany for the trains is six hours and five minutes southbound and five hours northbound.

At present each crew works approximately half that time on the 209 mile trip and the cost of the crews to the railroad is approximately $75,000 a year. According to Byington's letter the unions' offer would cut that cost about one-third.

Another major cost item is that of engineers and firemen. They get a day's pay for 100 miles and thus four engine crews now draw slightly more than a day's pay on each of the two trains. The annual cost to the railroad is $32,320 for engineers and $28,893 for firemen.

Birthday Cakes By Thousands

Chase Federal Savings and Loan Assn. is celebrating its 25th anniversary by giving away birthday cakes — 8,500 of them.

The financial institution said it will start distributing the cakes Monday to customers at all five of its offices.

Each cake weighs a pound and a half and they'll be given out until the supply is exhausted, Charles L. Clements, president of Chase, said.

Ohio Solon Lists Stock

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Sen. Stephen M. Young (D., Ohio) announced he is selling his stock in two sugar companies to avoid any conflict of interest when he considers legislation on sugar imports.

At the same time, Young formally and voluntarily listed with the secretary of the Senate holdings of more than 7,000 shares of stock in 21 companies. About half the holdings are in oil stocks.

He recalled that as a House member in the past he voted to cut the oil depletion tax allowance from 27½ to 15 per cent. He said he would do so again as a senator.

Young said that in addition to "some U.S. government bonds," he also owns "some real estate in Cuyahoga County Ohio and some acreage in California and Mississippi on which there is an oil lease."

Latin Intrigue Helps Plane Sales

Miami's Businessmen Take to the Air

By STAN JOHNSON
Herald Business Editor

—Herald Staff Photo by John Walther

Private Planes at Tamiami Airport Represent a Trend
. . . sales and rentals of aircraft are booming in South Florida

Private aircraft dealers in South Florida are prospering as a result of cloak-and-dagger activities in Latin America, easy credit, and the growing interest of businessmen in flying.

Dealers estimate private aircraft sales in Dade and Broward County at 2.5 million dollars for 1958. Aircraft leasing brought in another $500,000 to $750,000, they say.

Nobody can guess how many dollars changed hands as a result of short-term chartering.

Political unrest in Latin America was an important factor in boosting the revenues of some dealers.

"I'm not naming any names, but I know a good many private pilots who cleaned up by flying couriers into Cuba and some of the other islands last year," said one dealer.

He thinks the industry owes a sizeable chunk of its 1958 revenue to furtive Latins.

* * *

PRIVATE AIRCRAFT sales also have been helped by a more liberal financing policy on the part of banks and finance companies.

It's now possible to buy a twin-engine, $100,000 Aero Commander — like the one President Eisenhower uses occasionally—for only 10 per cent down.

Buyers of smaller planes and used aircraft are usually required to put up at least 25 per cent, and more often a third, of the purchase price in cash. A new plane can sell for as little as $7,000 or as much as $150,000.

The average private plane is flown 200 or 300 hours a year at a cost of about $8 an hour.

Attracted by the easy credit and the tax deductibility of aircraft expenses, South Florida businessmen are buying a big share of the aircraft sold in this area.

Most of the large construction companies, a number of real estate brokers and several banks have private planes. Arthur Vining Davis has a whole collection of them, including a helicopter and two luxurious DC-3s.

Typical of the smaller businessmen who are taking to the air is C. J. Daisey owner of a Miami beauty shop supply firm.

About a month ago, he invested $11,200 in a new four-passenger Cessna 175 and began taking flying lessons. He plans to use the plane to cut traveling time between Miami and his branches in Orlando and West Palm Beach.

* * *

THERE ARE an estimated 1,000 private planes in Dade and Broward Counties. Dealers say about half of these are owned by businessmen.

The Aircraft Owners & Pilots Assn. lists 4,231 private pilots in Florida of which about 2,000 are believed to live in South Florida. The majority of the state's 8,000 licensed commercial pilots also live in this area.

Since there are many more pilots than planes, dealers are doing a brisk rental and leasing business.

About eight firms in the Greater Miami area have planes available for lease or rental. Rates vary from $10 an hour for a small Cessna 150 to $82.50 an hour for a five-passenger Aero Commander.

Businessmen who fly regularly and do not own planes often lease them on a monthly or yearly basis.

* * *

CHARLES HORMEL, who won the esteem of Fidel Castro's rebels by flying guns and people into Cuba during the revolution, is not conducting an export-import business with a leased plane.

He flies to Cuba an average of four times a week, using a Navion which costs him about $400 a month.

Encouraged by the growing number of plane owners and fliers, Earl Smalley has opened an Aero Country Club at his Kendall airport.

The club's 150 members pay dues of $75 a year, and get group insurance, clubhouse facilities (no bar), and favorable rates for storing, servicing or renting aircraft.

"Private flying is just coming of age," says 23-year-old Samuel Hallock duPont Jr., whose duPont Air Interests Inc. is one of the largest dealers in new and used planes.

"We did a $1,500,000 business last year, and we expect to hit $2,500,000 this year," he said.

South's Future Looks Bright

ATLANTA — (AP) — The president of the F. W. Woolworth Co. does not think the segregation issue will hurt business in the South.

R. C. Kirkwood said his firm's expansion in the Southeast has been far ahead of the 2,252-store chain's average.

"Opportunities for the future look wonderful here," Kirkwood added, indicating he expects the trend to continue.

Train Service May Be Stopped

ATLANTA — (AP) — The Georgia Public Service Commission is considering a request for discontinuance of the passenger train Ponce de Leon between Atlanta and the Florida state line.

The Southern Railway Co. and the Georgia Southern & Florida Railway Co. made the request, claiming a loss of $130,134 on the route in 1958. Two trains make up the route.

New Stock Is Listed

NEW YORK—(UPI)—Trading in Universal Oil Products Co., a Des Plaines, Ill., petroleum research company which holds a large chunk of basic refining patents, has started on the New York Stock Exchange.

The ticker symbol is UOP. The first transaction was the sale of 100 shares at $23.25. It was followed by a 1,000 share block at the same price.

The company until earlier this year was owned by the Petroleum Research Fund, a charitable trust administered by the Guaranty Trust Co. The bank sought and after lengthy hearings received court permission to sell the UOP stock to diversify the fund's portfolio.

25th ANNIVERSARY
CHASE FEDERAL SAVINGS AND LOAN ASSOCIATION
APRIL IS OUR TWENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY MONTH

In 1934 Chase Federal opened
. . . AND THAT SAME YEAR AMERICA SANG:
"WHO'S AFRAID OF THE BIG, BAD WOLF?"

What was it like in 1934 . . . the year Chase Federal opened on Miami Beach?

Folks everywhere were singing and whistling "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Wolf?". . . jolly hit-tune from Walt Disney's The Three Little Pigs.

Yet actually it was a turbulent year. The nation was still mired in the Great Depression. Twenty-one million people were on relief rolls. Congress had devalued the dollar by reducing its gold content 40.94%. There was revolution in Cuba and an army sergeant named Fulgencio Batista became dictator and idol of the Cuban people.

Some said it was no time to start a new savings institution. Money was scarce, there was tension in the air, and all of Miami Beach numbered less than 11,000 residents.

But those who looked beyond the dark clouds said that a federal savings and loan association was needed. Insured savings would inspire confidence and provide a source of mortgage money to encourage building and home ownership.

And so Chase Federal was born. Through prudence, foresight and conservative management it has prospered with Greater Miami. Starting with savings accounts totalling $10,000, Chase Federal now has more than $78,000,000 entrusted to its safekeeping, and has made home loans amounting to almost $125,000,000.

Miami Window Buys Robt. Russell Metals

Miami Window Corp. announced Saturday it has bought Robert Russell Metals Inc. of Hialeah, an aluminum billet producer, for about $843,000 in cash and stock.

S. G. Kusworm Jr., president of Miami Window, said the acquistion makes his company Miami's largest aluminum manufacturer.

KUSWORM

RUSSELL

"This move gives us what we have desired for a long time," said Kusworm, "a completely independent production cycle from casting billets to manufacturing."

Robert Russell Metals operates from a 60,000 square-foot plant in Hialeah. The firm grossed approximately 5.5 million dollars last year.

Founder Robert Russell will continue to head the firm as a division of Miami Window Corp. He received 160,530 shares of Miami Window common stock and $120,000 in cash in the transaction.

Miami Window, founded nearly 12 years ago, reported gross sales of almost 10 million dollars in 1958. The company manufactures aluminum windows and furniture.

In 1954 it acquired Florida Extrusions Inc. in Hollywood which produces 10 million pounds of extrusions annually for the parent company.

Miami Window has plants in Meridian, Miss., Puerto Rico, and Panama. It owns Sterling Equipment Manufacturing Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, and Universial Erectors of Miami.

The company last week raised five million dollars of working capital through the sale of debentures and preferreed stock.

Safe Driving Pays Off For California Drivers

SAN FRANCISCO —(UPI) — A new automobile insurance plan that pegs rates to accidents and convictions for moving traffic violations goes into effect in California May 1.

The plan will be adopted in other states if it proves successful in California, according to the National Bureau of Casualty Underwriters and the National Automobile Underwriters Associations. These are the nation's two leading auto insurance rating organizations, representing about 200 companies.

Under the plan drivers with no accidents or moving violations over a three-year period get a 20 per cent discount. Those with one accident or violation pay the same as now while those with two or more pay higher rates.

The announcement said savings of more than $10 million would be realized by present policyholders who qualify for the reduced rate. Individual savings would range from $20 to $50.

Under the plan only moving traffic violations are counted against the driver, excluding such infractions as tickets received for overtime parking.

Accidents would be considered only if they resulted in injury, death or property damage totaling $50 or more. However, an accident involving a car that was legally parked would not be counted against its owner.

No 'Work' For Savages

MONTREAL —(WNS)— Primitive savages living in the untouched territories of the world today, do not have a word or symbol for "work", says Dr. S. Greenhill in the Canadian Medical Journal.

It is not that they are lazy, he points out. It's just that they are better adjusted to it than we are.

In so called "primitive societies," Dr. Greenhill explains, building a hut, exchanging goods, hunting, fishing, raising a family or attending a religious ritual, are not tasks but facets of "total living."

A Good Year For Pep Boys

PHILADELPHIA —(DJ)— Pep Boys — Manny, Moe & Jack — had a "good year" in fiscal 1959 with earnings reaching a new peak, Executive Vice President C. D. Unger told Dow Jones.

Pep Boys operates a chain of auto supply and accessory stores.

"Our business is somewhat of a depression business. When people aren't buying new cars, they're spending money to fix old ones up," said Unger.

The company's year ended Jan. 31, and Unger said sales rose approximately 10 per cent over the $16,086,353 in the year ended Jan. 31, 1958.

RESOURCES OVER 230 MILLION DOLLARS

Building Value Takes A Jump

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The government said the value of new construction rose again last month, pushing the first quarter figure to a record $10,933,000,000.

The March increase of 317 million dollars was in line with seasonal expectations, the Commerce and Labor Departments indicated in their joint announcements.

March construction worth $3,792,000,000 represented an 8 per cent jump over February and 12 per cent over March, 1958.

For the first three months of the year, the estimated value of new construction put in place topped by 10 per cent the previous record of $9,774,000,000 achieved last year.

The latest quarterly estimates show a 10 per cent rise in private construction, as compared with a year ago, and a 16 per cent advance in public building.

Flight Stops Requested

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Florida cities of Sarasota and Bradenton and counties of Manatee and Sarasota have asked for more air service — preferably by at leas one of the seven airlines that fly over them without stopping.

They told the Civil Aeronautics Board the population of the two counties, now 110,000, will be 268,000 by 1968. They complained at the lack of direct service to Atlanta, Cincinnati, Chicago and Detroit, and said that in many cases residents must drive to Tampa or St. Petersburg for air transportation.

They added that a half-million dollar air terminal is being buit at Sarasota-Bradenton airport and is designed to accommodate at least two airlines.

Service is currently provided by National Airlines. The petition said these airlines fly past Sarasota - Bradenton without stopping: Eastern, Mackey, Northeast, Capital, Delta, Northwest and TWA.

Added Service

PARIS — (AP) — The postman may ring thrice, the government has decreed—for mail, milk and bread. Residents of remote communities may subscribe for a fee to a new food delivery plan added to the regular postal service.

To Soothe Secretaries, You Must Be Friendly

CHICAGO—(WNS)—It has been a long time since the "girl Friday" replaced the old-time male character who sat on a high stool and wore a green eyeshade.

Yet the male of the species has hardly learned how to work with her smoothly enough for business to reap her best efforts, two organizations of business analysts here reported.

Contented secretaries put out much more work than malcontents, say Profs. Jack Jackson and Howard Rosenfeld of the University of Michigan Research Center for Group Dynamics. And the best way to make a secretary discontented is to tell her how to do her job.

The two university researchers found that while new employes may welcome informative chats with their supervisors, seasoned feminine staffers resent newcomers as reflections upon their work.

"If the seasoned "girl Friday" thinks she's getting a lot of job-related talk from her supervisor and relatively little social conversation, she reacts by lowering her performance," says Jackson.

Apparently "socializing" with women employes is an important part of winning their best efforts, say the proferssors on the basis of their research at a utility company.

"Long-service workers also are more sensitive to close supervision of their work. Their motivation to perform well is sharply reduced when they feel their supervisor doesn't 'socialize' with them and instead watches their work very closely and breathes down their necks," says this report.

After surveys made in many offices, researchers have compiled a list of pet peeves among secretaries:

THE BOSS doesn't utilize her full training, capabilities and knowledge of the firm. He doesn't bother to train her to take discretionary responsibilities off his own shoulders.

HE IS CONSTANTLY inconsiderate of her—the type who always dictates at 4:30 p.m. and wants the letters out the same night, please!

HE PLACES a long-distance call, but disappears immediately before the call comes in, and he vanishes for hours on end without telling his secretary where he has gone so that she can handle important callers and visitors.

HE DICTATES with a cigaret or pipe in his mouth, and hoards papers on his desk instead of giving them to her to file.

On the positive side, the bureau recommends to male bosses:

SUBSTITUTE earned raises for periodic increases.

GIVE YOUR secretary responsibility as fast as she can absorb it.

STREAMLINE communication systems so that there is no duplication of effort and so that the secretary receives the information she needs in her ordinary duties.

POINT OUT errors with tact and make criticism considerate.

TAKE INTO account that the secretary may have more capabilities than she ever has a chance of showing, and therefore train her for additional responsibilities.

Greyhound's Profits Are Up for 1958

CHICAGO — (UPI) — Greyhound Corp. reported slightly higher revenues and earnings in its annual report for 1958.

Earnings amounted to $13,976,117 or $1.25 a common share against $13,414,039 or $1.22 in 1957. Operating revenues last year increased to $305,820,248 from $296,647,960 the year before.

While reporting that revenues from all phases of Greyhound's operations increased last year, President F. W. Ackerman told stockholders that the recent decision to liquidate the unprofitable U-drive it division of Greyhound Rent-a-Car "resulted in added losses" which have been absorbed and reflected in Greyhound accounts.

He said all bank loans connected with Rent-A-Cars equipment obligations have been paid off and the liquidation should be completed this year.

Ackerman said "management views with optimism" sales and earnings prospects for 1959, since it appears that additional Rent-A-Car charges against income will be more moderate than in the past two years and the company is "in good position to capitalize on the vast potential for intercity travel."

EXECUTIVE

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

. . . in the Multi-Billion Dollar Food Merchandising Industry

Every thinking man has observed the impact of higher living standards on the eating habits of the American people. "Eating Out" and between-meal snacking is growing and fast becoming an American way of life—so much so that sales exceed $16 billion dollars yearly and are rising.

Nearly everyone knows this. Millions participate to some extent in food merchandising, consumption or both. Yet only a limited few individuals are fortunate enough to benefit from the huge profits that normally accrue to those responsible for the basic development of increased eating-out facilities.

QUAKER MAID offers such an unusual opportunity for profit today to 5 executives who will become DEVELOPMENT DIRECTORS for the Quaker Maid Program — an important, vigorously growing segment of the restaurant industry. The distribution and installation of Quaker Maid's Restaurant Program has virtually an unlimited waiting market. Our program is backed by outstanding management know-how and resources, which include real estate and equipment financing.

TERRITORIES AVAILABLE TODAY, WITHIN OUR SOUTHERN REGIONAL OFFICE JURISDICTION AT FT. LAUDERDALE, FLORIDA, INCLUDE PARTS OF FLORIDA, GEORGIA, AND ALABAMA.

We are looking for associates with experience in sales and administration — men capable, after training, to use their imagination and make sound decisions without close supervision.

Capital requirements cannot be specifically set forth here. Financial qualifications, although extremely modest in consideration of the profits to be expected, are at the same time exacting. However, considerations other than the amount of capital are important.

The Quaker Maid Restaurant System will welcome an inquiry from anyone who personally considers himself qualified for the opportunity.

Spreading Stock Thin Dangerous

Its Too Hard To Keep Eye On

By WILLIAM A. DOYLE

Q. You often warn your readers not to spread their holdings too thin by buying stock in too many different companies. Why?

If a person bought one share of this and one share of that when he had a large sum of money to invest, I'll grant that it would be pointless. But my wife and I purchased stocks over a period of years as the cash became available. We felt it was better not to put all our eggs in one basket. We now own common stocks in 18 different companies, in lots from 10 to 200 shares. They are all high-grade stocks. We never speculate.

We also have $5,500 in bonds which pay 2½ per cent interest and $2,500 in cash. We are thinking about selling $3,000 worth of the bonds and buying stock in two more companies. According to your theories, this would be wrong. But we've done very well so far.

A. And you may continue to do well. But the facts of the matter are that you are not playing it very safe. Keeping posted on the doings of 18 or 20 different issues is just too difficult a job for anyone but a professional.

DOYLE

The fact that you stick to high-grade stocks and steer clear of speculation may be your salvation. But you're bound to make a mistake sooner or later.

For the ordinary person, the $3,000 you are now planning to invest is a mighty big chunk of money to put into the market all at once. That goes double with the market acting like it is.

That's why it is much more sensible to dollar-average by putting a fixed amount of money into the same stock or stocks at fixed intervals. That way you beat short-term swings in the market. It's a much safer system, even though you might do better your way.

Q. My broker suggests that I buy (for income and possible growth in value) Southwestern States Telephone stock. This stock is traded in the over-the-counter market. I am 56 years old and must be careful with my money. I have about $1,000 of matured U.S. savings bonds. The broker thinks I should cash in the bonds to buy the stock. Do you agree with him?

A. Not if those bonds are the only savings reserve you have. You should keep at least that much of a financial cushion in bonds or a bank account.

However, if you have some kind of reserve funds salted away, a stock like this one could be just the kind of a long-haul investment you are looking for. It has shown a good pattern of growth in the past and shows promise of doing well in the future. And, at its present price, its current dividend rate results in a yield of about 4.4 per cent a year. That's not bad at all.

NEW STOCK MARKET COLLAPSE JUST AHEAD?

WILL YOU RECOGNIZE the Danger Signals When They Occur?

It shouldn't take a genius to realize that stocks cannot keep going up in value forever. But it takes a lot more than guesswork to determine exactly WHEN the turn will come. It could come at any point now. Wouldn't you like to be given fair warning?

To those few who understand it, the DOW THEORY has pointed out the right "BUY" and "SELL" stock signals nine out of ten times since its inception more than 60 years ago. No theory is infallible, of course, but you just can't afford to overlook the tremendous possibilities in a nationwide investment service which can proudly say:

"We Have Correctly Forecast Every Major Stock Market Move Since 1946!"

To enable you to make, at first hand, an honest appraisal of our kind of Investment Service, we would like to have you become a trial subscriber to our Dow Theory Forecast Weekly Investment Service for 4 weeks, merely for the cost of postage and handling ($1). This trial places you under no obligation to continue the service and you will receive a wide range of vital investment services, including Master Stock Lists, 30 Recommended Low-Priced Stocks, a Weekly Consensus of Other Stock Service Recommendations, Model Stock Portfolios and Special Growth Stocks.

Also being included at no extra cost as a special BONUS are "3 NEW STOCKS TO BUY NOW FOR LONG-TERM GROWTH POSSIBILITIES." There are always a few stocks that "swim against the tide" and make gains in spite of a sudden market drop. From hundreds carefully checked by our staff we have selected THREE that we think will offer good profit possibilities in spite of a market reversal, should it occur. These three stocks have outstanding long-term growth potential and if wisely held could develop into the enviable, high-dividend blue chip stocks that have been the foundation of many fortunes.

Here is a rare opportunity indeed to get thoroughly acquainted by mail with the shrewd thinking and crisp action of one of the country's outstanding investment advisory services. No salesman will call, and this offer is open to new trial subscribers only.

How Much More BOOM in BUILDING?

ALTHOUGH the rest of the economy has continued to forge ahead, housing starts have receded (on a seasonally-adjusted basis) in recent months. Does this decline signal the start of a downtrend in construction activity? And if so, what would be its effect on the leading building stocks?

In its latest review of the construction industry, The Value Line Investment Survey notes the contra-cyclical pattern of homebuilding activity and appraises the impact of a probable decline in housing starts upon the construction business as a whole. Then, within the framework of this economic climate, it estimates the probable 1959 earnings and dividends of 39 leading building material suppliers. The Survey finds that one-third of these issues are likely candidates for dividend increases this year.

But the companies whose prospects are rosiest may not be the best to buy, at this time and at these prices. Value Line's Ratings and Rankings will tell you which stocks are too richly priced, in relation to their earnings and dividends for the coming year, and should be avoided at this time; and which stocks offer the best relative values in today's market. Ten building supply stocks (of the 39 under analysis) rank high for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months. Based on the record of Value Line's objective Rankings over the past year, it would pay you to steer your investment funds into its most favorably-ranked stocks. A copy of this review of the Building Industry will be sent to you at no extra charge under the special offer described below.

Revolutionary new idea for industries!

A gun that

SPRAYS FIBERGLASS

New, improved, less costly way to build swimming pools, line tanks, repair damaged pools, waterproof cellars, coat pipes, build countless products!

The amazing SPRAY-BILT fiberglass gun is revolutionizing building, resurfacing, and waterproofing techniques.

WHY SPRAYED FIBERGLASS?

- Lower cost
- No limit to size of job
- No restrictions on shapes
- Any color permanently impregnated
- Minimum expansion or contraction with radical temperature changes
- Extremely resistant to most chemicals
- Will not crack or break
- Water and moisture proof
- No seams or joints
- Fire resistant
- Excellent electrical insulating properties
- Easy to apply
- For cleaner than "hand layup" of fiberglass

In the building of swimming pools, for example, fiberglass can be sprayed right against the bare earth, or any form that will give a smooth surface. SPRAYED FIBERGLASS pools save hundreds of man hours, and sell for $1,000 less than pools built by conventional methods.

The SPRAY-BILT gun operates with unbelievable simplicity. It cuts fiberglass rovings, mixes them with resins and a catalyst in mid-air, and sprays the material against virtually any surface. In just two hours the mixture hardens to the strength of steel.

Flower Show's Ahead

By ELEANOR DIXON
Herald Club Editor

The tenth annual Metropolitan Miami Garden and Flower Show opening Friday should be the best yet, for the 3,000 participating Dade County garden club members have had two years to plan their entries. (Last year's show was canceled because of the cold winter.)

It is traditional for all the garden club members to save their best plants and best ideas on arrangements for the show, so this year there'll be two year's worth of good ideas.

The show, themed "Silent Symphony," continues Friday through Monday in Dinner Key Auditorium. There is an admission charge; however those purchasing associate membership cards may come and go as they wish during the show's operation.

Dade County's garden clubs all cooperate in the show's presentation. Their members furnish the arrangements, miniature arrangements, hats, corsages and other entries in the artistic division.

Mrs. C. M. Ballard is chairman of this division and her fondness for things Oriental will influence the gardens which surround the arrangements. Mrs. Guy Carmichael is her co-chairman.

An island in the center of the artistic division will contain table settings geared to tropical living, such as the table pictured at right, set by Mrs. Ballard.

Under the "Silent Symphony" theme, the flower arrangements will be influenced by song titles, such as "A Tisket, A Tasket," "Old McDonald Had a Farm," etc. There'll be a special section for arrangements made by men, plus an array of hats made from flowers and dried leaves.

Mrs. Frank Nichols, of Riverside Garden Club, is president of the board of governors of the show's board, coordinating the efforts of the garden clubbers and the city parks department who take care of turning the 2¼ acre auditorium into a park by placing trees and shrubs to harmonize with the exhibits.

The Miami Beach Parks Department is coordinating the layout of the show, with the help of the parks departments of Miami, Coral Gables, Dade County, and for the first time this year, those of Hialeah, Miami Springs and North Miami.

There will be model gardens constructed by the garden clubs, exhibits by junior gardeners, horticultural and conservation exhibits and commercial displays of garden equipment. Expert arrangers have been invited to place their arrangements in special boxes constructed for this purpose.

Mrs. Raymond Turner and Mrs. E. R. Greenfield are in charge of staging; Mrs. Helen Cutten, horticultural exhibits; Mrs. Ruth Measell, gardens and horticulture projects; Mrs. Wayne Allen, junior exhibits; Mrs. T. C. Buhler, non-commercial exhibits; Mrs. Parker Cole, cut flowers; Mrs. James C. Olive, commercial exhibits; Mrs. Frank Hewlett, judges. Latin American visitors will be helped by Mrs. Charles D. Carroll, interpreter. Landscape architect Jonathan Seymour is designing the show's layout.

BANANA LEAVES set the tone for this tropical buffet table, arranged by Mrs. C. M. Ballard. She "conditions" the leaves before using them by soaking them overnight in cold water. Leaf is used as a table runner, and four form the background for the featured arrangement. Mrs. Ballard used orange Pampas grass (the feathery-looking plumes) and reddish-orange castor beans as the color highlights in the arrangement. Tableware includes amberina tumblers, a terra cotta hued teapot and antique Japanese plates and bowl. Orange linen napkins complete the setting.

BACK FROM SWEDEN

From Ship To Shore For Joneses

By HELEN WELLS
Herald Society Editor

FROM SWEDEN to Key Largo Anglers Club is quite a jump but W. Alton Jones, chairman of the board of Cities Service and Mrs. Jones broke their trip with a brief stop at their La Gorce Island home.

PERSON TO PERSON

They were in Sweden for the launching of one of Cities Service's tankers, which from all reports must be one of the biggest in the world. It is some 800 feet long.

Now the Joneses are relaxing with some fishing at the Anglers Club, before returning to Miami Beach.

Bringing Home Honors

WHEN Speck (Mrs. John) Gautier draws herself up to her full height, she's just a little over four feet, which accounts for her nickname, of course. But she looks "seven feet tall" when she talks about her and Johnny's young son, Bill.

Bill Gautier

And no wonder. Good looking Bill (he was voted the handsomest boy in his class in high school) has been winning honors throughout his school career and is still at it.

Latest is his election to University of Florida's executive council from the college of arts and sciences.

Before Bill attended U of F he had a year at Chapel Hill where he was an SAE and got his letter in wrestling. At U of F he was president of his junior class, chairman of the Homecoming committee, election official for two years, on Florida Blue Key Speaker's bureau, Florida political assembly and deputy chief justice of traffic court.

Bill's doing all right . . . to put it mildly.

It's a Success

HERE'S THE DOPE on La Bastille, plush private club new this winter, in Surfside. April 14 or 15th La Bastille will sing its swan song of the season, a dinner dance for its president, Bob Pentland.

The original plan for the club is to close for six weeks after this party, then open June 1st for a summer program, bi-weekly dinner dances, for summer members.

Anyhow, La Bastille is here to stay. It has been tremendously successful social-wise, even if not at the till.

All in all, the club has kept its head above water financially and praises are being heaped on the balding head of manager Eddie Cohen, whose brain child La Bastille is.

At the moment, the informal opening in the fall is set for Nov. 1 with the formal opening on Dec. 15. A day or two after the latter there'll be a benefit ball for the Humane Society titled The Poodle Ball. La Bastille is winding up its first season with 700 members.

Pack 'Em In Like Sardines

AND SPEAKING OF BENEFITS — whose poor management is it that packs people into some of these affairs like sardines?

You'd think the planning committee would rather have three hundred satisfied and happy guests who will want to come back next year, than 600 disgruntled paying guests who make no bones of saying "I MAY send my donation next year, but I surely won't be there . . ."

From Cruet To Ring

SHE WENT into an antique shop to buy a cut glass vinegar cruet. And what did Lillian Claughton come out with? Why an antique amethyst ring, natch!

Lillian has a collection of old cut glass, some of it family heirloom pieces.

She actually was looking for a cruet but when the owner of the shop showed her this exquisite ring, she couldn't resist it, although she isn't overly fond of jewelry.

The ring once was part of a necklace on a noblewoman's fair throat in Milan, Italy. There were six of these amethysts pendent from a gold chain, interspersed with black enamel, each about three quarters of an inch long.

What makes the stone so fascinating is that tiny gold leaves with a diamond chip in each leaf are superimposed on the amethyst. This work is a lost art.

TEMPORARY HOME--TALLAHASSEE

Moving Lawmakers Isn't Easy

By JEANNE VOLTZ
Herald Staff Writer

Two Dade representatives' families are settling into temporary quarters in Tallahassee today to have households running smoothly by opening of the 1959 Legislature Tuesday.

But two other legislators' families are staying put at home.

The move isn't easy, admit Mrs. George L. Hollahan Jr. and wife of freshman David C. Eldredge. But Mrs. Hollahan says, "I look forward to it. I wouldn't miss it." Rep. Eldredge particularly "wanted his family with him" for his first session.

Mrs. Hollahan went househunting early—last October.

"You have to, especially with a family as big as ours," she said.

"I was fortunate to find a nice two-story, four-bedroom house—but with no washing machine!"

Lack of a washing machine can present quite a problem with four children, two pre-schoolers. But Mrs. Hollahan was able to take her household helper for this session. Last session she changed three times, using Tallahassee domestic talent.

"You have to have some help with four children," she said.

Mrs. Hollahan is a regular in the House gallery—when she can get away. A representative's wife also must make appearances at duty teas, receptions and the like if she is in Tallahassee.

Rep. Eldredge househunted for his family in early April. With two children seven and almost three their housing needs are not so stiff as the Hollahans. The Eldredges have a two-bedroom apartment.

* * *

2 Months, 2 Seasons

MULTIPLY PACKING for a family for a two-weeks vacation by two months and two seasons. That is what legislative wives must do.

Tallahassee can be quite cool in April, so in go the winter togs. And it can be steamy hot in May, so summer clothes must go.

It can be rainy anytime and, Mrs. Hollahan says, when it rains in Tallahassee it pours.

"The only thing that really gets me down is that somebody always seems to be sick when we're there," said Mrs. Hollahan. "We seem to be in and out of doctors' offices quite a bit."

She blames the rains for some of the colds, viruses and other minor illnesses.

* * *

MRS. HOLLAHAN left the middle of last week with a station wagon packed with children, luggage and Rep. Hollahan's secretary. Tagging along behind was a rented trailer with more luggage. Rep. Hollahan left Saturday.

Mrs. Eldredge and children left a week ago Friday, with a stopover in Ocala with her parents. Rep. Eldredge, with the help of his mother, Mrs. Jennie B. Eldredge, packed the car to the top and set out for Tallahassee the next day.

Neither the Hollahans nor Eldredges anticipate serious problems with school for their children.

Kathy Hollahan, now 11, was in Florida State University Laboratory School last session and adjusted well. Her brother, George III, and Jennie Eldredge, both seven, are enrolled in the laboratory school this session.

Kathy will be a page in the House, so will go to school after regular meetings, while representatives are in committees.

They'll Stay Home

BUT DOUBT about moving their three children from friends and schools keeps the wife of Sen. Joe Eaton at home. Mrs. Eaton is working toward a B.S. in nursing at the University of Miami to keep her close to home, but she doesn't think she'd go for the session, anyway.

"I know I'd hate to be moved into a strange crowd in the middle of a semester," she said.

Their son Joel, a 10th grader, probably will go up for a week with his father.

"He is old enough to get a lot out of the session," she said.

Both Mrs. Eaton and wife of Rep. W. C. (Cliff) Herrell may go up once or twice for a few days, but neither has made definite plans. And legislators do get home some weekends.

"Cliff is so busy I'm sure we'd just be in the way," said Mrs. Herrell. "We" includes their 11-year-old daughter. Their son is grown and married.

And Mrs. Herrell uses the time her husband is away for a project.

"I usually stay home and go on a diet or do over the house while a man's not around," she said.

To learn how Tallahassee residents prepare for the influx of legislators and their families, see Meg Madigan's story on page [illegible]E.

IN TALLAHASSEE

It's a Game of Musical Chairs

See Jeanne Voltz's story about legislators' wives from Miami moving to Tallahassee, on page 29-E

By MEG MADIGAN
Special To The Herald

TALLAHASSEE — The first half of the game of musical chairs played biennially by an increasingly large number of Tallahassee housewives ends Tuesday.

The exodus of natives of this capital city to neighboring coast cottages, cramped efficiencies, or "Mother's" was completed this past week. The immigration of hundreds of out-of-towners to furnished homes (some with servants) is now in full swing.

The game will begin again June 5 when session - weary visitors once more pack youngsters, pets and baggage into the family car and start for home.

This curious ingathering of folks from all over the state to Tallahassee occurs in the early Spring of every odd-numbered year when the Legislature convenes.

The session meets on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in April when the North Florida countryside is ablaze with dogwood, plum blossoms and azaleas. On opening day the capital building's legislative chambers are themselves a riot of color with the traditional floral bouquets — from at least two to fifteen or twenty elaborate arrangements — covering the top of each lawmaker's desk.

* * *

FAMILIES haven't always accompanied the solons to the capital. For many years the Legislature was strictly a masculine affair, the social life one of poker parties, fish frys and poker parties.

With improved transportation the legislators' wives began making brief trips to Tallahassee. Local hostesses, who had become quite politically-conscious, began to vie with one another to entertain these session guests.

The Governor stepped into the social picture and inaugurated the full-dress reception officially opening the party season. (This year's reception will be Wednesday.

Later Florida's First Lady opened the Executive Mansion for a luncheon honoring the legisladies. April 22 has been set aside as the date for this session's party.

All this, of course, changed the ways of the lawmakers.

No one knows exactly when the solon wives decided to pack the family and move to the capital. Nor when the local homeowners decided to sacrifice comfort for rent money.

That it's profitable to both visitor and native is undeniable.

The legislator with a home-away-from-home puts in a five - day week instead of spending half the time on the road between home and the capital.

The local landlady (it's usually the wife who makes the decision to move out and rent the house) pockets from $600 to $2,000 for the two months of cramped living.

* * *

MOST LEGISLADIES feel the session sojourn is a priceless education for the entire family. The children not only get an insight into how the state governs itself, but they like the brief change in schools and friends.

Legislative families are treated like royalty. Classrooms welcome the children, neighbors and grocers treat parents like old friends.

Unhappily for short-term capitalities the fabulous parties of a few years back appear to be gone.

Local partygivers explain that their affairs got out of hand. Many of the visitors brought constituents, strangers came uninvited. Guest lists of 250 swelled to double that number.

Then, too, with embarrassing inquiries into their clients' business affairs — particularly with the state — lobbyists are reluctant to call attention to themselves by picking up the tab at fancy affairs.

But entertainment there will be and to the newcomer the atmosphere of the 60 days in the hilly, garden-conscious, tradition-steeped and plantation-sporting capital will be invigorating and exciting.

It's a good idea for the session visitor to come equipped with party clothes and spending money. This is excellent antique-gathering country.

* * *

WOMEN ARE EXPECTED to take a more active part in this session than ever before. There will be only one woman legislator — good-looking Junior Leaguer Beth Johnson from Orlando. Mary Patton of Apalachicola was defeated in November.

Four women of the press will cover the lawmakers' activities. But the number of feminine lobbyists undoubtedly will increase.

In earlier sessions women have represented every interest from mental health to water conservation.

Musicians Honor Dr. Foster

The University of Miami, music clubs in Greater Miami and civic organizations will pay tribute to Dr. Bertha Foster during this year's observance of Music Week, May 2-10.

Dr. Foster is dean emeritus of the UM School of Music and founder-president of the Musicians Club of America.

The tribute will be in recognition of Dr. Foster's many contributions to the cultural development of this area over the past 30 years.

Some of the events in Dr. Foster's honor are:

A CONCERT by the Miami Chapter of the American Guild of Organists, Greater Miami church choirs and the All-Miami Youth Symphony Orchestra.

TWO CONCERTS by the University of Miami Symphony Orchestra at which the programs will be dedicated to Dr. Foster, one at the Miami Beach Municipal Auditorium, the other at Dade County Auditorium.

A CHAMBER MUSIC RECITAL by faculty members of the University of Miami School of Music at Beaumont Hall.

A LUNCHEON by the Women's Division of the Miami-Dade County Chamber of Commerce at which Dr. Foster will be honored as the "Woman of the Year."

A CONCERT by the Miami Symphonic Society Orchestra at the Miami Public Library auditorium.

A TWO-PIANO RECITAL by Francelle Bellenger and Mrs. Victor G. Williams in the Dixie Room of the Musicians Club.

A CONCERT sponsored by the Miami Music Teachers Association in the Miami Public Library at which all the works performed will have been specially written and dedicated to Dr. Foster by Miami-area composers.

A LUNCHEON by the Fort Lauderdale Music Club at the Lago Mar Hotel there.

The concluding event will be a testimonial supper in the Everglades Hotel.

Proceeds from the supper will benefit the Musicians Club of America, which Dr. Foster founded 20 years ago. The club maintains a home in Coral Gables for musicians who have reached their golden years.

Consuls Invited To Lunch

Consular Corps members and their wives will be honor guests Tuesday when the Miami Woman's Club holds a Pan American luncheon in the clubhouse.

George M. McSherry, director of Miami Port Authority, will speak on "Furthering International Understanding" and several international artists will entertain wearing their native costumes.

The program is planned by Mrs. J. Barco Bishop, international relations chairman.

Entertainment includes George Ann Williamson performing the sombrero dance and a Spanish ballet accompanied on tape by Mana-Zucca; Mrs. Dita DeVaux Splaine, singing Latin American folk songs; a group of University of Miami students doing South American folk dances; folk dancers from the Ukrainian American Club and Lithuanian folk songs by Miss Anita Karns.

Show To Benefit Child Welfare

Child welfare will benefit from the annual fashion show and luncheon sponsored by Dade County Pharmaceutical Auxiliary Wednesday. Funds collected will be added to the more than $700 spent for this purpose this year.

Details for the fashion show, which takes place at noon at The Garden Restaurant, 2235 SW 8th St., are being arranged by Mrs. Sam P. Leone, president, and Mrs. Michael Troy, chairman. Fashions will be by Phyllis Originals. Models will be members of the Auxiliary, and Richard Leone will entertain.

Symphony Welcomes Husbands

For the first time in its seven year history, the Symphony Club of the University of Miami is holding its annual membership meeting at night so husbands may attend. It's at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the McAllister Hotel.

Mrs. Mitchell Wolfson, president, will give her annual report; board members will be elected and allocation of Symphony Club funds for 1958-59 will be announced. The funds are used for the UM's school of music and symphony orchestra.

Ten of the board members will put on a skit written by Mrs. Paul Bromberg, corresponding secretary of the club.

'Young Patients Worshipped Their Doctors'

By MARY ENGLISH
Herald Columnist

Your South
Florida
Child

DEAR MRS. ENGLISH:

Your comments in The Miami Herald interested me.

I know little of children's hospitals in general, but worked as a volunteer in the children's ward in a hospital in New York City. The "average youngster" in the ward where the 18 beds were usually occupied by orthopedic cases did not seem to "find hospitilization intolerable."

Parents were permitted during visiting hours only, except when they sat beside the bed of a child coming out of the anesthetic.

Dr. Spock may think that there is a tendency to train tender loving care out of the medical students, but the doctors caring for the children where I worked were absolutely worshipped by their patients.

It would hardly be possible for the children's parents to be more considerate and understanding.

These doctors at the hospital I am referring to were trained at various medical schools throughout the world, as there is no medical school connected with the hospital.

NURSE'S AID

I am sure that Dr. Spock did not mean to reflect on the medical profession since he is an outstanding physician himself and since it is against medical ethics for a doctor to reflect on his profession or members of it. I am the wife of a physician and also have great respect for the medical profession as well as a personal friendship for many members of it.

The point I was trying to make was that even the most skilled and highly trained people cannot possibly have the same emotional attachment for the children under their care or meet the emotional needs of these sick children as well as their parents can.

Without love the individual spirit will wither.

With love, the individual can survive almost anything even the knowledge that he may be condemned to die.

That is why I feel it is important for children undergoing pain and suffering to be surrounded by their loved ones.

* * *

No Pinworms In Dogs, Cats

DEAR MRS. ENGLISH:

Recently my wife brought your column to my attention because she was concerned about our house cat, after your statement that pin worms are often picked up from children's handling of cats and dogs.

As a veterinarian I was in a position to reassure her that dogs and cats do not have pin worms in the sense that they are found in humans. Vets know that the only animal that has true pinworms is the horse. Sometimes the tape worm segments found in the feces of dogs and cats are confused with pin worms by the laity.

But even these tape worms would be transmitted to children only with great difficulty because of the peculiarity of their life cycles.

I suppose there is a possibility (remote) that a dog or cat could act as a carrier of pin worms from one human to another but I assure that such an occurence would be very rare indeed.

A VETERINARIAN

Thank you for writing.

I had quoted from a medical book that I considered authoritative, but on further inquiry after receiving your letter, I found that you are right.

The disease is rarely picked up from dogs or cats.

She Helps Neighbor

DEAR MRS. ENGLISH:

Our-nine-year-old daughter was wonderful about helping look after our two younger children, 3 and 5, and very good help around the house until recently. Now she acts as if she hates her younger brother and sister and is very impudent to me.

She spends most of her time next door, helping my neighbor with her two children the ages of mine.

In addition, she quotes the neighbor as an authority on everything and acts as if I am an ignoramus. We were always so close and this new attitude breaks my heart.

HURT MOTHER

DEAR HURT MOTHER:

Most mothers of nine-year-olds have been through this. I know I have. But this too will pass.

If your daughter did not love her brothers and sister deeply, she would not show an interest in the neighbor's children. If she did not love you very much, she would not transfer her affections temporarily to the neighborhood woman.

She is at the age where she is trying to assert her independence and to prove to you that she can fend for herself.

Mrs. English invites your questions. If you have a problem concerning your child, which can be discussed in this column, write her at The Miami Herald, Miami, Fla.

Ways To Make Cut Flowers Last Longer

By JEAN WARDLOW
Herald Staff Writer

It's Spring when a man's fancy turns to love and flowers. We have no advice for the former, but the University of Delaware has some tips for the latter.

So tell your hubby it's Spring, that you like roses and get out the vases.

First, wash your flower containers well to remove any bacterial growth which might cause flowers to wilt.

Cut stems on a slant with a sharp knife or clippers. This allows the flower to take up more water.

Strip off any leaves that will be under water. Underwater leaves decay rapidly and cause the flower to wilt faster.

Keep arranged flowers in as cool a spot as possible. This reduces water loss.

Cut Diagonally

Who Has Recipe For Yeast Loaves?

MRS. P. of address unknown — 'cause I threw away the envelope by mistake — may be in Newcomers' Exchange. But she likes the old ways of doing things.

Wants to know "if someone can tell me how to make bread as they did in the olden days when they had a starter crock. I don't mean sourdough biscuits, but regular yeast loaves."

She'd also like recipes for chocolate and glazed doughnuts.

Be Careful Of Hibiscus

MRS. H. of Fort Lauderdale has a P.S. for you-all. You-all Newcomers, that is.

"I enjoy the tips to Newcomers but think you ought to put a great big P.S. on the item about putting hibiscus blooms in the refrigerator.

"The Newcomers should be warned to be very careful to remove all ants and bugs from the blooms or those refrigerators will be a sorry sight."

We shudder at the mere thought.

Mrs. H. continues, "Good luck to the Newcomers. This is a great place to be."

There now. Isn't that a real Southern welcome?

This is a Sunday, Tuesday and Friday column for the Florida homemaker. Newcomers' Exchange appears twice a month during that time. Hints, questions and answers may be mailed with full name and address to Readers' Exchange or Newcomers' Exchange. The Miami Herald, Miami 30.

CREME VITONIA
Creme Vitonia is the triumphant result of years of French research. Herald Glamor Clinic Show April 13

By ELEANOR HART
Herald Glamor Clinic Editor

By popular request, The Miami Herald Glamor Clinic is doing it again — a free program with "live" Glamor Clinic models to show you that their transformations are the "real thing."

The programs will be presented on April 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. in Miami Public Library Auditorium, 1 Biscayne Blvd., in conjunction with the library's observance of National Library Week.

Tickets for both evening performances are available upon request at the library, beginning at 6 p.m. Monday. Seating capacity of the auditorium is limited to 300.

Stars on the programs will be the Glamor Clinic's Marilyn, the pretty blonde beauty contest winner (vintage 1947) who slimmed her way from 182 to 137 pounds; Jerri Miller, director of Pygmalion Modeling School, where Glamor Clinic subjects learn the whys and wherefores of glamor, and three local hairdressers, whose magic fingers create the piece de resistance for the well-groomed woman — her hair style.

On April 13, Gordon Lee Dowda of the Gordon Lee Dowda Beauty College and Lady Be Lovely Beauty Salons, will be on stage to demonstrate the latest in beautiful coiffures.

Mr. Dowda, first vice president of the Florida Hairdressers Association, and member of the National Official Hair Fashion Committee, has just returned from New York where he observed the latest in hair fashions at the annual International Beauty Trade Show.

He also attended the world's hair styling contest in Cologne, Germany, in 1958, and lectured and observed at hair styling centers in Holland, Belgium, France, Switzerland, Portugal and Italy.

On April 14, Mr. Baldi will take the coiffure artist spotlight. The owner of four local beauty shops, he is a member of the Los Angeles and Hollywood, Cal., Coiffure Guild and has been suggested for membership in the International Coiffure Designers' Guild, which originated in Paris.

Mr. Baldi served as forum chairman and was in charge of the hair design contest for the recent International Beauty Show, the world's biggest hair show. More than 60,000 hairdressers attended the four-day program.

Inez Reed, owner of the Boulevard Beauty Salon, former OHFC member and charter member of the Florida Hair Styling Committee, will be on the program both nights to tell about the work she has done for the Glamor Clinic's mystery guest.

Yes, "mystery." A woman whose dramatic story of weight loss has not yet been published will make her first public appearance.

You will see pictures of the mystery woman as she was last November when she weighed 202½ pounds, then meet the real person.

And you'll be amazed!

Eleanor Hart, editor of The Herald's famed Glamor Clinic, will explain the clinic's work. Helga Eason, head of the library's community relations department, will welcome guests.

'Barbershop' Quartets To Compete

The old-fashioned strains of "Sweet Adeline" in four part harmony will waft out over Miami Beach April 10-12.

That's when the Magic City Chapter, Sweet Adelines, Inc. of Miami, plays host to the Fifth Annual Chorus and Quartet competition of Region Nine.

Events to be staged at the Golden Gate Motel include a Friday morning meeting, with Mrs. Jo Dugger, Daytona Beach, presiding as regent.

Craft sessions will follow on Friday, studying phases of barbershop-type singing.

Nine quartets will compete for the regional championship at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Chorus competition is scheduled for 8:15 p.m. Saturday.

The Magic City chapter is the present regional champion chorus, having won the crown at the 1958 competition in Orlando. Region Nine includes Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

'I Just Yell "Hands Off!" to Snoopers'

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

I have the same problem as Frantic. Like her, the people who come in my house get up, uninvited, and wander from room to room. Although I don't have such uncommon things as Frantic, I do have a lot of crystal and porcelain vases and figurines.

When people are bad mannered enough to pick them up, I am just rude enough to tell them, "Hands off!"

I tell my cleaning woman every single space must be spotless and ready for inspection at all times. That includes the cabinet under the sink, all closets, even my husband's dresser drawers.

When I expect others than close friends, or entertain a crowd or club, I stuff everything fragile into the curio cabinet I was forced to buy, and lock it.

Please can't somebody come up with some method to make these snoopers behave?

DISGUSTED

P. S. I'm going to frame Frantic's letter with your cute sketches and hang it up—prominently.

This may be the "method" that will do the trick!

* * *

This House Isn't for Sale

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

Frantic's letter surely rings the bell with me and with other women as well.

Why should the casual caller from "up home" or the woman from the local church circle or bridge club feel that the inspection of each square foot of the house is part of the entertainment, from closets through the utility (futility?) room?

One caller even opened the cupboard doors, and her more thoughtful husband said, "Jane, THIS house isn't for sale!"

I guess that's the answer, so much "looking." But I'd like to do more entertaining if guests could be counted on to know and stay in their place.

UNSOCIABLE SAL

* * *

They Ask 'How Much?'

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

Frantic's got Indian brass—I've got the brassy acquaintances. When they ask what I've been doing lately and I mention sewing new drapes, they barge in to feel the fabric and ask how much I paid for the lining.

We had the house and roof painted, everyone on the block asked "how much?" The firm's truck was outside for a week. Why didn't they ask the driver or call the firm?

When neighbors have a chance to see my new dress, they have a ball going through my closet, shoes, bags, asking "how much?"

I like my neighbors, but Heaven save me from snoops.

TIRED OF SNOOPS

* * *

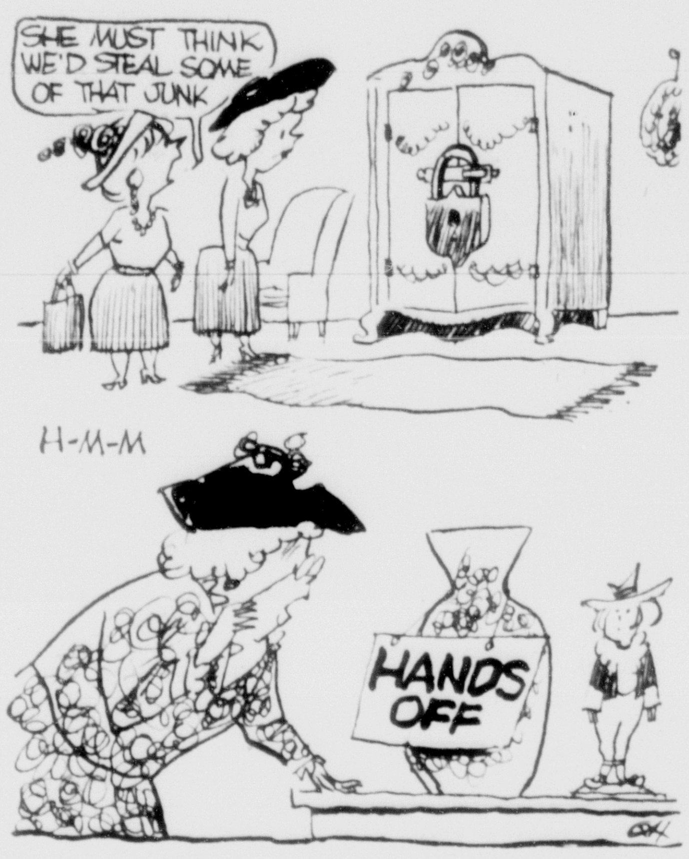
Many Things Disappeared

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

If Frantic can remain seated while people snoop, I admire her fortitude. I used to open my home for house and garden tours, but so many little things disappeared, I had to station a friend or maid in every room.

Now I entertain at the club or some hotel.

ONE WHO GAVE UP



SHE MUST THINK WE'D STEAL SOME OF THAT JUNK
H-M-M

COX

She's as Cold As a Museum

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

Frantic sounds like a person who lives alone, completely selfish. Emily Post and Amy Vanderbilt notwithstanding, I am always flattered when someone admires any little original touch in my humble home, and believe me, I don't have any priceless antiques.

If Frantic's friends (and I don't know how she could have any) and acquaintances knew how she felt about her museum, I am sure they would leave her strictly alone to admire her treasures.

I would say she is as cold as a museum piece herself.

PEASANT

DEAR PEASANT:

Although yours is the only "unsympathetic" voice raised today in regard to Frantic's problem, it's nice hearing from you . . . gives the discussion "variety!"

* * *

These Rebels Are Hateful

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

I have a nice friend and neighbor who is a Yankee. She married into a family of southerners, and her sisters-in-law treat her like dirt. They never include her in anything, resent the affection their mothers-in-law show her and her children.

When she or any of her family is sick, not one of them offers any assistance.

But if one of the rebels gets sick, they all flock around. Sad part is this girl is fool enough to offer her help to any of them any time.

But they are too ignorant to be polite. I have never met a more hateful or jealous bunch of girls. I have often felt like putting in my two cents, but I must depend on one of these rebels for many things, such as transportation.

Maybe if they see this in print, they'll get a good look at themselves.

SORRY FRIEND

Hope it isn't too "good" — you might lose your ride! I think the "happy" part is that this girl is human enough to continue to offer her help—eventually her milk of human kindness might help to sweeten some of these sour apples.

Eleanor Hart.

'. . . I'm Still Studying'

By JEAN WARDLOW
Herald Staff Writer

What neighborhood gossip is to some women, corporate taxes are to Evelyn Wirebaugh. They roll right off her tongue.

She's a whiz with figures. She never has trouble balancing her checkbook. Or her budget. She can even do a fast add job while doing her weekly marketing. And at any given time she could probably tell you exactly how much money she has in her purse.

Wonderful Women

For Evelyn Wirebaugh is Greater Miami's only woman bank auditor. There was a time—in 1940—when she was the only one in the country.

There were 3,000 banking auditors in the group's national organization. But as far as anyone knew, Mrs. Wirebaugh was the only woman.

She has no college degree, claims she got into banking "just by accident," and began her career as one who let bank customers into the vault to their safety deposit boxes.

—Herald Staff Photo by Ray Fisher

Mrs. Evelyn Wirebaugh
. . . bank auditor at home

* * *

She Started At the Bottom

AN ATHLETIC-LOOKING woman with short gray-blonde hair, Mrs. Wirebaugh recalled that when she finished high school in Warren, Ohio, "my goal was to be a physical education director." She spoke with enthusiasm and friendliness which those in her office at Miami Beach First National Bank say are two of her great traits.

But she answered a blind ad for a summer job, and her potential career in physical education diminished as her actual career in banking began. She even remembers the day — May 14, 1925. "I started right at the bottom," she says.

But she made her way through proof, bookkeeping, trust, auditing and comptrolling departments — emerging eventually as an officer of the bank in 1940.

She made these steps "by reading and studying," she says. "I've had to study law—what I don't know myself, I study to learn." Then she smiled and pointed to shelves of books lining part of her office. "You can see I'm still doing it."

She also has studied at the American Institute of Banking, Youngstown College (now university).

* * *

Field Is Full Of Opportunities

ANY DIFFICULTY in getting her foot in the man's door of bank auditing? "I could just about write a book," she said and smiled. "A great deal of that disappeared through the years, of course . . . it's a field full of opportunity for women now, but still a field too few know about."

She and her husband, Harold W. Wirebaugh, a realtor here, came to Miami 13 years ago—"We wanted to make a change because of his health."

Since that time she's earned many distinctions and a few include:

Assisting in organization of the State of Florida Conference of the National Association of Bank Auditors and Comptrollers; being the only woman president of conference (she also was South Florida's director, treasurer, secretary);

Assisting in a survey (National Association of Bank Women) of business women for the U.S. Department of Labor;

She was chosen a Woman of Achievement in '55 by District 10's Business and Professional Women's Club;

Was listed in the first Who's Who of American Women this year.

And if you wonder what "banker's hours" are for Mrs. Wirebaugh, they're long—"I've no quitting time—usually 5:30 or 6 if I don't work at night." Then it's 8:30 or 9.

And when she gets home, is it to a modern house as streamlined and functionally perfect as a bank balance?

Not on your life. It's to an early American style home, furnished with antiques she and her husband have "tramped the country" to find. And here she melts from tailored career woman into cafe curtain-femininity.

Local Children Will Enjoy Hadassah Aliyah Parties

Parties and other entertainment for handicapped and sick children in local institutions are on the agenda Monday for the ten groups comprising the Miami Chapter of Hadassah.

CHAI GROUP, working with the Red Cross staff, will entertain the children at Jackson Memorial Hospital with a puppet show presented by their members.

MENORAH GROUP will have refreshments and entertainment for the children at the United Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

NAOMI AND JUNIOR HADASSAH groups will combine to sponsor a party at the National Children Cardiac Hospital. Jerry and Lee Chapin and their puppets will entertain.

TIKVA GROUP'S party is at the Hope School for Retarded Children and TORAH GROUP will entertain the children of Dade County Children's Home.

MOUNT SCOPUS AND CHAIM WEITZMANN groups will combine for a party at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Rehabilitation Center for Crippled Children. A dramatic group directed by Mrs. R. E. Grimm will present the program.

Mrs. Louis Schwartzman, Youth Aliyah coordinator for the Miami Chapter of Hadassah, is project chairman.

Gathers Hide Hip Bulges

The "hippy type" should choose a dress with a fitted front marked by a demi-belt or band under the bosom and a loose straight or gathered back that disguises bulges.

Black Eye's the Vogue

PARIS —(WNS)— A new model at the Virginie couture house in Paris, has created more of a stir than any of the famous mannequins.

On opening day Marie Christine Dessouches showed up with a black eye. Women believed it was a new make-up style and rushed out to copy her.

Now that the eye has healed, Marie Christine is blackening both eyes subtly and has had three motion-picture offers.

First Man In Space To Be Dad

Miami Herald-Chicago News Wire

WASHINGTON — The chances are that the man the U.S. shoots into space will be married and the father of more than one child.

Most of the volunteers for the big ride are married and the fathers of anywhere from two to seven children, according to a spokesman of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Asked whether this did not pose a possible emotional problem, the spokesman said he did not think so. "We hope that this project will wind up no more dangerous than flying a new plane."

He added that the man is not going to be fired into space until there is every confidence that he can return safely to earth.

The original group of volunteers will have been weeded down to a final group of under a dozen this month. Their names will be made public then and they will be made available for interviews at a press conference in Washington.

This final group will undergo a long training period, and eventually one man out of it will be picked to go up. He will be either from the Air Force, Navy or Marines.

He will be under 40, no taller than 5 feet 11, a graduate of a test pilot school, with at least 1,500 hours of jet flying under his belt. And he will have a college degree in one of the sciences.

It may be as long as three years before he gets a look at outer space via Project Mercury, as the man in space project is known. And various animals will have been sent up first.

She Gets Big Chance, Death

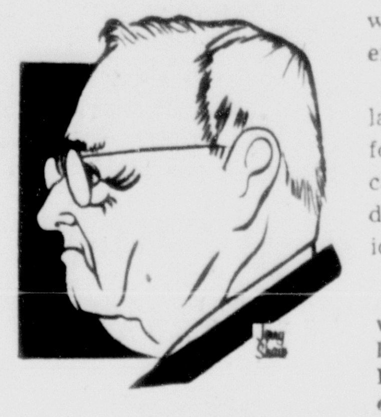
PARIS —(AP)— A pretty British dancer who got her chance in the famed Folies Bergeres only two days ago was shot dead by a stray bullet while walking to the theater.

She was Maureen Graham, 19 and blonde, who came here from London three weeks ago. Police said the shot apparently was fired by an Algerian nationalist who was gunning for another Algerian. The intended victim was wounded slightly, and the gunman was captured after a rush-hour chase near the Folies.

Being 'Downgraded' in Cold War

Foreign Ministers Losing Their Grand Old Tradition

Policy-making foreign ministers are going by the board. They are being put on the level of "technicians," carrying out the strategy formulated by the No. 1 man in the respective nations.



Secretary Dulles

. . . one-man task force

LONDON — (UPI) — U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles may be the last of the foreign ministers in the old "grand tradition."

Diplomats here see a significant switch in the higher spheres of international relations.

The cold war has pushed international diplomacy right up to the summit — apparently to stay. As President Eisenhower conceded recently, there may be a whole series of summit meetings.

At the same time, it has downgraded the foreign ministers to the level of "technicians" or "backroom boys" for the summit leaders. The ambassadors of today have dropped still lower in the scale.

Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan are credited with the chief responsibility for this change.

Macmillan returned from his recent peace mission to Moscow to report to Eisenhower and other Western leaders that Khrushchev is the only man in the Kremlin with authority to deal with them.

In a period when Dulles was winning a name as a one-man globe-trotting diplomatic task force for the U. S., Macmillan was busy taking Britain's foreign policy into his own hands.

Sir Anthony Eden was the last of Britain's policy-making foreign ministers. When he became prime minister he was determined to keep foreign policy under his own control.

His first foreign secretary was Macmillan, but Macmillan had ideas of his own and in December, 1955, Eden switched him to Chancellor of the Exchequer and brought in Selwyn Lloyd to the foreign office.

Lloyd, a colorless lawyer, has been foreign secretary ever since — first to Eden, then to Macmillan.

He is acknowledged today to be hard-working and loyal. But, from the outset, he always has been the self-effacing permanent "number two," the man who does the spadework but rarely collects the credit, the man who always appears in the newsreels walking one step behind the boss, the diplomatic "boy who carries the bag."

In West Germany, aged Chancellor Konrad Adenauer never has let the foreign policy reins out of his hands. From the foundation of the federal republic in 1949 he combined the job of foreign minister with that of chancellor, always explaining this was necessary until his nation won its full independence.

In France's Fifth Republic, President Charles de Gaulle has taken the same road. As foreign minister he named able but publicity-shunning career diplomat Maurice Couve de Murville as the "technician" to carry out the policy decisions.

But the foreigh policy leadership remained firmly in the hands of one man — President Charles de Gaulle.

Wasp Brings Fatal Crash

MESA, Ariz —(AP)— A woman's attempt to shoo away a wasp while driving resulted in a collision with a school bus and the death of her daughter.

None of the 70 junior high school students on the bus was hurt.

Patrolman Carroll Bollinger said that as Mrs. Alice M. Flaherty, 34, tried to ward off the wasp, her car plowed head-on into the bus.

Viola Pearl Gibson, 16, died in a Mesa hospital. She was a passenger in the car. Mrs. Flaherty and another daughter, Shirley Ann Gibson, 13, were hospitalized with fractures.

Foreign-Born Scientists Help Shape American Space Future

When the U.S. was young it was the brains and drive of foreigners — immigrants — that shoved her to the top among nations.

Now there's a new wave of immigrants beefing up the U. S. They are the scientists who have pitched in to build our missiles and develop most of our atom-connected defenses and civilian developments. It is to them that we are grateful.

—Associated Press Wirephoto

Two Immigrants Who Now Aid U.S.
. . . German Wernher von Braun, top, and Theodore von Karman of Hungary

NEW YORK —(AP)— Since Jamestown, the U.S. has grown great on the new blood and the new brains that have flowed to her endlessly across her oceans.

She has become the sum of the minds, the morals, the muscles and the groping-for-greatness of all the world.

These immigrants of all degrees beefed up America when America needed people most of all.

Now a new wave of immigrants is beefing her up again; their numbers are not great but their quality is out of this world — almost literally.

For on these immigrants depend to a great extent at this moment — and probably for some time to come — your future, the future of your children and the future of the U.S.

There's Dr. Edward Teller, the brooding Hungarian called "Father of the H-Bomb," who left his home in Budapest when the Nazis started chucking their weight around.

There's Rocketeer Wernher von Braun, an irrepressible German who "knows" that man can go into space, survive, and shoot at the stars from there.

There's Adm. Hyman Rickover, a transplanted Russian, who first envisioned the atomic submarine and fought for it.

There's Gen. Bernard Schriever, a German, the man whose U.S. Air Force missile program will supplant in the next few years the manned bombers of today.

There's Dr. William Pickering, the lean New Zealander from Wellington, who headed the team that made the fuel that powered the rockets that got the Explorers into space.

From Budapest alone there came —

Dr. Theodore von Karman, one of the world's leading aeronautical engineers who was invited to the U.S. in 1930 and never went home again.

And Dr. Eugene Paul Wigner, a top reactor physicist, who too came to America in 1930.

And Dr. Leo Szilard, nuclear physicist, came to the U.S. in 1937, having fled his homeland when he saw oppression coming.

These immigrants are the scientists, technicians and military men — most of them Europeans and many of them post-World War II arrivals — who have played and are playing such a big role in U.S. defense and space efforts.

Washington's Sen. Henry M. Jackson, a member of the congressional joint committee on atomic energy and chairman of the group's sub-committee on military applications, says:

"We cannot overlook the priceless contributions made by those among us who were not born in the U.S. but who sought America as a place of opportunity for free men.

"Everyone of us should be grateful for the Tellers, the Von Brauns, the Pickerings and the hundreds more who have so wholeheartedly accomplished so much for their adopted land."

The Germans, led by the turbulent Von Braun, have made the most spectacular — and definitely the most publicized — contribution to U.S. space and missile achievement.

It was their Redstone rocket — whose genesis was their own wartime V2 — that became through evolution the first stage of Jupiter C.

Von Braun tried as early as April, 1956, to get the Pentagon go-ahead for a satellite shoot. But the request got bush-whacked in the jungle of service rivalries and it was the Russians that finally put up Sputnik I.

Von Braun is not bashful about saying "I told you so." He, as much as anyone, has been responsible for keeping alive the Army's missile program.

He has had the experience — he fought successfully for a German missile program when he was the guiding genius of the missile center on Peenemunde Island in the Baltic.

Von Braun is a civilian — as he was in Germany — now an American civilian employed as director of the Development Operations Division of the Army Ballistic Missile Agency at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala.

With Von Braun are still 120 Germans who surrendered with him to the Americans as Germany crumbled. These men must be considered the hard core of American missile development.

The Army has another team at work in its space research; it is located across the continent from Redstone Arsenal and its top man, too, is an immigrant.

The other team is made up of the men of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory of the California Institute of Technology. Its director is Dr. Pickering.

Dr. Pickering, who came to the U.S. as a youth, holds a number of advanced degrees in physics and related fields. He was world-famed in his profession before most Americans were aware that rockets are useful for more than the Fourth of July.

Pickering and the Jet Propulsion Laboratory crew have been responsible for major American breakthroughs in rocket propulsion systems.

When Russia exploded her first atom bomb in 1949, there ensued momentous debates among members of the Atomic Energy Commission on a crash program of development of the then-theoretical hydrogen bomb.

Teller threw his support, both scientific and ethical, to those favoring the bomb. In addition, he came up with a new approach to the thermonuclear question in 1951 and development of the "ultimate weapon" was assured.

Teller had little to do with the actual building of the H-bomb since he is essentially a theorist who works with ideas and pen and note pad. Now Teller is trying to discover how to tame the H-bomb for peaceful purposes, something akin to taming the sun.

School Talk Canceled By McGill

COLUMBUS, Ga. —(AP)— Editor Ralph McGill of The Atlanta Constitution says he has canceled plans to address a meeting of the Columbus League of Women Voters on the current school crisis "in order to spare further harassment of those concerned."

The decision was announced a few hours after the Muscogee County Commission refused to permit the League to hold the meeting in a Superior Court room May 4.

Permission to use school facilities for the speech was denied by William H. Shaw, school superintendent.

The commission voted unanimously to ban the meeting. Commissioner Roy Waller, who introduced the motion, said it was the duty of the commissioners "to keep down strife" and that permitting McGill to speak might create undue tensions.

McGill has advocated continuance of public schools even if they are ordered to integrate.

Rosetta Stone Replica Given

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (UPI) — A replica of the famed Rosetta Stone, which was discovered near Memphis, Egypt, in 1799, has been presented to Southwestern College in Memphis, Tenn.

The original stone, which enabled scholars to decipher ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics is on display in a London, England, museum. There it was seen by Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Dunham, who arranged to have a plaster model made and shipped to their home town.

London Murder Rate at Peak

LONDON —(AP)— Twelve murders were committed in metropolitan London in the first three months of this year — the most ever recorded in such a period.

During the first quarter of 1958 seven murders were reported. The annual average has been 22 since World War II.

Duluth to Have 'Biggest Lift'

DULUTH, Minn. — (UPI) — Two huge gantry cranes are being installed here to give Duluth the greatest lift capacity of any Great Lakes port.

The cranes have 110-foot-long booms and are mounted on top of a 50-foot tower. Each crane has a lifting capacity of 90 tons and will be equipped to handle cargo with hooks, buckets, or magnets.

"It's Murder !"

It's New, It's Orkin's, It's...

ORKIL

powerful new termite chemical

Yours at no extra cost when Orkin protects your property

Good News for Home Owners, Bad News for Termites

Orkin has just completed an unparalleled break-through in termite control with the development of:

1. Orkil, powerful new termite chemical.
2. The world's strongest surety bonded guarantee naming YOU, not ORKIN, as beneficiary.

Orkil is the outgrowth of the continuous laboratory and field research made possible by Orkin's size and resources. It's murder to termites . . . kills on contact and sets up a lasting chemical barrier that termites cannot penetrate.

And Orkil makes possible Orkin's unmatched guarantee. Orkin's bonded guarantee includes a definite commitment to inspect your property at least once a year.

This guarantee is bonded by one of the world's largest bonding and insurance companies with assets in excess of $355,000,000.

If anyone else claims similar protection, ask your insurance agent or attorney to review the actual bond to determine your rights as a beneficiary.

Besides Orkil and the unmatched Orkin guarantee, Orkin protection includes million-dollar liability insurance coverage. And it brings you more than half a century of experience by an organization with assets in excess of $9,000,000 and the top credit rating of AAA-1.

Measured by all standards Orkin termite control is your most economical protection.

Be sure your home is safe, Get Orkin's free inspection

Two ways to tell whether termites are eating you out of house and home: 1) see them swarming, or 2) ask "Otto", the Orkin Man, to inspect your premises without cost or obligation.

It takes a trained technician to determine the extent of an infestation. Spot checks and spot treatments won't do. Orkin inspection and treatment are complete—and completely satisfactory. Ask for the names of Orkin customers near you.

Exotic Color Of Thailand

FROM THE LAND of the tinkling temple bell and the golden Buddha comes a collection of fabrics that captures all the exotic flavor of old Siam. It is Thaibok from Thailand, all pure silk and handwoven. The colors range from the palest pastels to brilliant jewel tones of blue, green and red. The fabrics are expensive, retailing from $20 to $36 a yard for 40-inch width material. Maybe you can't afford it for draperies, but a yard or two will provide a lavish touch in dining chair seats or toss pillows. Thaibok fabrics are available through department stores and decorators.

She's at Home In Inspiration

WHETHER IT'S A MISSILE or a melaleuca, everything that "grows" in Florida is a source of inspiration for Simone Heisterman. Her fabric collection for David and Dash shows she has explored the source more thoroughly than most designers. She has avoided the obvious—the flamingo and flaming hibiscus—seeking the rarer "species" in these subtropical environs. Mrs. Heisterman's collection of 20 fabrics features stylized versions of all her source materials. Stylized means they've been reduced to design essentials. The subject matter may be a wild orchid or a man-made moon in orbit. It is recognizable, but not reproduced in photographic detail. This "stylization" makes it adaptable to any type decorating scheme. Color combinations are almost endless. You can request your own colors, if you like, and there are 17 different fabric weaves to choose from. The fabrics are priced from around $5.90 to $13.90 a yard. Mrs. Heisterman is a former New Yorker who designed fabrics for the dress industry until she came to Florida 10 years ago. Here she lives in Homestead and has turned to designing for the home furnishings industry. She is working on sketches now for a second line of Florida-inspired fabrics.

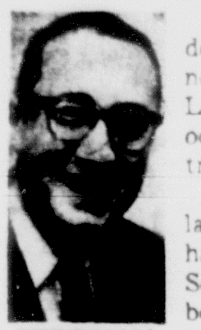
Lincoln Road Deal Jells at Half-Million

By Frederic Sherman

Herald Real Estate Editor

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT real estate transactions in Lincoln Road property was completed this week.



SHERMAN

Two Ohio investors paid half a million dollars to Leonard and Sydney Wien for the northwest corner of Meridian Ave. and Lincoln Road. The I. Miller shoe store occupies the corner of the 125 by 125-foot tract.

New owners are David M. Siff of Cleveland and George B. Nobil of Akron. Siff has made many real estate investments in South Florida. He once owned the Bal Harbour oceanfront site of the Beau Rivage Hotel.

Among present investments are the ground lease on the Sahara Motel and 225 feet of oceanfront property in the undeveloped strip north of the Fontainebleau and Eden Roc hotels. Siff has extensive holdings in Ohio, including the Truman Building in downtown Cleveland.

This is Nobil's first investment in Florida. He has large investments in Akron shopping centers, office buildings and shoe stores.

The Ohio men made their purchase through Ritter Levinson, an associate in the office of Miami Realtor Oscar Dooly. Levinson is also executive director of the Lincoln Road Association.

Siff and Nobil said they are confident Lincoln Road property is sound and believe the growth of business along it will be continual. They have no plans for further development of the property. I. Miller has a long lease. Seven of the other nine stores are also under lease.

* * *

Stiff Upper Lip Along the Road

THERE IS PLENTY of brave talk from the Lincoln Road Association, but it's no secret that business isn't what it used to be. Swanky shops in the new hotels are taking a large portion of the luxury trade.

Some recent tenants on the Road would be more at home on a carnival midway.

The downward business trend has prompted the idea of turning the Road into a landscaped mall; closing off all motor traffic.

Architect Morris Lapidus has done some sketches on the proposal. But the city does not now have the power to close the street and assess the abutting property owners for any improvements.

* * *

It's Too Late For Election

IT WOULD TAKE revision of the city charter in a general election. Mayor Ken Oka says it is too late to get such a proposal on next month' ballot. The only other way to close Lincoln Road would be through unanimous consent of every property owner along the Road. That's about as likely as a snowstorm in Perrine.

One man watching Lincoln Road closely is Stanley Whitman who announced a year and a half ago he was going to build a luxury type shopping center on land he owns opposite the Americana Hotel in Bal Harbour. Nothing has happened yet.

Word along Lincoln Road is that Whitman is still having trouble getting a key store; that the one he wants is Saks Fifth Avenue which has a 15-year lease on its Lincoln Road building.

Whitman retorts sharply, "There isn't a quality store on Lincoln Road that doesn't want to come in with me in Bal Harbour." And he adds that he is certain Saks will take at least 18,000 square feet in the Bal Harbour shops, even if the store never leaves Lincoln Road.

* * *

Godfrey Road Is Drooping

SIFF AND NOBIL aren't worried about Whitman's projected center. Matter of fact, Siff says he was offered the Bal Harbour property years ago and he turned it down because he was convinced that area could do business only during the three months of the winter tourist season.

He says he hasn't changed his mind. "Just take a look at what happens in Surfside during the summer," he suggests.

Whitman might do well to look for tenants from Arthur Godfrey Road (41st Street) in Miami Beach.

Rentals have dropped there faster than they have on Lincoln Road. And with the new causeway coming along, things are bound to get worse. Real estate men agree you can't combine fast traffic and a shopping street. They point to the blight on 5th Street down at the southern end of Miami Beach.

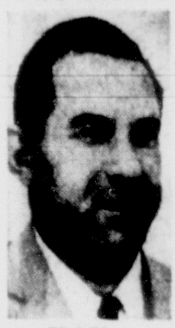
Two Centers Get the Cash For Building

TWO MAJOR SHOPPING CENTERS will be getting out of the planning stage and into construction within the next month.

BLUMBERG



KAY

A $1 million mortgage commitment has been granted to David Blumberg and Joshua Segal for their Cutler Ridge center on U.S. 1 just south of Perrine. The mortgage from American National Insurance Co. of Galveston was arranged by Florida Mortgage Funding Corp.

Blumberg said work should be underway within four weeks. Working drawings are now being completed by Gamble, Pownall and Gilroy of Fort Lauderdale. There will be 125,000 feet of space in the first section which is scheduled for completion in the Autumn. The Cutler Ridge center is projected for 650,000 square feet and a total cost of $12 million.

A Food Fair store is already open.

Signed for the first section are Liggett, Neisner's, W. T. Grant and Butler Shoes.

Mortgage commitment in the million-dollar bracket was received Friday by Sheldon Kay for his Westchester shopping center on the northeast corner of Coral Way and 87th Ave. Food Fair is the kingpin of both the Westchester and Cutler Ridge centers.

Kay, the developer of Century and Westchester Homes, reported he had received his mortgage money from a major insurance firm in Hartford, Conn. Don Reiff is the architect.

Kay said the first section will contain 107,400 square feet and that it will be ready to open in October. As in the Cutler Ridge center, Food Fair is the kingpin store for Westchester. Other major tenants include Whalen, Woolworth, Western Auto and W. T. Grant.

There is nothing definite from Samuel Sapiro who was supposed to get started months ago on a shopping center across from Westchester on the southeast corner. This was to be the first Dade County location for Publix markets, an aggressive organization in central and West Florida.

Sapiro said he is expecting bids shortly on the first section of his center. Real estate men believe Sapiro will put up the Publix building and then sit back to sample the traffic flow before going ahead with any other stores.

Dry Lumber Standard Endorsed

A dry lumber standard has been endorsed by the key code committees of the Southern Building Code Congress for inclusion in the Southern Standard Building Code.

The dry standard would impose a 19 per cent moisture content limit on house framing lumber as a protection against decay and shrinkage.

M. L. Clement, executive director of the Congress, said adoption of the measure will provide a "much needed safeguard for future homeowners."

The measure is now up for action at the municipal level. Local ratification would assure its inclusion in the Southern Building Code used by 798 cities and towns in the south and southwest.

Clement said, "If the moisture content of lumber is too high at the time it is placed in the house frame, the lumber will shrink, and this can lead to serious structural defects, not to mention the possibilities of deterioration and decay."

Clement added that the research committee of his organization has been assured of the availability of dry lumber in all species.

Bridges Keep You Safely in Suspension

By RALPH SEGMAN
Science Service Staff Writer

ON A WINDY November morning, the engineer in charge of the Tacoma Narrows bridge rushed to the telephone.

Alarmed at the rhythmic rise and fall of the 2,800-foot suspension span (the third longest in the world), he ordered stiffening wire ropes for immediate installation. When he returned, the span was gone.

Out of this death in 1940 of a four-month-old engineering masterpiece came the phoenix-like birth of a new science, bridge aerodynamics.

In less than two decades, the science has reached perhaps its ultimate expression in the new Straits of Mackinac bridge in upper Michigan. The bridge is the first utilizing the concept of "perfect aerodynamic stability."

* * *

THE WORLD'S longest suspension bridge, 8,614 feet from anchorage to anchorage, "Big Mac" can withstand virtually infinite wind velocity. With its deck openings shut solid by ice and show, it could shrug off a 632-mile-an-hour wind, a blow that is far beyond what will ever happen.

What is more remarkable is this: The stronger the blow, the more rigid and resisting the bridge becomes.

The lesson learned from the Tacoma collapse was a shocking one, indeed, to bridge engineers, who venerated the principle of flexibility in suspension spans. The Tacoma Bridge was the most flexible ever built and was hailed as one of the safest.

* * *

DURING its construction the motions of the span, even in gentle breezes, caused "seasickness" among the rugged workers. Yet, the supreme confidence of authorities, designers and builders was not shaken. Motorists seemed to enjoy the bouncing, swaying ride on the bridge they dubbed "Galloping Gertie."

Then came the 42-mile-an-hour wind, violent up-and-down oscillations and writhing.

Like a narrow wooden ruler being twisted in opposite directions at each end, the span snapped. Tearing away from suspending cables, it crashed into Puget Sound more than 200 feet below.

The catastrophe was not unexpected to Dr. David B. Steinman, designer of hundreds of bridges, among them the Mackinac. He had previously suggested the span be stiffened.

* * *

BEFORE MOST of his profession had recognized aerodynamic oscillations as a problem, Dr. Steinman had begun to work on the solution. He recently said that some 20 bridges completed since 1930 have been subjected to disturbing or dangerous oscillations.

At least two of them, the Golden Gate and the Bronx-Whitestone, have undergone costly stiffening reconstruction.

Dr. Steinman credits John A. Roebling, designer of the Brooklyn Bridge more than 90 years ago, as being the first man to do something about aerodynamic instability.

With an intuitive rather than scientific grasp of the problem, Roebling built his suspension spans using special stiffening methods.

For nearly three-quarters of a century thereafter, this phase of bridge building was totally ignored.

* * *

MERE STIFFENING is not the best way to build large and safe suspension bridges, Dr. Steinman maintains it is both more scientific and more economical to eliminate the cause of aerodynamic instability than to build heavy powerful structures to resist the force of the wind.

It is surprising that aerodynamics was not applied sooner to bridges since it has been utilized by aircraft designers from the beginning of the air age.

Wings are shaped in such a way that the airflow around them produces a greater pressure on the under surface, thus a lifting force.

Similar forces act on bridge roadways which are supported by cables from above and a network of steel girders below. In a steady wind, the flexible span tends to oscillate up and down in harmony with the air pressure which acts rhythmically to force it up and then down. These oscillations are self-exciting and may, in a short time, grow violent in non-aerodynamic bridges.

* * *

DR. STEINMAN performs a neat simple demonstration of this effect. Mounting half a solid sphere between two light springs he exposes the flat side to a stream of air from an electric fan. He pulls the half-sphere up or down slightly and lets go. The resulting small oscillation rapidly builds up into a violent one. When the round side of the half-sphere faces the fan, any oscillation that is started promptly damps out.

Employing this "round-side" principle, Dr. Steinman designed the Mackinac Bridge. As he described it:

"When the bridge floor is moving up, the resultant aerodynamic forces act down; and vice versa. As a result, any vibration (as from traffic) is quickly brought to rest. The bridge actually utilizes the force of the wind to produce stability; the stronger the wind, the more stable the bridge!"

As an added safety factor, the two inner traffic lanes are constructed of open steel grillwork, thus eliminating some of the solid surface that otherwise would be exposed to wind pressures. For the same reason, there are open slots at the far edges of the outer lanes.

Dr. Steinman believes the design of the $100 million Mackinac Bridge permitted a saving of $15 million in its construction.

The finished structure represents to him a triumph of mathematics applied to bridge design and a towering symbol of greater bridges to come.

* * *

A GENERATION AGO, Dr. Steinman said, the feasibility of suspension spans of 3,000 feet was seriously questioned. Today, the world's longest span—the Golden Gate Bridge extends 4,200 feet. The Mackinac's span is 3,800 feet, the George Washington's is 3,500 feet and the new Tacoma Narrows (aerodynamically safe) span is 2,800 feet.

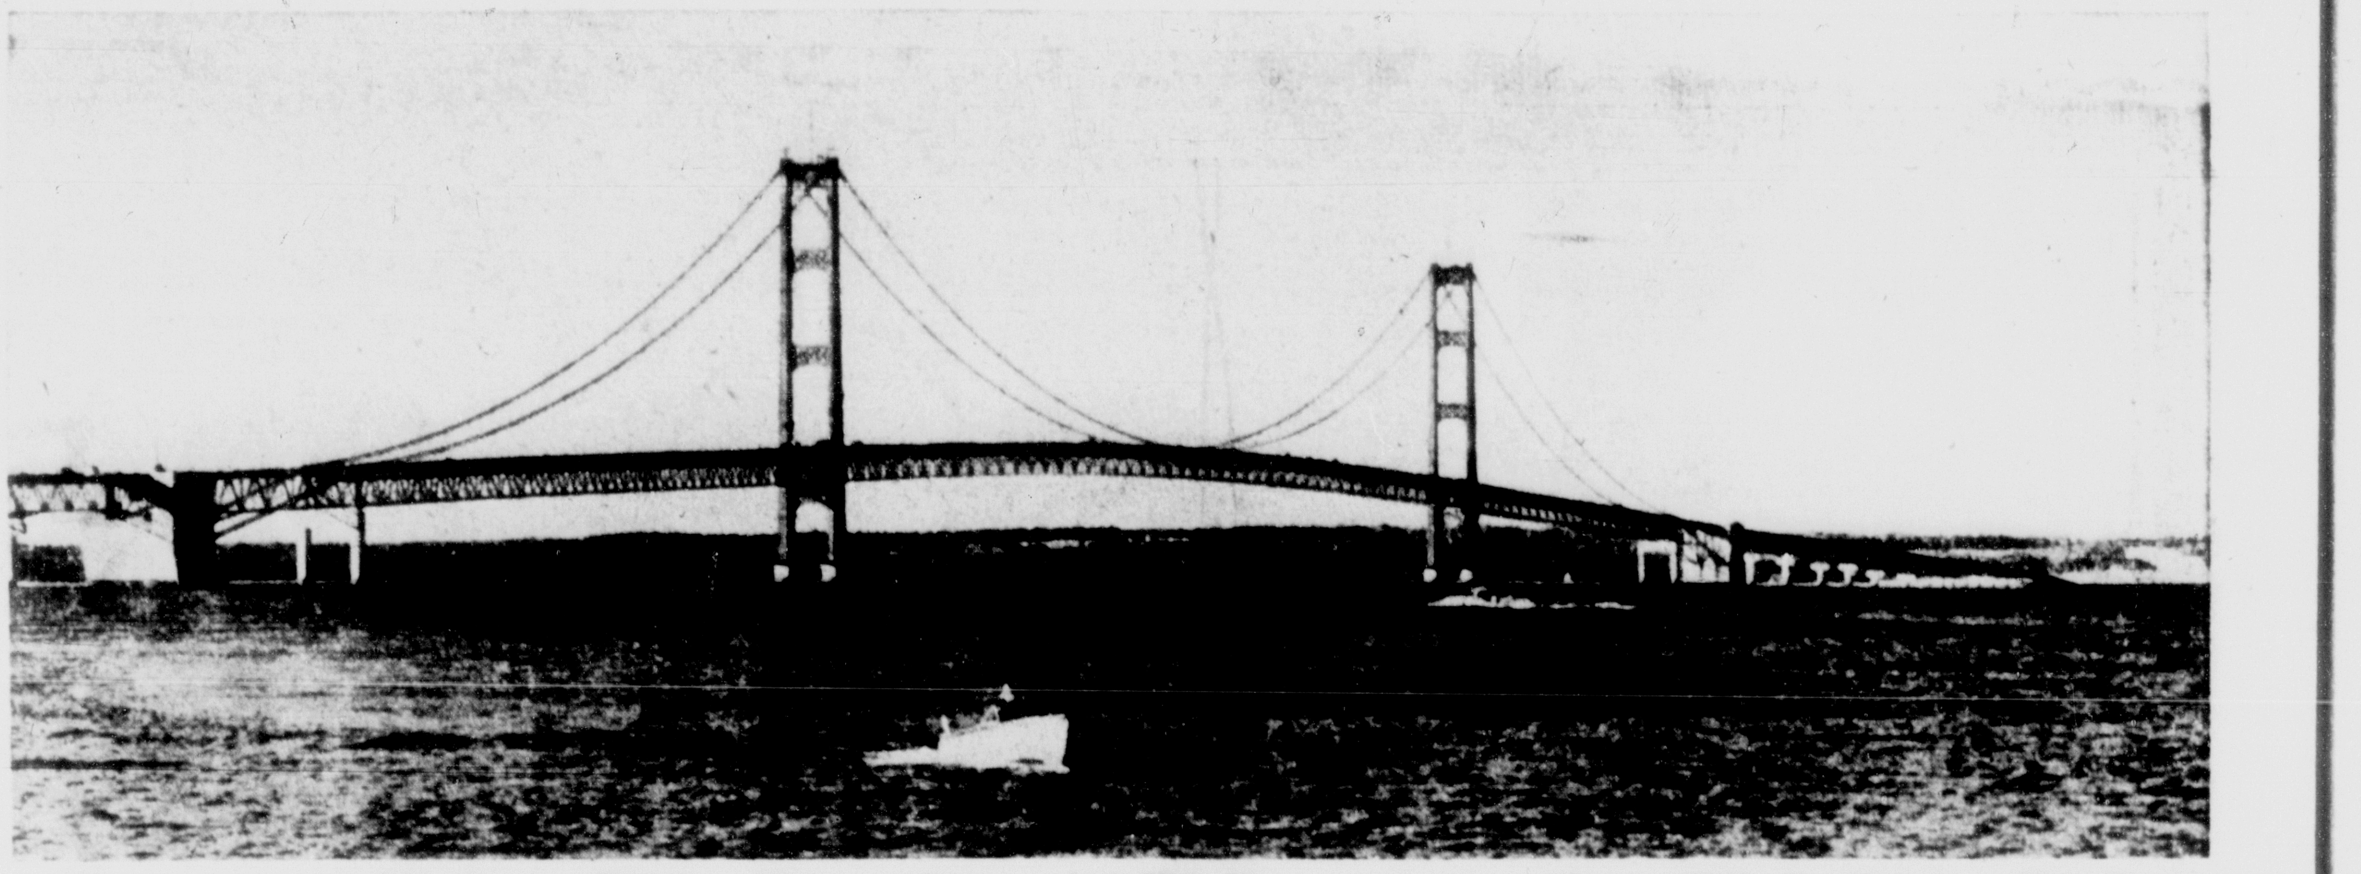
A span 5,000 feet long has been designed to cross over the Messina Straits between Italy and Sicily. A 6,300-footer is in the planning stage, and Dr. Steinman expects suspended spans up to 10,000 feet.

Besides suspension spans, used primarily to bridge deep waters, there are some 20 other types of bridges. Development of long spans for them has created an urgent need for improved materials. There now are alloy steels, heat-treated carbon steels and cold-drawn high-carbon bridge wire. Some materials already have three or four times the safe working strength of ordinary steel. The principal lightweight material is structural aluminum. One of the newer materials is pre-stressed concrete, or concrete compressed and strengthened by pre-stretched steel wires running through its length.

* * *

THE GROWING American turnpike system has added hundreds of bridges, large and small. The impelling demands of industrial expansion and motor travel have brought almost complete extinction to the era of the plodding ferryboat.

Indeed, bridges constitute one of the major forces in the advance of civilization. Their majesty and grace touch to the core the aesthetic in man's nature. Even more, they somehow express for man his highest aspirations.



The Straits of Mackinac Bridge Has a Span of 3,800 Feet and Can Shrug Off the Wildest Winds

"Finest neighbors anywhere..."

8-E THE MIAMI HERALD Sunday, March 15, 1959

* * *

'My Neighbors Are the Best!'

DEAR ELEANOR HART:

In a world of griping and complaints, I would like to tell you about a group of the finest people I have ever had the pleasure to meet.

Five months ago my family and I moved to South Miami Heights and were immediately accepted by these warm hearted neighbors. They are all average people financially, yet never miss an opportunity to do some good for someone.

Three weeks ago, very suddenly, my father who lived with us passed away. The reaction of these fine people was remarkable.

They came bringing food, offers of taking my two children while all the upset was going on, and most of all, gave more moral support than I've ever been offered before.

All were concerned for me, due to the fact that I am expecting my third child shortly and that my dad and I had been exceptionally close.

The other night they honored me with a lovely surprise baby shower. As I said earlier none are in a position to spend lots of money, but brought lovely gifts. The very sweet girl next door had decorated her house and everything was delightful.

I would like to publicly acclaim them the finest neighbors anywhere. God bless each one and may their lives be as good as they deserve.

I only hope I can be half as helpful and considerate to them in the future as they have been to me.

RITA C.

A testimonial like yours should do more for real estate values in your section than the most deluxe ad! It's a pleasure to print your letter. Let us hope it will serve as an inspiration to other areas where neighbors are, ahem, not quite so considerate.

MIAMI BEACH SUN . . . March 8, 1959

"Layne became the first developer in Florida recently to sell premium quality waterfront homesites on terms. Residential lots are now available for only 15% down and the remainder payable in 20 equal installments spread over five years at 5% interest. Never before has such superlative waterfront property been offered on a virtual pay-as-you-go basis."

"The development was carved out by H. B. Layne. Just north of Miami Beach, it is one of the plushest developments on Florida's famed Gold Coast."

HOLLYWOOD SUN-TATTLER . . . February 13, 1959

"All utilities are installed, seawalls constructed, boulevards paved and landscaping effected. A fully established community has been developed with families living here and new buildings rising constantly. All told, 400 waterfront residential lots have been created at Golden Isles. The community consists of nine islands in a graceful grouping along the Intracoastal Waterway."

FLORIDA TREND MAGAZINE . . . February, 1959

"The state had plenty of low and moderate cost home developments building, but little, if anything, was being done to provide areas which would appeal to people of substantial means. This was the thinking of H. B. "Pappy" Layne, which impelled him to create Golden Isles, Florida's most unusual multi-island community."

THE DETROIT NEWS . . . August 23, 1958

"H. B. Layne's Golden Isles community in this east coast town is a top quality residential and apartment development created by 47-year-old H. B. "Pappy" Layne, an Ohio builder-developer who has built 20 other communities throughout the Buckeye State and Indiana."

Despite cost increases...

"F&R CAN GET IT FOR YOU WHOLESALE!"

During the past 6 months...

labor and material costs have climbed skyward once again. Total the various increases and they amount to 3% to 5%. On a $16,000 house this could easily cost you $480 to $800 more for the same kind and size of house. Any builder would be within his province to go ahead and raise prices for his new homes.

But F&R has not raised prices!

In fact, F&R has consistently absorbed these cost increases during the past 12 months. Realistically, F&R decided not to increase prices and this accounts for their pace-setting sales records. For, if F&R were to build a Coral Park Estates or Miller Way home figuring today's costs . . . the retail prices would be many hundreds of dollars more than these homes are currently selling for. Compare . . . and you'll see how great a value F&R homes are on today's market.

Along with homes at today's COST figures:

APPLIANCES:

F & R will purchase any major Frigidaire appliance you want at a special discount price. Here again, F & R's mammoth purchasing power works for you. Appliances you buy can be financed along with your home on one VA or FHA mortgage.

FURNITURE:

F & R is noted for the fashionable — yet practical — manner in which they furnish their homes. Delson's Furniture Company of Coral Gables will honor your "F & R Courtesy Discount Card". With this card, F & R home-buyers will get the same discount prices that F & R itself gets because of its mammoth purchasing power.

INTERIOR DECORATING:

Delson's Furniture Company of Coral Gables has also agreed to allow any F & R home-buyer to use the services of Delson's staff of interior decorators without one red cent of cost or obligation.

F&R Starts New Policy:

APPLIES ITS MAMMOTH PURCHASING POWER ON YOUR BEHALF!

Buying a new home is the exciting beginning of buying many new things for the home. But — as a single solitary buyer, you can not get the best prices because you do not represent 'volume-buying' power.

F&R, however, as one of the largest volume buyers in the home-building field, represents tremendous "volume-buying" power and that is one reason why their homes are such great buys.

Starting now, F&R is going to apply its mammoth purchasing power on your behalf.

Arrangements have been made wherein, you, for instance, as an F&R home-buyer, will be able to go to Delson's Furniture Company of Coral Gables, show Delson's your "F&R Courtesy Discount Card" and buy the furniture you want at discount prices—the same discount prices that F&R gets because of its mammoth purchasing power.

There are 11 efficiencies and a large one-bedroom owner's apartment in the buildings erected in 1950. The price included the furnishings. H. H. Trice made the sale on a listing by the Keyes Co.'s Special Sales Service. The lot is 75 by 150 feet.

U.S. Starts on Postoffice That Works Automatically

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — (AP) — Giant earth-moving machines were massed on a 14-acre site this week to start construction of the world's first fully-mechanized postoffice. Just 18 months from now, postal workers will step into a two-block-long building filled with a complex of conveyors, chutes, vibrating trays, photoelectric scanning cells, vacuum feeds and automatic stamp detectors.

The 20-million-dollar push-button plant not only will serve Rhode Island and southern New England, but also will be a laboratory for developing future automation postoffices across the nation. A subsidiary of International Telephone and Telegraph Corp., will build and equip the revolutionary postal-laboratory postoffice. After its completion in September, 1960, Intelex Systems Inc., New York, will lease the plant to the Postoffice Department.

The building will cover more than three acres of its site adjoining rail facilities. It will have a landing port for helicopters. It will be 20 minutes from an airport. And it will be served by an express highway.

Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield, said: "As a result of the work done here, our postoffices of the future will be cleaner, less congested, and better able to process the future increase in mail volume. Drudgery will be eliminated and the abilities of career postal employes used to better advantage."

Is This a Good Year to Buy a House?

By SYLVIA PORTER
Financial Analyst

PORTER

IN MOST AREAS around the country, people with houses to sell are experiencing the first of their "shut-in weekends" until the right buyers sign on the line. Real estate agents in the majority of regions already are reporting inquiries at the highest level in years.

The annual homebuying season, in short, is now into full swing.

The percentage of consumers who, according to the latest Federal Reserve System survey, plan to buy houses in 1959 is up to 9.3 per cent, far above 1958 number and close to the record of purchasers in 1955 when over 1,300,000 houses were built.

* * *

FOR HUNDREDS of thousands of Americans in every income class, "Should I buy now?," therefore, is truly the key question.

Well, is it a good year for you to go ahead with what probably will be the biggest financial move of your life?

IT IS—if you are relatively sure that you're set to stay in your present locality and thus, you won't be forced into a sudden sale.

IT IS — if you are fully aware that homeownership will involve many more expenses than monthly mortgage and interest payments, and you have the basic nest egg and income to cover these other expenses.

IT IS — because the fundamental forces which have been operating in favor of homeownership since the start of World War II are continuing to operate on that side.

* * *

PRICES OF BUYING and building a home are at new peaks, but there are no signs that they're going into a decline and, on the contrary, the trend is still toward higher prices.

In the past decade, homebuilding costs have doubled, and then some.

In many regions around our large cities the decent $10,000 house is a memory, the $15,000 house is disappearing fast. As prices of new homes have risen, prices of older houses have stiffened, too.

It's far from a comfortable situation for the middle-income homebuyer but, with wages in the building industry rising automatically and costs of materials heading up too, the outlook is for still fatter prices. And the general economic pattern for the 1960s hardly suggests waiting to buy is a wise decision.

* * *

MORTGAGE MONEY is more expensive than a year ago, but it's not likely to get cheaper and, on the contrary, the probability is a mortgage will become harder and more expensive to obtain.

We're not now in anything like the mortgage money squeeze of Summer-Fall, 1957. Mortgage money is available and you might be able to get a fairly favorable deal if you have a good credit rating and banking connections. The direction of mortgage money costs is upward, though. There's not much sense in holding off in the hope of a cheaper mortgage.

Prices of land are at an all-time top, still climbing. In some areas in California, Florida and Arizona, there is danger of runaway speculation in land. But in even modestly prosperous regions, land prices are on the rise. From coast to coast, suburbs are stretching out, swallowing rural lands. Waiting for a decline in land prices appears pretty futile.

The choice of homes to buy is the best ever. Tens of millions of homes have been built since World War II. There is no shortage of houses whatsoever. On older houses, you can bargain. In new houses, you can get more for your money than a couple of years ago.

* * *

FINALLY, much as homebuilding costs have risen recently, rents have risen more. The weight is still in favor of homeownership, particularly when the tax deduction angles are included, too. There are many aspects to homeownership that have nothing to do with money — the emotional fulfillment of ownership, of "belonging" to a community, etc. And on a strictly financial basis it also makes sense.

But which is best, a new house or an older one?

On the side of buying the older house now is that in general, the initial cost for the same amount of shelter in a used house will be perceptibly lower than in a new one.

As you can get satisfactory transportation at lower cost by buying a used car rather than a shiny 1959 model, so you can get satisfactory shelter at lower cost by buying an existing house instead of a 1959 model.

With the disappearance of the housing scarcity, in recent years prices of used houses have been rising much slower than prices of new houses. Actually, prices of homes built before 1940 — and in many areas, even before 1950 — have been sliding.

On average, you should be able to buy "bare shelter" in a second-hand house around 15 per cent cheaper than "bare shelter" in a new house, estimates Perry Prentice, publisher of "House & Home" — a substantial differential in a financial transaction of this magnitude.

In the last few years, builders have tended to put more house, more appliances, more countless extras into new homes — naturally boosting the cost of the homes. The upsurge in land prices alone has pushed up the price of new homes to buyers. The increase in interest rates since the mid-50s has compelled builders to pay more to finance their operations, and these costs have been passed on to the ultimate buyers of the houses.

On the side of buying the new house now, though, is that you'll get the great advantages of the latest improvements in materials, in design, in construction, in built-in appliances. And you'll not be in danger of swelling your house cost by extensive, expensive remodeling.

The buyer of a used house — particularly one built more than a decade ago — may find the purchase a dreadful financial error if he goes in for major remodeling. The cost of adding an extra bathroom to an existing house may be triple the cost of putting an additional one in the new house. The cost of new insulation, new wiring, replacing rusty plumbing, modernizing a kitchen, knocking out walls may run into hair-raising totals. And even after the remodeling, the house will be "old" — won't have the exciting new materials, designs and the built-in appliances.

Dearie, Do You Remember?

Flagler . . . the Kendall Citrus Pioneer

Few residents of the booming Kendall area realize that their neighborhood was not so many years ago dotted with orange trees instead of swimming pools.

The trees belonged to railroad tycoon Henry Flagler, who, when given his choice in selecting the best location for a model citrus grove, picked a 200-acre tract at Kendall—bisected by U.S. 1 and his Florida East Coast Railroad—and bounded roughly by N. Kendall Drive, Ludlum Road, Montgomery and Galloway Drives.

Flagler put 70 acres in orange and grapefruit as his first planting and Flagler Groves became noted for the quality and quantity of its fruit—produced at the rate of 70,000 boxes a year, year after year.

This, says a 24-year-old property brief in the Keyes Co. property record files, "made it an extremely profitable proposition."

After Flagler's death, the property was bought in 1920 by George Merrick (developer of Coral Gables) and R. H. Rice for $100,000—about $500 an acre. Rice, who acquired Merrick's interest in the property, resold it two years later for $225,000.

Income from the grove remained so substantial that it was never subdivided even during the heyday of the boom. But, in 1926, the trees were severely damaged in the Sept. 18 hurricane.

Following the storm, the grove was not properly cared for and income dropped to the point where, in 1932, it was appraised for loan purposes by the Federal Land Bank in Columbia, S.C., at $60,000.

During the depths of the "bust," the property was offered for sale at $30,000 — $10,000 down. A four-bedroom frame home, farm buildings and a fruit and vegetable stand, now part of the Keyes Kendall office, were included in the price.

As South Florida recuperated from the effects of the hurricane and collapse of the boom, the property was developed into homesites—a typical offering was a 2-bedroom, 1-bath home with velvet pine living room on a 160 by 302 foot plat for $5,750.

Prospective buyers were told the value of the property would be greatly "enhanced by the completion of the Overseas Highway to Key West, the bonds for which have just been signed"—and the steady southward trend of Greater Miami.

This was a classic example of understatement — considering that property sold at that time for $150 an acre now brings up to $11,000 an acre.

Seven acres with 500 feet frontage on U.S. 1 offered for $25,000 by Keyes in the early '40 s is now valued at close to $200,000.

The history of Flagler Groves is proof positive that predictions of increased property values in South Dade are based on facts.

Permits Up, Value Down

More building permits were issued in North Miami last month than for the same period last year but their valuation was considerably less.

March permits totaled 183 and were valued at $428,795, compared to 178 issued in March of 1958 and valued at $716,765.

In dollars and cents, homes contributed the most to the total. The eight permits issued were valued at $142,747. More permits were issued for roofs and roof repairs than for any other type construction. These totaled 50 and were valued at $21,245.

Science Promises Lower House Prices

By Science Service

WASHINGTON — Lower price tags on new houses may be in the offing to bring more homes within reach of the average American's pocketbook.

The American Association for the Advancement of Science was told here that houses of the future will be more functional and built more and more on a mass basis, using modular designs.

Future houses, said Edmund Claxton, vice president of Armstrong Cork Co., will be characterized by "flexibility, expansibility and mobility." More prefabrication will be used, especially in utility units. But even prefabricated living units "may be the economic way of the future," he said.

Panel and curtain walls, now appearing in houses of generally higher price ranges, may eventually be economically feasible for low-cost mass housing, he said.

Use of prestressed concrete in residences will increase, too, he predicted. Other future developments may include expanded use of plastics—for instance as roof coatings. He cited experimental work now being done in Italy with molded window sashes.

Government missile research may contribute to lower costs also. A strong, heat-resisting plastic is needed for missiles, he said, and its successful development might well hold implications for the building industry.

The House Doctor

Get Busy on Stains Before They Dig In

By HERMAN BAUM

START FROM THE CENTER, DEAR.
I KNOW! I KNOW! I KNOW!

(Readers with questions on the maintenance and repair of the home may receive answers by addressing The House Doctor, care of The Miami Herald. Please limit letters to one question and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply).

DEAR MR. BAUM:

"I purchased a new tweed carpet and my husband immediately spilled a cup of black coffee on it. I wiped it up at once but the stain still remains. Can it be removed? Mrs. D. A. B.

ANSWER—Asking us about rug stains is like writing a letter to the fire department that your house is ablaze. Stains must be attacked immediately, else they are probably there permanently. Before they dry, most stains can be removed by using a mixture of one teaspoonful of soapless laundry detergent in a pint of luke warm water. Stir thoroughly until all the detergent is dissolved. Using a clean white unstarched cloth, apply this to the stain with a circular motion. Begin at the center and work toward the edges, trying to keep inside the stained area at all times. Sponge with clear water and finally blot up the moisture with damp cloths. Once stains are dry, the job of removal should be left to a professional rug cleaner.

* * *

The Efficiency Is Important

DEAR MR. BAUM:

My church is putting up a new community building and I have been delegated to ask you for impartial information concerning the cost of water heating for the kitchen. We are primarily interested in doing the job the least expensive way. Your opinion will be appreciated. Mrs. R. R. G.

ANSWER — Economy of operation is always an important factor in making a decision of this kind, but there is another factor that even churches with limited resources should consider, and that is convenience. There is no doubt that you can install a "bucket-a-day" coal burning heater and do the job at minimum cost, but then you have the problem of fuel storage and ash disposal as well as the task of finding a willing hand to start the fire and deep the heater going for hours before the hot water will be required.

It is possible to give you only approximate figures concerning the fuel required for heating water because much depends upon the efficiency of the heating unit you are using. Based on the heat content of the various fuels and the efficiency of average water heating equipment, you can heat 50 gallons of water every day for a month and consume 580 pounds of coal in so doing. With an electric heater, 370 kilowatt-hours will be required for the same job. An automatic oil fired water heater will consume 50 gallons of oil and a gas heater, using manufactured gas will use 2,800 cubic feet. Natural gas, containing more heat per unit, will require 1,400 cubic feet. By using these figures, and the cost of the various fuels in your locality, you can determine the approximate relative cost.

* * *

Quick Reports For Readers

B.A.R. — The use of green lumber is the cause of nails pushing out of gypsum-board walls and ceilings.

MRS. C. M. — Why should the spiders under the house cause you any concern? Would you prefer to have the mosquitoes and flies that the spiders kill?

R. P. T — Look through "do-it-yourself" magazines for advertisements for chair caning supplies and instructions.

MRS. S. N. S — That water on the walls is condensation due to lack of proper ventilation of the house. Try opening some windows.

* * *

Nothing to Do If Tile's Dull

DEAR MR. BAUM:

The tile bathroom floors in my new home are dull and lifeless. I complained to the builder who blamed the tilesetter who blamed the painter who knows nothing about anything. I have tried all kinds of cleaners but nothing works. Any suggestions? Mrs. A. K.

ANSWER — None at all — the thought of blood upsets me. If dull tile was selected for these floors, that is the way they are going to be from here on out.

This Aluminum Doesn't Polish

DEAR MR. BAUM:

I have some heavy cast aluminum cooking wear purchased seven years ago. The surface is pitted and dull. I have found no way to polish it. Is there an answer? Mrs. R. H.

ANSWER — Cast aluminum is attacked by salt and acids in food so that the surface eventually does become dull. The only way to bring back the shine is to have the ware refinished by a professional metal polisher and the cost would not justify the results. Guests have no right snooping in your kitchen anyway, so why worry.

Don't Worry About Redwood

DEAR MR. BAUM:

Two years ago, we installed redwood frame windows on our house and we are very pleased with them. A killjoy neighbor tells us we are nuts because bugs will soon eat up the wood and the windows will fall off the house. If he is right, what should we do to protect the wood? Mr. and Mrs. B.

ANSWER — Smart people generally know enough to keep their mouths shut. It is the ones that know nothing of what they are talking that make all the noise. Redwood is the most durable of all woods except mahogany. It is immune to all insects and will last for a great many years even when buried in the ground with no protection.

Building has been simplified by using a one-piece bottom and avoiding conventional rib construction. Lack of a center seam makes it particularly strong and water-tight. It will plane nicely with a 5 or 7½ h. p. motor. The beam is 48", the depth 17", and it weighs 120 pounds, making it possible to carry it on top of your car. Segregation Hottest Issue for 1959 Session

Legislators Are Agreed: No New Taxes

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

The Florida Legislature convenes Tuesday in Tallahassee with the taxpayer in a favored and unusual role.

All indications point to the lawmakers holding the line — no new taxes on Mr. Average Citizen.

JOHNSON

Segregation legislation probably will take up much of the lawmakers time and oratory, especially in view of next year, when a governor's race will be under way.

Senators and representatives traditionally keep an ear cocked for an issue which might skyrocket them into a contending position for the executive mansion.

COLLINS

On taxes, the top men in both houses are adamant. They already are cutting pet projects of many legislators to the bone.

The House leaders this session will be Speaker Thomas D. Beasley of DeFuniak Springs, Rules Chairman Doyle Connor of Starke and Appropriations Chairman Cliff Herrell of Miami.

Senate leaders are President Dewey Johnson of Quincy, Rules Chairman W. Turner Davis of Madison and Appropriations Chairman Wilson Carraway of Tallahassee.

BEASLEY

The role of Gov. LeRoy Collins, now in his "lame duck" period and under fire from many legislators for his moderate approach on the racial question, will bear watching.

Whether Collins will have much influence with the lawmakers this session appears dubious.

However, he does hold the power to veto bills which fail to meet his approval.

* * *

Segregation Law Sure

WITH EVERY MAN in both the Senate and House committed to upholding Florida's traditional separation of the Negro and white races, the only issue here is the method.

Extremists favor the so-called "Last Resort" bill which would give the voters of each affected county the right to vote on closing the public schools rather than accept integration forced by the courts.

The moderates favor the existing Pupil Assignment Law or a strengthening of this statute along the lines of an already court-upheld assignment law in Alabama.

A third approach is the Parent Option proposal authored by Attorney General Richard Ervin and State School Superintendent Thomas D. Bailey.

It would provide for the state paying a part of the private school tuition of students whose parents withdrew them from an integrated school rather than have them attend with Negro children.

* * *

Capital's Festive

ALREADY Tallahassee has taken on an almost festive air, an atmosphere akin to circus day in a small town.

This is the capital city's biggest event, happening only once every two years. Each year it becomes "bigger and better."

Hotels long since have been sold out. Many a Tallahassee family has moved out of comfortable homes in the quiet, neat residential sections to make room — at a lucrative rental — for the visiting senators, representatives and lobbyists.

This is the one time when every corner of the state is well represented in the capital

A sidelight to the important picture of law-making is that the Tallahassee police declare a virtual moritorium on liquor restrictions during the 60-day session. Leon County is legally "dry."

But during the session, almost as much liquid refreshment is served at parties big and small as would be dished out at the tourist resort centers.

* * *

Three Big Issues

AS FOR issues confronting the lawmakers, basically they are those revolving around taxes, the racial issue and the now perennial issue of reapportionment.

Plans will be offered on reapportionment — ways and means of realigning the Senate and House in compliance with the Florida Constitution — but virtually no hope exists of anything approximating fair and true apportionment passing.

That hassle has been going on since the 1955 session, with the small county "Pork Chop Gang" bloc firmly in control in the Senate and not planning to give up.

Here is a thumbnail rundown on other legislation in the offing:

GASOLINE TAX

Proposals will be made for a one-cent additional gasoline tax, the revenues to be kept in the county where collected. This money would be used for road building.

If this measure is passed — chances are it won't be — counties probably will be allowed to levy it on a local referendum basis. This would permit those which don't want it to preserve the status quo at seven cents, equal to the highest state gasoline tax in the nation.

LIQUOR

If legislators decide that any new sources of revenue are necessary, beer and liquor undoubtedly will become prime targets. Liquor dealers, on the other hand, will have their own lobbyists working for a price control act which they hope will eliminate price wars.

GAMBLING

Virtually no chance of any extension of legalized gambling.

RACING

Efforts will be made to get harness racing authorized for Pompano, but because of opposition to any extension of gambling, this measure appears to be lost.

A bill may be introduced to permit one Miami dog track to operate in summer instead of winter.

CENTRAL PURCHASING

The governor and many key legislators will back this measure for all state agencies, including the controversial issuance of printing contracts. A modified purchasing act may be the outcome.

POLITICAL PARTIES

The Democrats will again seek passage of the 100 per cent "loyalty oath" for party candidates. Chances are it will be rejected as before.

Democrats may be more successful in their bid to eliminate the Presidential Preference Primary which political leaders figure serves no good purpose.

RECOVERY ACT

This is aimed at getting back for the state welfare payments made to persons with property. Under it, the state would have a lien on property of recipients, but collectable only after death of the owner. Other states have found by such a law that relatives will take over the responsibility of support rather than risk losing the inheritance. This measure is likely to have some strong opposition headed by Sen. Charley Johns of Starke.

TRAFFIC SAFETY

Positive reforms will be proposed including tighter issuance of licenses, examinations of persons over 65, extended driver education courses, prohibition of youths under 18 from getting a permit unless they have completed a driver education course, more stringent regulations covering drunk drivers.

SLUM CLEARANCE

Efforts will be made to get legislative approval for a constitutional amendment which would permit Florida to receive federal aid for urban renewal. The measure will have the support of the Florida League of Municipalities. Forty-one states get Urban Renewal, slum clearance help. Florida is prohibited under a state constitutional clause.

JUDICIAL REFORM

Comprehensive modernization of Florida's courts as recommended by the Judicial Council. This will be in the form of a constitutional amendment to be voted on in 1960 if the legislators approve.

BOMBINGS

Many Florida sheriffs are advocating passage of a bill to make terrorist bombings a capital offense.

BILLBOARDS

Efforts will be made to control or prohibit billboards along the Florida section of the Inter-State Highway System. There will be strong lobbying efforts, headed by former Sen. President William Shands, to defeat this, even though it would mean four million dollars additional in federal funds to Florida.

UNEMPLOYMENT

Gov. Collins is expected to push for an increase in the total weeks of compensation from the present 16 to 24 or 26 weeks.

* * *

Reorganization in Works

OTHER ISSUES will develop around a plan to reorganize the Florida Agriculture Department, eliminate the Plant Board, and the Milk Commission, curb the Florida Development Commission, provide annual sessions of the Legislature, revise the constitution, tighten budget controls and many others.

Once the racial question is disposed of, the lawmakers will be almost wide open for almost any type of legislative hassle.

Dade Delegation Divided

Dade County's four-member legislative delegation, all committed to preserving segregation if possible, are divided on how far to go in the fight.

Rep. George Hollahan and David Eldredge were among 23 legislators who signed a manifesto at Daytona Beach pledging they will lead resistance to school integration.

But Hollahan, with Rep. Cliff Herrell and Sen. Joe Eaton, declared in a Miami Herald legislative poll that they will not support "last resort" legislation which could result in a closedown of the public school system.

Eldredge, the freshman member of the delegation who was elected on an all-out segregation platform, has refused to be pinned down, maintaining the people should be allowed to vote on whether they want schools closed rather than be integrated.

THE EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Let Inflation Weaken Us, And Reds Could Triumph

Views On The News:

WRITING EDITORIALS about the perils of inflation can get to be a wearisome business.

Knight

There are more pleasurable pursuits than digesting reams of printed matter on the causes and effect of inflation — and searching for a cure.

I suspect that a good many people are bored with the subject, or resigned to the view that there isn't anything they can do about it anyhow.

Certainly the tremendous output of speeches and statements by economists, men in public life, business and labor leaders has not succeeded in dramatizing inflation as the nation's greatest domestic issue.

In the 1958 congressional elections, the "spenders," as President Eisenhower calls them, had more political glamor than the economic conservatives.

But the nation will be in grave danger if there is a continuing public acceptance of deficit spending and loose money policies as essential to "a better way of life."

Ultimately, as most non-political economists know and the politicians should know, fiscal irresponsibility leads only to disaster.

* * *

When The 'Fed' Was At Fault

IN 1941, Bernard Baruch warned the House Committee on Banking and Currency that only by long range planning could inflation be avoided.

At the time of the Korean war, Baruch said it would be "madness" not to impose economic controls upon our economy.

Prof. Yale Brozen of the University of Chicago has explained that "inflation is not possible and will not occur without an increasing quantity of money."

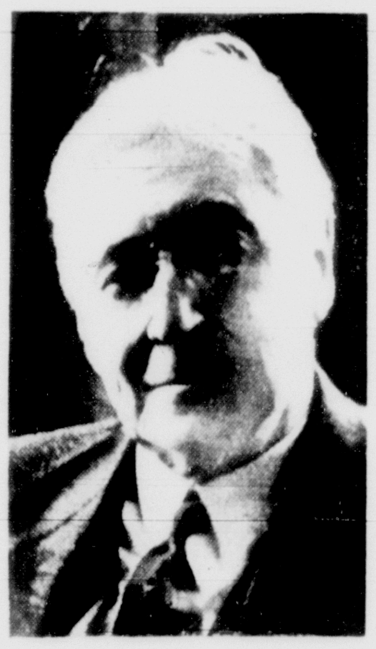
But he charges that in the period from 1940 to 1950, the Federal Reserve Board became a subservient arm of badly managed U.S. Treasury policies.

The Treasury, which was having difficulty in selling bonds, pressured the Federal Reserve Board to buy the bonds and provide banks with more funds so they could also buy them.

Although the Federal Reserve Board is supposed to be an independent agency, its political policies during the 1940's pumped an additional $70 billion into the hands of the public.

As Prof. Brozen says, "the Federal Reserve had become an engine of inflation."

These policies were vigorously protested in 1951 by Marriner Eccles, a former chairman of the Federal Reserve, and other members of the Board.



Bernard Baruch

. . . sounded the warning

Since that time, the Fed has stopped pegging the government bond market although it still maintains an "orderly" market to ease the Treasury's problems.

The significant fact is that when the Federal Reserve Board reasserted a degree of independence, the rate of inflation slowed perceptibly.

We have had much less inflation in the last six years than in the preceding six.

* * *

Our Pie Just Isn't That Big

THE CLAIM is often made that federal deficits do not lead to inflation.

But history has shown that when the government fails to show a surplus, the pressure is upon the Federal Reserve to help the Treasury meet its bond obligations.

When this happens, the Fed "manufactures" more money and the country gets more inflation.

Marriner Eccles said recently everyone wants a greater share of the economic pie than it contains, and other public bodies want more money to spend.

Leaders of organized labor want more pay and fringe benefits for fewer hours of work.

Business seeks higher profits. Increasing ranks of oldsters call for higher pensions.

"However," says Eccles, "everyone expects these benefits in dollars of stable purchasing power.

"Unfortunately, all the economy has to divide are the goods and services it is able to produce — and not the amount of money it could create, which is, of course, limitless."

As the government "manufactures" more money, the less it is worth.

* * *

Dollar Losing Face Publicly

FOR A GOOD many years, the Treasury has had difficulty in refunding its maturities and raising new money to meet its deficits.

"This indicates," says Mr. Eccles, "that the public is losing confidence in the stability of our currency."

As public confidence in U.S. bonds decreases, the government must rely upon short term financing which adds further to inflationary pressures.

The public is understandably confused by the Sumner Slichters and others who think a "creeping inflation" is not only inevitable but desirable.

But to quote Mr. Eccles again, "the cornerstone of capitalistic democracy rests upon the savings of the public."

With a "creeping inflation," why should anyone buy life insurance or annuities, government or municipal bonds, mortgages or any other fixed interest obligations which would be depreciated by an uncertain percentage each year?

Marriner Eccles

. . . the public is worried

The growing demand for common stock, without reference to worth, is a hedge against inflation and confirms Mr. Eccles' view that the public is worried about the stability of the dollar.

* * *

What To Do? Seven Things

IF YOU HAVE read this far, I hope you will agree that the gravity of the problem has not been overstated.

The insistent question is: What can or should be done about it?

1. Support Federal Reserve credit and monetary policies which, unlike the practices of the 1940's, are non-inflationary.

2. End deficits in government budgets by avoiding new programs and eliminating old ones of questionable value.

As Prof. Brozen has said: "Many of the programs now in the budget and additional ones proposed to the Congress are political frauds which are designed to institute spending programs for which people would not vote if the proposals were presented separately on the ballot."

3. Recognize that the country cannot possibly support all of the projects, however worthy, that are being advanced either by the administration or by Congress.

4. Cut down or eliminate federal subsidies when the need no longer exists or where the program has been a failure.

5. Eliminate waste in foreign aid; cut duplication in defense and insist upon economy and efficiency in all departments of government.

6. Control, by government action if necessary, the inflationary wage-price cycle.

7. Curb the monopolistic power by which huge labor organizations dictate the conditions under which our basic industries can operate.

* * *

Need No. 1 Is Statesmanship

IT SHOULD be recognized that many of our present day problems arise from the nation's rapid population growth.

The demand for more schools, highways, housing, local and state improvements is everywhere apparent.

But these projects should be considered in order of importance and actual need, rather than attempting to do everything at once.

I have heard some leading Republicans express the hope that the inflation issue can be turned to the party's benefit in 1960.

But the menace of inflation crosses party lines and spares no one.

To meet the challenge, we shall need inspired leadership from the White House and sturdy men in both parties in Congress dedicated to the principle that the weakening of our economic structure could bring Russia its greatest victory.

Cuba Today - - Pro And Con

Editor The Herald: I would like to comment on the disgraceful banner of your newspaper on Easter Sunday, "Million Jobless as Castro Orates and Fumbles."

Sure, it makes for big headlines for the thievery regime that has just been exterminated from Cuba, without regard for the hard working good Cubans who have risked their lives to give Cuba back to the people.

You, Mr. Editor, are to blame for not censoring this type of reporting.

Sub Scare Points Up Our State Of Defense

Editor The Herald: Maybe the Secretary of Defense and the other big brass bragging about our military potential should read a short article that appeared in Tuesday's Herald, "Marathon Red Sub Scare."

It tells of a submarine that appeared to be Russian but probably one of ours out of Key West, that was reported about 13 miles offshore.

The Navy at Key West sent a number of craft to investigate and "were still combing the area three hours after the report." And these searching ships etc. were from an anti-sub training school base!

I wouldn't feel like boasting after reading about this little occurrence.

Use More Prison Labor To Solve All Our Woes

Editor The Herald: The masterminds in the state cabinet have done it again! Their decision to build state institutions with prison labor is a stroke of genius! It will solve all the state's unemployment and financial problems. Construction men will jump at this opportunity to get in prison and earn a steady job.

Let's have more of this thinking. Why not extend its possibilities? Why not build all state and county buildings with prisoners, including schools?

We might even open the women's prison, while we are at it. Let the inmates act as secretaries and teachers and save a lot of money. We could even get a judge, free, to administer the whole mess, and if there aren't a few judges incarcerated in Raiford, I can suggest a couple.

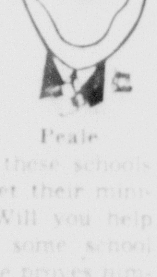
Confident Living

There Are No 'Problem Boys'

By Norman Vincent Peale

A FRUSTRATED father came to see me about his 14-year-old son.



Peale

"They tell me Bill is a problem boy," he said. "I've had him in four schools and he hasn't been able to get along in any of them. He's been kicked out of all four. But I just can't stop believing that he has something in him — yet all these schools say he doesn't meet their minimum standards. Will you help me get him into some school somewhere until he proves himself?"

"Certainly I'll help. We'll not give him up. Maybe no one has loved and believed in this boy enough to bring him out."

* * *

I RACKED my brain to think of some school I might know whose headmaster looked upon tough problems as stimulating challenges, not as something to "kick out." Finally, I thought of one. I telephoned and asked this headmaster whether he would consider taking another boy.

"Sure," he answered, "why not. It's our business to educate boys. We're full to capacity, but capacity can always be stretched when one has a barn. We can always sleep him in the haymow if we have to. Send him along."

"But," I said, "this is a problem boy."

"There's no such thing as a problem boy! There are boys who have problems but there are no problem boys."

"Well," I told him, "I believe that too. But I think you ought to know that this boy has been dropped from four schools."

"So what," was the reply. "This is going to be his fifth school and I think we can handle that boy all right. Send him along."

* * *

SO WE SENT him along. And that headmaster took the boy, studied him, believed in him, loved him, found the good in him and skillfully brought out that good. Before the year ended that so-called problem boy had become a satisfactory member of the school community.

This incident demonstrates the positive thinking that refuses to accept any problem as impossible. The positive thinker looks at a difficulty in the firm belief that potential possibilities are concealed within it, and that the problem CAN be solved. The positive approach, the unwillingness ever to accept failure, the determination to find a way to overcome — these are the secrets of the power of positive thinking and the reason it achieves such amazing results.

Merry-Go-Round

Max Taylor's Book Keeping Ike Jumpy

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower has been concerned over what Gen. Maxwell Taylor, the outgoing Army chief, might write in his memoirs this summer. Ike has been stung so often that he is supersensitive over the criticism of former Army comrades who write books after retirement.

Among those who have taken cracks at him have been Generals Omar Bradley, Matt Ridgway, James Gavin, Albert Wedemeyer, and Field Marshal Montgomery.

Pearson

Taylor was practically forced to retire because of his sharp disagreement with the President over Army strength. He had hoped to become chairman of the Joint Chiefs, and was bitterly disappointed when Gen. Nathan Twining was reappointed.

At first, Ike had intended to kick Taylor out as Army chief, too, but he changed his mind at the last minute. Army insiders claim the President was merely trying to butter him up to keep him from writing a critical book. But the offer of another two years as Army chief came too late. Taylor turned it down, and prepared to write his book.

Then out of the clear blue, as a good-bye present, Ike asked the Senate to promote Taylor to the permanent rank of four-star general.

Note — Grateful Gen. Taylor has now passed out word that his new book won't be bitter. All he intends to do is present his ideas on military strategy.

THE ROLE of a career diplomat can be rough and bumpy when politics intervenes. Ellis Briggs, ambassador to Brazil, was sitting in his office in Rio de Janeiro when a message suddenly came from Washington ordering him to distribute to the Brazilian press copies of the biography of Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce as the new ambassador.

The biographical sketch told how Mrs. Luce is the wife of Henry Luce, publisher of Time, Life, and Fortune, how she had been converted to Catholicism, and how her daughter had died tragically in an auto collision with a tree.

This was the first inkling Briggs received that he was being relieved. He dutifully distributed the press material to Brazilian newspapers, waited patiently for word of what was to become of him.

Briggs has been a career diplomat for 34 years, beginning as vice consul to Lima, and has served in some of the toughest diplomatic posts — ambassador to Communist Czechoslovakia, to war-torn Korea, also to Peru, Uruguay and Brazil. He is a troubleshooting diplomat who makes no complaint, goes where the State Department sends him.

Meanwhile in Washington, Sen. Russell Long of Louisiana, member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, has determined to fight Mrs. Luce's confirmation as Briggs' successor.

WINNING the press doesn't necessarily make a presidential candidate. But two strong men from the East and the West tested wits before two newspaper dinners and both came out well.

At an Albany press dinner, Nelson Rockefeller almost tossed his hat into the ring by chiding newsmen:

"You told me that 1958 was a bad year, but it proved otherwise. Now you're telling me 1960 is a bad year."

In Washington, another governor, Pat Brown of California, told a newspaper dinner: "I'm not interested in going to the White House. I have no intentions of running for President. I'm just anxious to be a good governor of California."

Then with a pause and a grin, he added: "I guess that makes me a candidate."

At the end of more witticisms, Brown concluded: "I've met a lot of fine candidates here and any one of them would make a good running mate."

Looks Can Tell Much About Human Beings

By JEANNE BELLAMY
Herald Editorial Writer

SOME FANS of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor didn't like their latest camera portrait. You saw it in The Herald a few days ago. It shows them sitting shoulder to shoulder, hands clasped on a table but separated by an ornate antique candlestick rising out of sight above their heads.

Bellamy

Both look weary, she wistful, he woe-begone.

"It isn't a very good picture of them," one young woman remarked ruefully.

I disagree. For once, their faces show that they can and do feel sad as well as glad. And this is news — good news to me — about a couple I saw often during their five years in Nassau.

* * *

PREVIOUS pictures depict them as sleek, charming sophisticates, happy, devoted and at ease, untouched by trouble. This was the front they presented to the world for years.

It was a brittle mask, I think, and I'm glad they've dropped it, if they have. They will be lovable as human beings who have experienced sorrow as well as joy.

No life worth living lacks both, and my guess is that the Windsors have had at least their share of suffering.

* * *

THIS CAN'T fail to be true. From birth, the duke was trained to be King of England, a demanding and rewarding job. As Prince of Wales, he toured the world, an effective goodwill ambassador for the crown he was destined to wear. His coronation never took place.

He ascended to the throne at age 41, but stepped down in less than a year to marry "the woman I love" — Baltimore-born Wallis Warfield Simpson, a divorcee and therefore ineligible to be the wife of Britain's king.

* * *

THE DUCHESS was strong-willed, a determined manager. She had tried to persuade him not to renounce the throne, and it was during their honeymoon that they agreed never to talk about what might have been.

"It is a pact and a vow we have never broken," the duke said on their 20th wedding anniversary.

Their 22nd will roll around next June, which also is the month of their birthdays. She will be 63 on June 19, he 65 on June 23.

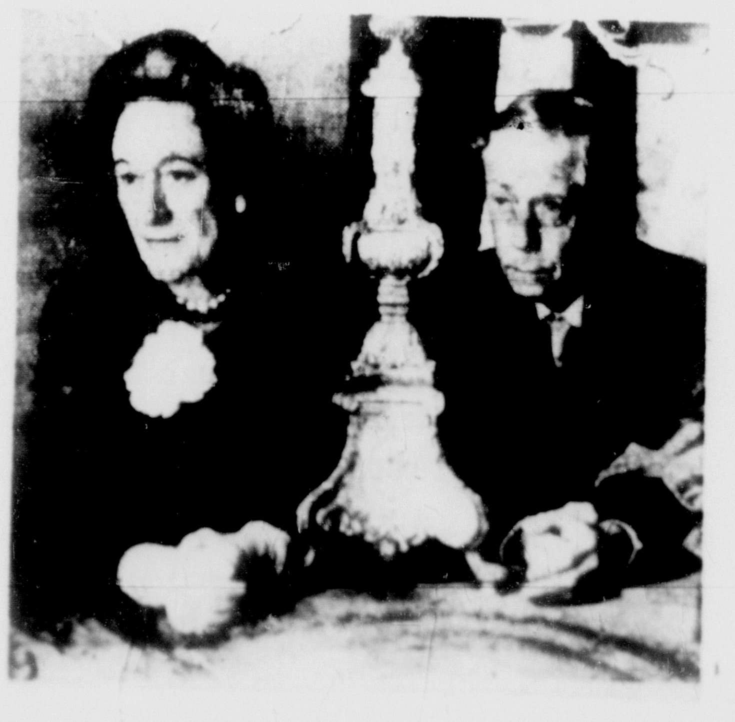
* * *

YEARS ALONE can't account for the look in their eyes in the picture taken at Hillsborough, Calif. They were at the end of a long motor trip, which could explain the tired lines around the eyes.

Perhaps they've found a new interest, together, in such simple pleasures as sightseeing by car. Last winter, they toured Central Florida that way, stopping to sample pecans at a roadside stand, picnicking on the banks of the Suwannee and staying overnight at a motel in the citrus section.

It strikes me there is something new and sweet in the face of the duchess. Is she at peace with herself at last, no longer driving herself and him toward some unreachable goal?

And the duke, although bone-weary, still has that little-boy look — a lost little boy, perhaps, but content in the love for which he gave up a kingdom and his duty.



THE TOWN CRIER

Cancer Units Should Unite

BY Jack Bell

ON MY DESK is a long explanatory bit from American Cancer Society. The purpose is to make everybody understand that the Cancer Society and the Cancer Institute at Miami are totally different. Obviously the Cancer Society folks, who have a house-to-house solicitation booked for April 21, are afraid the infamous hassle at Cancer Institute will cause donors to shy off, saying "When you people stop fussing . . ."

BELL

Well, they aren't the same. Perhaps they should be. The Grand Jury has described critics of Institute Director Dr. J. Ernest Ayre as "a small disruptive" group motivated by selfishness and a determination to "rule or ruin. We are led to the conclusion they have not acted in good faith."

Pretty strong words. But pretty necessary, in the opinion of this writer. Pettiness has led to a squabble that, but for the importance of the fight against dreaded cancer, would be silly.

Cancer Institute's major duty is to give tests for cancer of the cervix. The program was pioneered by Dr. Ayre, and the Institute built to international importance during his eight years here.

American Cancer Society started in 1913. The local chapter is eight years old. The money comes from straight donations plus the April 21st marchers. I understand 40 per cent of the Society's money goes to National, for research. In our setup, National sends money right back to: Dr. Wilhelmina Dunning at University of Miami Medical School and Dr. Auwar Hakim, who has his cancer research laboratory set up at Heart Institute at Miami Beach.

The Society also carries on an extensive education program, geared toward alertness in early detection of cancer. The service program includes surgical dressings, a motor corps, hospital beds, wheel chairs and other needs.

* * *

Everyone Should Have Checkup

IT MIGHT be good to have closer relationship between the Society and the Institute. But things work out fairly well now — or did until the Institute Board fell apart. The Society urges everybody to get a medical checkup. The doctor then sends the slides to the Institute. And in case the person is indigent the doctor asks no fee; nor does the Institute.

Seems to me a welcome innovation would be clinics with doctors doing the tests and the Institute ready to do the laboratory work. And those who can pay, do so. Those who cannot get protection anyway. Or is that too simple?

Basically, the best plan for the best protection for the most people is a unification of all these volunteer agencies, perhaps in United Fund. I'd suggest socialized medicine as an alternative, but for the fact that 97 per cent of my doctor friends would drop dead.

* * *

We Need Compulsory Examinations

BUT THINK it over. If polio, kidney workers, heart association, cancer societies, arthritic and rheumatic groups and all the rest of them were together; then mass clinical examinations would detect the afflictions or symptoms and the patients then could go back under the wing of the mother group interested in that particular fight.

We never must overlook the fact that countless people wish to donate to just one fight — against the disease that has hit a loved one.

Y'see everybody says we must have more prevention. But really, none of these groups does too much about it. Oh yes, they have lectures and forums which are wonderful. But not enough of us go to them. You've almost got to have compulsory examinations to keep a community from constant "too late" cases. We're steadily drifting toward an unhealthy category.

P.S. The Cancer Society volunteers will work under Mrs. Arthur Wood Jr. If she's not home, Linda or Nancy will take your call: PL 8-7524.

CAPITAL CORNER

Session No Longer 'Festival' for Capital

By JOHN L. BOYLES
Capitol Bureau Chief

TALLAHASSEE—The coming of the Legislature to green and grassy Tallahassee isn't what it used to be.

BOYLES

Once it heralded the most exciting social season of the capital city. For weeks townspeople kept themselves busy with plans for the arrival of lawmakers from Key West to Pensacola.

Once, lavish parties highlighted the 60-day session to the extent that some Tallahasseans looked upon the sideline frolics as a kind of North Florida Mardi Gras, sans festival costumes.

Lobbyists went all out to entertain, and local citizens consider it a social honor if they got on the invitation list.

But there have been a lot of changes and enthusiasm of the home folks here isn't the same. You hear more exclaim, "I'll be glad when it's over," than "I think it is going to be an interesting session."

Occasionally, present-day lobbyists will invite all members of one House or all 133 Legislators to dinner at the same time but generally they concentrate on small groups for private little gatherings.

One veteran observer says the wane of the plush parties is due largely to the fact that many of the legislators are prosperous and aren't impressed by gaudy affairs. Most of them, however, will take time out for a cocktail and steak.

Another factor in the demise of the big social activities is the growth of Tallahassee.

As it continues to grow there will be more citizens like the majority in Atlanta, Nashville and Indianapolis, who consider the Legislature as an important but old familiar governmental function.

Increased volume of business before the Legislature, more complex and controversial matters make the lawmakers' workday longer, too.

* * *

Same Issues

HAVING COVERED the Indiana Legislature for several years before joining The Herald we find some interesting comparisons between legislative activities in both states. Reapportionment, for example, and more home rule for cities and counties have been issues there for many years without any appreciable progress toward solving them.

Because state government is such an important part of Tallahassee's economic structure legislators generally have been waltzed in on the red carpet. But times are changing and people who rent homes are asking more money for the two-month period.

We recall that a couple of Hoosier lawmakers had some pet bills designed to loosen up their hosts.

The big hotels would raise their rates shortly before the Legislature came to town. On the first day a bill would be introduced that no liquor could be served above the ground floor of a hotel. Suddenly the hotel rates would come down and the bill was forgotten.

Then there was a pious and portly old politician who didn't believe in drinking alcoholic beverages unless they were served for free. He was the brilliant author of a measure proposing to bar the sale of any brand of liquor that bore any part of a Bibical name on its label. Somehow his bill would always get sidelined but he wore a happy smile under a big red nose.

POLITICS IN FLORIDA

Here's Who to Watch In the Legislature

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

Look for the Florida Legislature, which convenes Tuesday in Tallahassee, to move cautiously on the handling of racial bills.

There will be much steam and oratory from segregation extremists for hasty, conclusive action aimed at blocking any integration in schools. But the cooler heads, who will be in positions of control, can be depended on to keep a tight rein.

Speaker Thomas D. Beasley made this clear in his legislative preview written for The Miami Herald. "We don't want to be in the position of Virginia, where a flood of segregation bills were enacted into law and it was later realized court actions had already nullified them," the DeFuniak Springs lawyer wrote.

Beasley warned that the Legislature should not be stampeded into actions which might later prove regrettable.

As Speaker, he is in position to keep this and other situations from getting out of hand. Furthermore, Beasley is undoubtedly the most able and experienced parliamentarian in the Legislature.

* * *

Who to Watch

THE KEY MEN to keep your eye on in this legislative session are the following. What they do, what they say, how they react, the influence they exert will have a definite hearing on how Florida lives and grows in the next two years.

SPEAKER BEASLEY, who will be serving his second term as top man in the House. He previously was speaker in 1947. The fact that he has gubernatorial ambitions will make his legislative role all the more significant.

SEN. DEWEY M. JOHNSON of Quincy, president of the Senate. Johnson has been in the Senate over 20 years and served four terms in the house. As Senate president, he assumes the leadership of the "Pork Chop Gang" or small county majority bloc.

APPROPRIATIONS Charimen Rep. Cliff Herrell of Miami and Sen. Wilson Carraway of Tallahassee. Also Finance and Taxation Chairmen Rep. James Sweeney of DeLand and Sen. Tom Adams of Orange Park. These men will control the money and tax bills.

RULES CHAIRMEN Rep. Doyle Conner of Starke, who was Speaker last session, and Sen. W. Turner Davis of Madison, a past president of the upper chamber.

McDERMOTT

The rules committees have life and death power over legislation during the final 10 days of the session. They determine what bills will be considered by the two Houses.

Other key legislators who will bear particular watching are Sens. Doyle E. Carlton of Wauchula, Fred O. Dickinson of West Palm Beach, Joe Eaton of Miami, Charley E. Johns of Starke, B. C. Pearce of East Palatka, Verle A. Pope of St. Augustine and John Rawls of Marianna. In the House, Reps. Dempsey J. Barrow of Panama City, William V. Chappell of Ocala, John J. Crews of Macclenny, Ben Hill Griffin of Frostproof, George L. Hollahan of Miami, Robert T. Mann of Tampa, John E. Mathews of Jacksonville, House Dean Bernie Papy of Key West, Emmett S. Roberts of Belle Glade, Ralph Turlington of Gainesville and L. B. Vocelle of Vero Beach.

Beasley, Herrell, Carlton, Dickinson, Eaton and Pope have been talked about as possible candidates for governor. Conner and Roberts are prospective candidates for Commissioner of Agriculture. Pope also has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the cabinet office of State Treasurer and Insurance Commissioner.

* * *

Outlook Is Bright

OVERALL, the outlook for a constructive legislative session appears brighter than usual. The big danger, of course, is going too far overboard on racial legislation.

While lawmakers are determined to hold the line on taxes, pressures from the always potent school forces for more money have already begun. Rep. John Shipp of Marianna has a bill to broaden the sales tax to include such items as groceries and drugs. Shipp is always a ball-carrier for the school interests.

This time the forward wall of the legislators will be a tough, if not impossible, line to crack for any money bills which require new taxes.

* * *

Lowry Out of Race?

IN THE LONG-RANGE prediction department:

Sumter Lowry, the Tampa segregationist, will not run for governor again. A tipoff is that he recently went back on the board of directors of the Gulf Life Insurance Co., which handles substantial Negro insurance business. He left the board prior to getting in the race in 1956.

Another prediction is that Federal District Attorney James Guilmartin will return to private law practice before the year's end unless a federal judgeship opens.

A likely successor, if Guilmartin decides to make the move, would be O. B. Cline, his former top aide who is now in private practice. Cline did an outstanding job in the role of "chief of staff" in the Federal D.A.'s office.

* * *

Diplomatic Homework

DADE BAR President Joe Creel got off a good one at the Bar luncheon featuring U.S. Sen. Hubert Humphrey's address. "This is the best turnout since Gov. Collins spoke three years ago—when there were about six judgeships up for appointment," he quipped.

Humphrey, in a well phrased foreign policy address, made a telling point that the U.S. State Department had better have its "homework" well prepared before going into a summit conference. "The Russians," he said, "always come completely prepared. Too often our diplomats are caught short, thrown on the defensive, because they were not ready for the Soviet moves."

* * *

House Caucus Bids

LEGISLATORS will have a non-legislative problem to ponder over in the selection of a site for the traditional November caucus of the House of Representatives. Both Pensacola and Boca Raton, two would-be university cities, are bidding for it.

While legislative sentiment normally runs in favor of North Florida, the prospect of a University of Miami football game plus the entertainment facilities at Boca Raton gives the South Florida city a good chance for snaring the meeting.

* * *

Tongue in Cheek?

MEADE ALCORN, outgoing chairman of the Republican National Committee who is at Palm Beach, must have a tongue in cheek when he says that either Vice President Richard M. Nixon or Gov. Nelson Rockefeller of New York "will beat any candidate the Democrats can produce" in 1960. Right now, the Democrats look like odd-on favorites, although the Republicans might be able to beat two-time loser Adlai Stevenson if the Democrats gamble with him again.

FEIFFER by Jules Feiffer

Democrats Put Brake On New Housing Bill

By EDWARD COWAN
United Press International

WASHINGTON—The housing bill which was supposed to reach President Eisenhower's desk by Feb. 1 probably won't get there for several more weeks.

Congressional sources say passage has been delayed because the Democratic leadership suddenly switched signals. Instead of rushing the measure, the leaders decided to let it languish.

Behind the switch is a gradual drain on the mortgage insuring authority of the Federal Housing Administration, plus the Democrats' disposition to pass a bill bigger than the president wants.

FHA Commissioner Julian H. Zimmerman has quietly advised congressional leaders that his agency can probably operate through April without serious trouble. But he said that about May 1, unless FHA gets new authority, the mortgage insuring program would probably have to be run directly out of Washington on a day-to-day basis.

Normally, FHA field offices can insure mortgages without consulting headquarters.

Democrats pointed out, however, that previous FHA forecasts of when its authority would run out have been unduly pessimistic. They suggested the Administration would like to get a housing bill from Congress before the FHA well runs dry.

With FHA in a bind and its operations curtailed, Capitol sources said, there would be more pressure on the president to sign the omnibus housing measure.

Accordingly, the House has taken no action on a housing measure approved by its Banking and Currency Committee Feb. 25. The Rules Committee is slated to consider it April 13 and observers expect the House to begin debate two days later.

A Senate-passed bill differs from the House committee's measure in several respects.

Allowing for a House-Senate conference committee to iron out differences and resubmit a compromise bill to both houses, the legislation is not expected to arrive at the White House before the end of the month.

The final bill is expected to have "something for everyone" — authority for FHA, money for slum clearance and college housing, authorization for public housing, and an increase in the maximum interest rate on GI home loans from the present 4¾ per cent to 5¼ per cent.

This would bring the GI mortgage in line with FHA loans and probably make it easier for veterans to get GI loans. But it may also be more expensive.

Less certain, but a distinct possibility, is that Congress will approve lower down payments on medium and high-priced houses financed with FHA loans. The Banking Committee voted to allow changes in the down payment formula that would cut the minimum cash outlays on a $15,000 house from $630 to $555 and on a $20,000 house from $1,980 to $1,355.

The committee - approved measure would also extend from 30 to 35 years the maximum repayment period for an FHA loan. This would trim monthly payments by about four dollars a month on a mortgage of $13,500, but would mean that in the long run the home buyer was paying more in interest charges.

Neither of these liberalization features is in the Senate bill. But observers on both sides of congress think the Senate would accept them if the House insisted.

It was also said that whether the president will sign or veto the measure he finally gets could be influenced by what the members of Congress have been hearing this week as they spent the Easter recess back home.

Their constituents' feelings, or lack of them, about government spending could influence the size of the final measure. That in turn will be a major factor in the presidential decision to veto or sign.

School Job Boosts Beach Permit Total

A $1,688,000 permit for the construction of the new Miami Beach Senior High School brought the total valuation of Miami Beach building permits issued in March to $2,286,672.

One hundred and seventy-four permits were issued, including an apartment building at $42,500 and two residences at $55,000.

The March total was almost twice that of the month last year. In March, 1958, the total valuation of permits issued came to $1,202,547.

MAN WITH CONNECTIONS in Moscow is this welder at work on a prefabricated apartment house. It is built of reinforced concrete three to five times thinner than the kind normally used. According to the official Soviet source of this photo, it takes 30 days to erect a five-story building of this type. Use of separate inter-story overlap is supposed to make the structure more soundproof.

Time to Battle Termites Is Before They Show Up

If you are building a new home, you will be interested in what an Agricultural Extension Service insect specialist has to say about termites.

According to Entomologist James E. Brogdon, termites that infest homes and other buildings usually come from colonies already established in the soil at the time the structures are built.

Two kinds are mainly encountered in Florida. They are the dry-wood termite, which does not require contact with the soil, and the subterranean termite, which does require contact with the soil. The latter kind are the most common and most destructive.

Termites are destructive to posts or any other wood in contact with the ground and to woodwork in buildings. Feeding mainly on cellulose obtained from wood and other plant tissues, termites may feed also on paper, fiberboard and some types of fabrics derived from cotton and other plant fibers, Brogdon said.

Entomologists report that although termites must maintain contact with the soil, they often damage wood in houses and other buildings several stories above ground level. Detection of these pests is made difficult because termites remain hidden within the wood or other materials on which they feed, or in the soil, so that those actually doing the feeding are seldom seen.

"At certain times of the year, usually in the Spring, winged adults emerge from the colonies in large numbers and fly about for a time," Brogdon said. "Mating occurs during these flights."

Adults can be distinguished from true flying ants, which they resemble somewhat, by the fact that termites are thick-waisted while ants have a wasp-like waist.

The appearance of winged termites in the house is a good indication of probable infestation, although the entomologist points out that some individuals sometimes come inside the house from large, out-of-doors swarms.

Winged termites emerging from the ground out-of-doors near the house do not necessarily mean the house is infested, but it is good reason to make insecticidal barriers around the foundations, he said.

"The best control is prevention," he said. "Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the fact the best time to provide protection against termites is during the planning and construction of a building. Removal of all wood and similar materials from the building site is a good step in the right direction."

He also emphasized the need for thorough annual inspections for evidence of termite activity.

In Florida, a very common type of foundation is the concrete slab resting on the soil. It is strongly recommended by entomologists that the soil beneath the slab be treated with an insecticide before the slab is poured, since a small opening or crack in the slab will allow termites to enter through the slab.

Several insecticides have proven satisfactory for making effective barriers when properly applied. Brogdon said two of the most effective are chlordane and dieldrin. He recommends the use of such barriers even though metal termite shields are installed during construction, since poorly designed or improperly installed shields often give the owner a false sense of security.

a unique and limited opportunity to try cooperative apartment-home living on a rental basis . . .

To those who live at cooperative apartment-homes like the Mediterranean in Bay Harbor . . . the advantages of such a way of life are a daily source of pleasure. The ability to dwell in such a gracious setting . . . on the waterfront, with private swimming pool, in large, centrally air conditioned and heated spacious apartments with Riviera balconies overlooking charming Indian Creek . . . all these are the things that make the Mediterranean one of the most sought after cooperative apartment-home buildings of Florida's Gold Coast. But, coupled with this, are the real and substantial economic savings which place this way of life at your disposal at far less cost than a comparable standard could be obtained any other way. The freedom of responsibilities of home ownership too, play an important role in making the Mediterranean way . . . a better way.

To those who already live at the Mediterranean, these are facts that are appreciated. To those of you who may have contemplated the advantages of such a cooperative buy but are not yet completely convinced . . . the Mediterranean is now offering, on a limited basis, the opportunity to rent an apartment-home with an advantageous purchase option . . . literally to "try before you buy" . . . so that you may appreciate, at first hand, the many good reasons you'll enjoy owning a Mediterranean cooperative apartment-home.

It must be emphasized that the number of apartments that are available on a rental basis is limited and can only be offered to those who have a real interest in the purchase of the apartment-home. We would be pleased to show you the model apartment-homes at your convenience.

Kaiser to Build City in Hawaii

HONOLULU — (AP) — Industrialist Henry J. Kaiser and Associates have announced plans to build an entire new city near Honolulu for 50,000 people.

KAISER

They said the resort and residential city would cover 6,000 acres and represent an investment of 350 million dollars.

The project is by far the most ambitious undertaken here by Kaiser, who is expanding his big Hawaiian Village hotel resort center at Waikiki Beach.

The community will be in the area of Koko Head, an extinct volcano crater on the southeastern tip of Oahu Island, on which Honolulu is located.

His announcement said an agreement for integrated projects in the new city had been entered into by Kaiser; builder Fritz B. Burns, his partner 15 years; architect Welton Becket, of Los Angeles, and the trustees of the Bernice P. Bishop estate of Honolulu, which owns the land.

The project envisions resort hotels, private homes in various price brackets, luxury apartment buildings, a marina for boating and water sports.

What Does She Put in That Shopping Bag?

Women will air their views on suburban shopping centers when shopping center owners and developers meet April 6 through April 9 in Chicago.

Purpose of this third annual session sponsored by the International Council of Shopping Centers is to discuss operation costs, location, parking facilities, sales promotion and other allied topics.

According to the council, there are now more than 2,800 suburban shopping centers.

Nightlife with George Bourke

Using Famous Nude as Movie Ad Is Just Goya-ing Too Far

HONEST, we didn't get out of the Bedlam that is our afterdark beat on the wrong side this week! Our beef at comedians who choose to satisfy the lustier elements of their audiences when their talent isn't particularly in that direction: our razzing "bird" for entertainers who poke fun with parodies on or lend cha cha cha tempos to semi-religious or at least inspirational songs such as "I Believe" or "Eli Eli," and now the subject we are about to take up aren't an effect of any personal upset — they are the cause.

The week's calls, conversations and correspondence on the first two squawks have been mixed—a few as abusive and intolerant and as evil-minded as the charges of being abusive and intolerant and evil-minded that they hurl at us, but most of them commending our efforts though at the same time echoing our own conclusion that "it ain't gonna do no good."

In cafe show business the a-laugh-is-a-laugh-is-a-laugh rule is the Golden Rule and pity the poor grandmother or maiden aunt who gets in the way on some night when a laugh is needed! If a grandmother is expendable for a laugh what chance has the cause of good taste! The comedian who desperately flings out the dirty line always has the clincher: "But the audience laughed." There's little to argue there.

Today's fresh peeve is with the film distributors who are seeking to prove that "art" has its uses in the movie business even if the use is after the fact of a picture's completion. Goya, the Spanish master, some time back, painted a famous nude which a motion picture distributor now apparently, we say apparently, wants to use in an advertising campaign.

At least he has tried to entrap the postal authorities into an act of censorship when its function at this point is one of regulation by asking for a before-the-act ruling on the admissability of a reproduction of the Goya painting in the mails.

This is like asking if murder is murder if you can get away with it. There are good nudes and there are bad nudes. The area (we mean site of) and intent of their exposure make the difference in many cases. A Goya nude hanging in a museum, a mansion, or other public place where the interested public can view it is one thing. Reproduced in newspaper or magazine for the commercial purpose of calling attention to a movie doesn't seem quiet the same thing— not when we begin to think of some of the things which film copy men are accustomed to write into movie ads!

Is Controversy the Goal?

FEW of impressionable years have attained the mental age appreciation of the graphic nude as art—and, in the absence of suitable enlightenment or education and in spite of all its intrinsic artistic merits—this reproduction, reduced and diffused as it must be, is unlikely to excite or elevate emotionally much beyond the level of nudes the viewer may have seen on unintended walls of public places.

We suspect that the distributors of the film involved are less concerned with the freedom of the arts or a good fight against censorship than they are with stirring a tempest of controversey which may bring their film to greater public attention. They can hardly be sincere in believing that the public cannot be fully informed about the merits of their film without use of the reclining nude in question.

We haven't viewed the film—it stars Ava Gardner—so we can't be suspected of pre-judging when we suggest that the consumer doesn't have to see the chicken to know that it was a chicken that laid the egg.

Confidentially . . .

They're Saying:

THAT another Miami beauty, Cindy Fuller, a Lou Walters dancer, will be Playboy Magazine's May Playmate . . . THAT one of the new Cuban regime biggies (not Fidel Castro) is ailing seriously . . . THAT an increasing number of firms are bypassing established credit card systems with their own cards, guaranteeing prompt payments and listing Dun and Bradstreet rating . . . THAT respondents for "Pesos Wanted" ads in the papers are unwittingly posing for pictures which are then sent to Havana for identification . . . THAT the cruiser Macon and possibly some craft from Key West will go fresh water cruising for the first time when they steam into the Great Lakes for the St. Lawrence Seaway opening this summer.

Miami Area May Test Pay-TV

"MIAMI-Fort Lauderdale area" is one of the 20 eligible for pay-TV tests under the Federal Communications Commission and House commerce rules set up for the tests. But that doesn't mean a test will be staged here.

Bea Lillie once described television as "summer stock in an iron lung." Which (in the light of a trade paper statistic that at least 25 per cent of network shows this summer would be re-runs) should make summer television summer stock without the sustaining lung . . . Eddie Peddie, of the Vagabonds, recovering from minor surgery which made him happy that he plays a stand-up instrument with the Vagabonds, currently at the Las Vegas Stardust. Say, who is this Gene Barringer now associated with the Vags?

The Clover Club had to do some rebuilding work on the stage and star's dressing room there to accommodate Lili St. Cyr's bath-tub. It's on the stage—not in the dressing room! . . . Footlighters Club luncheon skedded for Tuesday at the Seville Hotel . . .

FIGHT FOR LIVES is mapped in "Compulsion," Meyer Levin's story based on a true thrill murder which shocked Chicago and the world in the 1920's. Featured in the film, opening on Friday at the Miami, Miracle and Carib Theaters are Dean Stockwell and Bradford Dillman as the accused killers, and Orson Welles as the famed lawyer hired to defend them modeled on Clarence Darrow.

'Cabin' Reviving

NEW YORK — (AP) — The melodic "Cabin in the Sky" of Broadway's 1940 theater season, is being prepared for return next fall.

St. John Terrell, impresario of summertime music shows, plans to use the tent circuit in New Jersey, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts for tryout tour.

The show ran 127 performances in its original version with Ethel Waters starred, but Terrell feels that World War II prevented it from having greater success, and that now is the time for revival.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Theresa Helburn, one of the founders of the Theater Guild 40 years ago, has started work on her autobiography.

A theatrical "babe" that became of voting age a year ago returns to the footlights on Monday night when a face-lifted version of a 1937 Broadway musical hit, "Babes in Arms" opens what is billed as a pre-Broadway engagement at the Coconut Grove Playhouse.

Offering rivalry for the entertainment spotlight will be the Marx Brothers, Chico and Harpo, who date back further than that — having been stars of one show medium or another since their click with brothers Groucho and Zeppo in "Animal Crackers" in 1927.

They open tonight at the Eden Roc Cafe Pompeii.

Somewhat newer names due this week on the South Florida show calendars will be those of Joni James, singing star opening Tuesday night at the Americana Hotel Bal Masque with George Hopkins co-featured; Roberto Iglesias, the astounding exponent of the Spanish folk dances, who comes to the Fontainebleau Hotel La Ronde on Thursday, with Morty Gunty also in for comedy, and Lisa Kirk, star of several Broadway musicals, who brings a revue-type act to the Eden Roc on Saturday night.

The changes in "Babes in Arms" which were made to tailor it for a new try on Broadway were effected by Richard Rodgers, who wrote the original version with Larry Hart, and George Oppenheimer. Retained for the current edition are such memorable Rodgers and Hart successes as "My Funny Valentine," "The Lady is a Tramp," "Where or When?" and the ballet of "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue."

The original "Babes in Arms" opened at the Shubert Theater in New York on April 14, 1937, with Mitzi Green playing the role now played by Joan Hovis. Dan Dailey and Alfred Drake were also in the original.

Heading today's cast is Julie Wilson, well known in the smarter Miami Beach supper clubs for several years. In support are Barbara Ann Sharma, a local girl who has been clicking in the big time for three or four years, and Brian Davies.

The Coral Gables Country Club theater group gets back into action this week with "Holiday for Lovers," Ronald Alexander's comedy, which will show on Tuesday, Thursday and Friday nights. Dorothy Brauninger is directing a cast which will include Margaret Waynick, Joan Hand, Judy Durbin, Fred Keller, Jack Metzger, Bruce McLaughlin, Ralph Eastridge, Jane Howell and Adria Elcook.

Arnold Schulman's "A Hole in the Head" gets more exposure this week as a Tuesday-through-Saturday attraction at the Norton Gallery Alley Theater in West Palm Beach.

The production has been designed by Brian Hartigan, with lighting by Cecile Orelich and a cast including Ray Galambos, Randy and Stella Monchick, James Cochran, Trent Stevens, Leah Edlin, Joe Benyi, Ruth Deitz, Herman Held and Dennis Cooley.

Coming up on the "live" entertainment scene will be the Little Theatre of Clearwater's production, beginning on April 13, of a new play by Stephen J. Sanford, "Her Majesty Regrets;" Hollywood Little Theatre's presentation of "Gigi," by Colette, opening April 14; Dick Clark's personal appearance as star of a variety show at Miami Beach Exhibition Hall on April 18; the Letter Carrier's 21st annual ball, sponsored by Tropicana Branch, National Association of Letter Carriers, at Bayfront Park Auditorium on April 25, and the Keynotes choral-drama group staging of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" at Trinity Methodist Church on April 27.

Four Dramas in the Running

N.Y. Critics Select Top Play of Season This Week

By JACK GAVER
UPI Staff Writer

NEW YORK — The awards season is upon the theater, and the first of the big-time honors will be accorded Tuesday by the New York Drama Critics Circle.

The 25 or so members of this organization will gather at the Algonquin Hotel, as usual and get the business of naming the best American drama of the 1958-59 season over as quickly as possible.

This will not take long despite the fact that there are several candidates with considerable to recommend them and none can be regarded in advance as a shoo-in.

A couple of late arrivals have complicated the matter for the critics, these are Tennessee Williams' "Sweet Bird of Youth" and newcomer Lorraine Hansberry's "A Raisin in the Sun."

Both received almost unanimously favorable reviews, especially the latter. While the seven critics for New York's general-circulation dailies all approved Williams' play, some other Circle members did not.

Prior to the arrival of those two the season produced such likely candidates as Eugene O'Neill's "A Touch of the Poet," Archibald MacLeish's controversial "J.B." and the Schulberg-Breit "The Disenchanted."

Should Williams win again, it would be his fourth Circle award. Maxwell Anderson, Sidney Kingsley and Arthur Miller have two each.

The Circle's members next will vote for the best drama of foreign origin, which is a sort of secondary citation.

In this category the critics undoubtedly will make their choice among Friedrich Duerrenmatt's "The Visit" and the Osborne-Creighton "Epitaph for George Dillon," although there may be scattered votes for one or two off-Broadway efforts such as "The Quare Fellow" or "Ulysses in Nighttown."

Then it will be up to the Circle's members to vote as to whether they want to give a citation to a musical. This would be a good season to bypass this category.

The last major award is the Pulitzer Prize for the best American drama. This announcement comes May 4.

Jack Kofoed Says

New Disc: 'When Elvis Comes Marching Home'

Elvis Presley ... already?

Jaye P. Morgan ... liked

THE FOUR BITS at Miami Skyways have recorded "When Elvis Comes Marching Home," which should be a big hit when he does . . . This is the last week for jai alai aficionados to get thrills and winning quinielas at the pelota palaces. Dania, Miami, West Palm Beach and Tampa all shutter Friday until next December . . . Si (Seminole) Byer back on his stick at Miami Shores and Westview, clipping off pars and birdies.

Another suggested meal: Cherrystone clams (Mike Gordon's) Petite Marmite (La Bastille), Duck a la orange (Hickory House), Duchess potatoes (Bonfire) Caesar salad (Out of This World Inn), apple pie (Joe's Stone Crabs).

If you haven't seen "Holiday on Ice" at the Beach exhibition hall, you've missed one of the most fabulous shows of all time . . . George Hines, Golden Gate maestro, still considering half a dozen lush offers . . . Al Fortini, maitre d' at Gallaghers, can't talk his boss, Joe Lipsky, into a golf match . . . In spite of a hideaway location next to Johnny and Mack's, Don Julio is luring lovers of Mexican food . . . If Mama Leone were still alive, she'd get a great kick out of son, Celestine's, place in Hallandale.

* * *

Read Lobster Clause

JACK CARTER, the Americana funny man, was given his first chance in show business by "Pick and Pat," old vaudevillians at the Jefferson Theater in Brooklyn . . . Charlie Lacombe, Carillon drum beater, delighted with the color pictures of Lou Walters' "French Dressing" in Look, but wonders what happened to blimp shots taken of the hotel . . . Fran Miller says the pickup of beer and tomato juice is all right, but to be really effective it must have a dash of Worcestershire sauce.

Harry Nichols, managing editor of The New York Daily News, relaxing at the Ivanhoe . . . If you want to know how to undress a lobster, you should read Dave (Chandler') Nussbaum's book, "The Old Shell Game" . . . Louise Kolar, of the North Shore Bar, working on a promotion tie-in with several Cuban night spots . . . Charlie Bookbinder, the Pumpernik man, plotting another place in Fort Lauderdale . . . F. B. (Happy) Stutz, the dog-racing man, was handing out tips on the pooches at Nick and Arthur's. Wonder if that's one reason why the small loan business has been improving . . .

Holger (Old Scandia) Johansen says the late Captain Peter Freuchen was one Arctic explorer who never left a tern unstoned . . . Johnny Mathis, newest singing sensation, bowed in at the Fontainebleau Thursday. If he's the riot he was in Las Vegas, Johnny will do terrific business . . . The Diplomat has brought in Jaye P. Morgan and the Morgan Brothers. Jaye is not only a very talented girl, but very well liked in these parts . . . I didn't know it when I was at the Saxony's Ivory Tower, but they don't call Val "maitre d'". He's "Master of the Harem," which should be a very good job, indeed . . . Eartha Kitt is a sexy singer, but when Joe E. Lewis is on the bill nothing else matters to me. Those two at the Eden Roc make one of the season's fastest double plays.

* * *

Some Four-Leaf Clovers

CAN THERE BE anybody more entrancing than Julie Wilson, who'll star in "Babes in Arms" at the Coconut Grove Theater beginning Monday? . . . There isn't much more time to see Charlie Farrell at Gray's Inn. A season without at least one glimpse is a lost one . . . The Clover Club has had a first rate hypo, first with Miss Libby Jones, B.A., and now with Lili St. Cyr.

Eddie Snyder, who pianos for the Login Place for Steak) brothers, and fireman Jim Conway met for the first time on the golf course. They have something in common. Eddie's song, "Girl With the Golden Braids" and Jim's "Tom Boy" were both recorded by Perry Como.

Audubon Film Here Tuesday

Nature Film Visits Rockies

Scott

A color film starring the Rocky Mountains along with bighorn sheep, buffalo, elk, antelopes and alpine flowers will come to Miami Tuesday night.

Outdoorsman Emerson Scott of the National Audubon Society will present his picture, "Rocky Mountain Rambles" at Riverside School Auditorium, 221 SW 12th Ave., at 8 o'clock.

Scott, a former farm boy from Caro., Mich. with a talent for wildlife photography, will be making his first appearance in Miami on the screen tour series sponsored annually by Tropical Audubon Society.

An ex-Army sergeant and Purple Heart veteran of the Italian campaign, Scott attended college in Colorado where he first roamed the Rockies.

His camera shifts from herds of buffalo to grouse and prairie chickens doing their spring dances and ranges from snowy peaks to trout-filled valley streams, recording in color ptarmigan and their chicks, songbirds and scenery.

One of his rambles is a visit to the Sand Dune National Monument. Another consists of a dash down the rapids of the Yampa River of Dinosaur National Monument in flexible boats over a wilderness area which would have been wiped out by a dam if conservationists had not fought the project.

Scott's film meets the demands of frustrated mountain climbers as well as those of wildlife fans who have not yet been able to view the Rockies' grandeur.

But Academy Award Race is Closest in Years

MacLaine, Niven and 'Gigi' Make Good Parlay

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Has the cloud of scandal hurt Elizabeth Taylor's chances to win the Oscar Monday night?

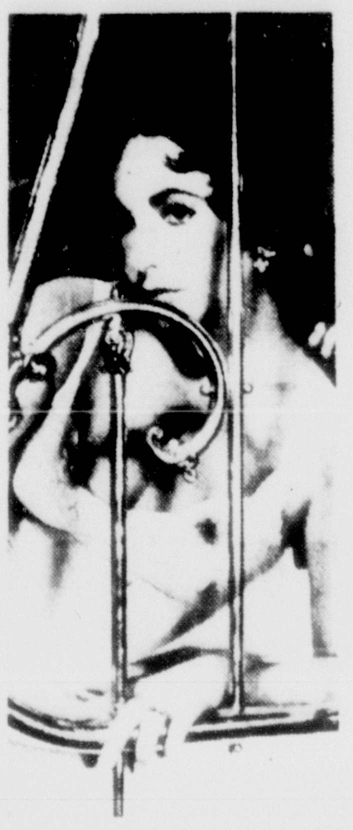
The answer is probably no. The Academy voters, who represent the heart of the film industry, are notably unmoved by public censure of stars.

This was shown by the Academy's award of a second Oscar to Ingrid Bergman in 1957, when her headlined idyll with Roberto Rossellini was still fresh in peoples' minds. In 1951, Judy Holliday and Jose Ferrer won the big prize after both had been cited by a Congressional committee for support of Red-tinged causes.

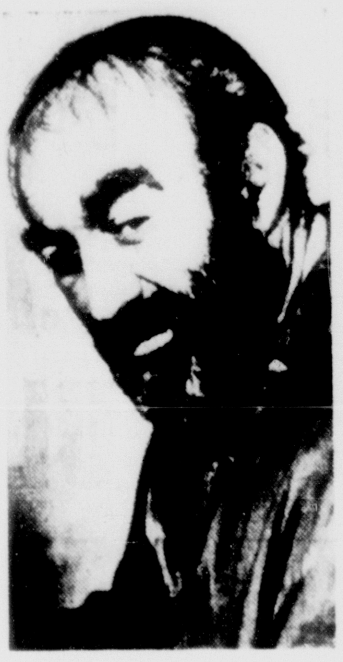
Today, fans of Debbie Fisher angrily claim that Liz Taylor stole Eddie Fisher from Debbie's happy home. Columnists get letters protesting the chance of an Oscar for "that woman." Are Academy voters moved by such complaints? Not a whit.

Shirley MacLaine
. . . lucky newcomer?

Two Candidates on Way to Oscars?
. . . Niven and Hiller in 'Separate Tables'



Elizabeth Taylor
. . . amour no handicap



Lee J. Cobb
. . . the 'Karamazov' kid

But can Liz win? Ah, that is the question which must be weighed by the unfortunate Oscar predicters. This year we have been searching crystal balls, tea leaves and coffee grounds for portents in one of the most wide-open races in the Academy's 31-year history.

Well, here goes:

BEST ACTRESS — Any of the five nominees could win. All have given performances of unquestionable stature. So you've got to figure the minuses.

Rosalind Russell was fabulous as "Auntie Mame," but voters may figure she had the undue advantage of playing it on the stage. Susan Hayward did a smashing job in "I Want to Live," but lacks popular sentiment. Deborah Kerr was excellent in "Separate Tables," but the part doesn't seem long enough for an Oscar.

Liz scored strongly as Maggie in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof." She could win, but it was the role that dominated the first act, then was submerged in the rest of the film.

Shirley MacLaine has the most pluses. As the "Some Came Running" floozy, she had a role that is sheer Oscar-bait. She is a newcomer, and the Academy has a habit of rewarding new stars (Grace Kelly, Audrey Hepburn, Joanne Woodward).

CHOICE: Shirley MacLaine.

BEST ACTOR — This race is less impressive but just as baffling. Will voters pay tribute to the old pro, Spencer Tracy, with his third Oscar? Will Tony Curtis and Sidney Poitier cancel each other out because both were named for "The Defiant Ones"? Or will the Academy choose a Negro star as a gesture to the world?

Tracy's chances seem dim because "The Old Man and the Sea" was not a hit. Curtis and Paul Newman ("Cat on a Hot Tin Roof") are also doubtful. Poitier might well win. More likely it will be the long-popular David Niven, who did a reversal of type in "Separate Tables."

CHOICE: David Niven.

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS — Peggy Cass was a riot in "Auntie Mame," but comedy roles seldom win. Martha Hyer made her "Some Came Running" role, a standout though it wasn't showy. Cara Williams seems hampered by the brevity of her "Defiant Ones" part. "Lonelyhearts" wasn't popular enough to aid Maureen Stapleton's fortunes.

This award has been given to younger actresses in recent years. But Wendy Hiller ("Separate Tables") could reverse the trend because of Hollywood's recognition of her many fine jobs in the past.

CHOICE: Wendy Hiller.

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR — Another tough race. Burl Ives could win, more for Big Daddy in "Cat" rather than for "The Big Country," for which he was nominated. Gig Young had a drunk scene in "Teacher's Pet," and that's surefire for an award.

If a groundswell develops for "The Defiant Ones," Sheriff Theodore Bikel could score. Lee J. Cobb was a magnificent ham in "The Brothers Karamazov." And Arthur Kennedy ("Some Came Running") could be named because of the industry's high regard for his ability.

CHOICE: Lee J. Cobb.

BEST PICTURE — Will the voters go for the escapism of "Gigi" or the realism of "The Defiant Ones"? They appear the leaders, although a split vote could select "Auntie Mame," "Cat" or "Separate Tables."

CHOICE: "Gigi."

As a matter of fact, this looks like "Gigi's" year. I predict that the delightful French doll will pick up seven or eight Oscars, including those for Vincente Minnelli's direction, the title song of Alan Jay Lerner and Frederick Loewe, Lerner's screenplay, Cecil Beaton's costumes, plus scoring, cinematography and art direction.

The oddity is that none of the "Gigi" performers, including the great Maurice Chevalier, was nominated for an award.

But then, Oscar is capable of oddities, as we may well see Monday night.

Beginner's Luck for Mr. Komack

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — (UPI) — Zsa Zsa Gabor plans to join comedian Jimmie Komack for her nightclub act.

Few Spaces Left On Bolshoi Tour

The "Miami Bolshoi Tour," which will take Miamians by plane to New York to attend performances of the Bolshoi Ballet, has been consolidated into one week-end tour, instead of two, as previously arranged.

The tour is making available tickets for performances which could not be purchased in New York, if the tour members were all there now. All 27 performances were sold out four weeks ago.

Tickets are being sold for the highest prices in the Metropolitan Opera House's history — $50 top for opening-night, $15 top for all other performances.

The only cities that have been allowed to make tour arrangements are Miami and Pittsburgh. They have been made by Francis Mayville of the International Repertory Company, which has managed many engagements of famous dance troupes in Miami during the past several seasons.

The May 1-2 tour will follow this schedule: chartered plane leaves Miami International Airport 7 a.m. Friday, May 1, returns 1 a.m. Sunday, May 3.

The Miami segment of the tour is limited to 45 persons. The all-inclusive price per person, including orchestra seats at $10.50 and $12.45, will be $121.90.

A few spaces are still available by writing "Miami-Bolshoi Tour," International Repertory Co., P.O. Box 3871, Miami 24. Checks in full payment should accompany reservation request, and should be in the mail by Monday.

A PUBLIC ANNOUNCEMENT OF AN IMPORTANT EVENT

For many years the problem of providing adequate health care to our middle aged and elder citizens and to that large segment of our population with physical impairments and serious medical histories, has challenged the ingenuity of our insurance industry. During the past ten years, GABOR & CO., INC., has been privileged to be in the forefront of this great experimental work. While others in the insurance profession discussed this problem, GABOR & CO., INC. actually arranged the insuring of thousands of persons of all ages or with such medical impairments as diabetes, history of heart disease, history of cancer, etc. Under a unique plan, insurance was provided for the great majority of all applicants, without exclusion "waivers" or elimination from coverage of previous conditions. From time to time, many improvements were added as experience was gained. This important work and the encouraging results to date enable us to announce the furtherance of this experiment by an additional enrollment of up to 10,000 applicants for the year of 1959. We would most strongly urge that you apply for this special hospital-surgical-medical plan without delay. This new insurance is underwritten by the Wilson National Life Insurance Company, an old line legal reserve life insurance company which has reliably served Floridians for more than quarter of a century.

Question Can't Be Resolved With a Simple 'No'

Should U.S. Be Haven for Dictators?

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
Herald Foreign Affairs Writer

SHOULD the U. S. grant political asylum to deposed dictators?

Cases in point right now are those of Cuba's Fulgencio Batista, Venezuela's Marcos Perez Jiminez and Argentina's Juan Peron.

The immediate reaction of the average American is to answer with a flat "NO."

Dictators create revulsion in the minds of democratic peoples.

However, the issue is not quite so simple as that.

For example, as pointed out by U.S. Sen. George Smathers and Congressman Dante B. Fascell, both Miamians:

Would not the U.S. have been morally obligated to grant political asylum to the late President Castillo Armas of Guatamala had he been forced to flee his country?

Remember, it was with U. S. help that he was able to gain power by overthrowing the Communist government of Col. Jacobo Arbenz Guzman.

* * *

Most Latins Recognize Asylum

MOST LATIN American countries recognize the principle of political asylum.

Uruguay, for example, feels that it is a fundamental part of inter-American relations. Political exiles are granted permission to live in Uruguay, and other countries, provided they obey the laws of the host nation.

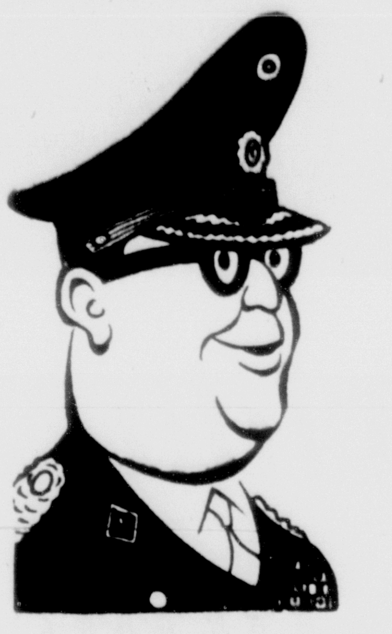
However, there have been instances of gross violations of asylum. Remember Havana on Oct. 29, 1956?

That was when Batista's Cuban police stormed the Haitian embassy, killing 10 persons. Six of the 10 were political refugees who had been granted asylum there.

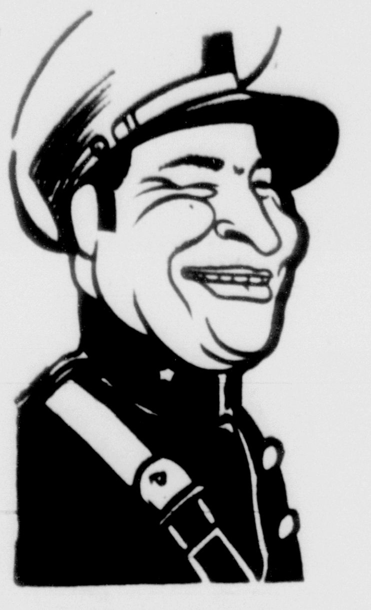
Sometimes dictator governments take matters in their own hands, forgetting the guarantees of asylum when it suits their purposes.

A panel of newspapermen and professors recently discussed the involved question of political asylum at the University of Miami. We arrived at no unanimous conclusions — other than the already stated fact that public sentiment here is opposed to granting asylum to dictators.

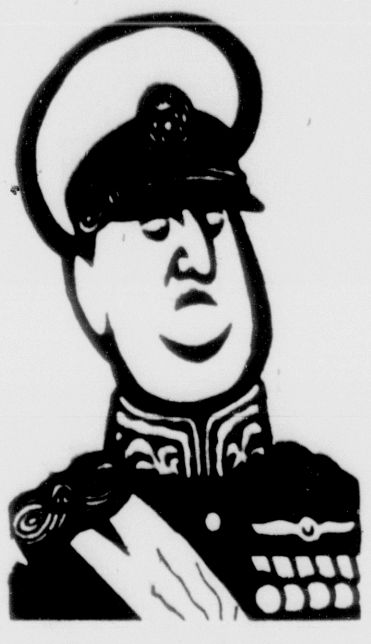
Take the three exiled "strong men" mentioned above.



Venezuela's Perez
. . . Miami Beach resident



Cuba's Batista
. . . now in Dominican Republic



Argentina's Peron
. . . neighbor of Batista

All are charged with crimes in their respective countries.

However, the U.S. makes a distinction between a criminal act and a political crime.

* * *

Perez Jiminez Ordered Out

PEREZ JIMINEZ, who became a Miami Beach resident after his ouster from Venezuela, has been ordered to leave the U.S. by April 15 because he does not have a residence outside the U.S. and as such does not qualify as a bona fide visitor.

His admission to the U.S. in March, 1958, touched off bitter reaction against this country in Latin America. But it is significant that the ex-dictator was given a diplomatic passport by the military junta which overthrew him and that junta formally requested the U.S. to admit him.

Moreover, Venezuela has not asked for his return under the extradition treaty between our countries.

BATISTA, now in the Dominican Republic where he is becoming less and less welcome, would like to get to the U.S. He has a home at Daytona Beach. Indications, are, however, that both the State Department and the U.S. Immigration Service under the Attorney General will blackball him.

PERON, too, is enjoying the hospitality of Dictator Trujillo in the Dominican Republic. Like Batista, his welcome is wearing thin.

Both men are becoming an embarrassment to Trujillo because they keep attention focused on his own dictatorship.

Peron stands virtually no chance whatsoever of getting into this country. Not only is he persona non grata with the State Department, but his illicit and much publicized love affair with a 14-year-old Argentine girl when he was in power has made him ineligible on a morals count.

* * *

How Does Dictator Get In?

HOW DOES a dictator or political refugee get into this country?

Technically, he makes the same application for admission as does any other foreigner.

Smathers and Fascell — and many other competent observers both in and out of government — believe our laws as they stand are adequate to cover the situation.

These laws make it possible for the Attorney General to block the admission of any criminals, dope addicts, subversives or persons guilty of moral turpitude. The State Department also has veto power over admission of a foreigner.

Fascell summarizes it this way:

"I feel that, generally speaking, we should offer every encouragement to democratic societies and indicate our lack of affection for any type of dictatorship — even the so-called 'good' ones.

"But nevertheless, I doubt this policy would be served by a hard and fast rule that no one would be admitted to the U.S. under any conditions.

"I think we ought to make it clear, however, that we are not running an open house, and each case is judged on the conditions as they exist at the time."

* * *

U.S. Can't 'Intervene'

THERE is a strong feeling in many quarters that dictators and their henchmen should not be accorded entry into this country which makes it so difficult for all foreigners to enter — particularly, when "freedom fighters," who opposed the tyranny of dictatorships and were forced to flee have trouble getting in.

There is one other point which might be stressed in the treatment of dictators.

When they are in office, our government is required to do business with them. A fundamental point in our foreign policy technically is — and should be — not to meddle in the domestic affairs of any nation.

But, Fascell points out, we should not show too much "affection" for them.

Our status as a democracy was hurt when President Eisenhower presented Perez Jiminez with a medal and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles praised his regime. Both instances occurred while the new deposed dictator was Venezuelan president.

The State Department also praised Peron while he was in office.

These may have been little more than routine courtesy acknowledgments. But they served to hurt U.S. prestige and understanding in the countries of Latin America.

Most political observers agree that any further pampering — or admission to this country — of dictators in office or out would further damage our status in the nations to the south.

What's Unemployment? It's Fear and Gloom

By A. H. RASKIN
The New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Unemployment is a figure in a government report, as dreary and lifeless as the federal debt or the death rate or the incidence of yellow fever among jungle monkeys in Brazil.

Unemployment is people—the individual hardship and heartache of 4,749,000 Americans, willing and able to work but unable to find suitable jobs.

Unemployement is the husky, fresh-faced college graduate, with three years of Air Force duty behind him, being told he is "too old" for a job with a future—at age 26.

Unemployment is the breezy executive, accustomed to an income of $50,000 a year, trying to pay his bills on a state job insurance check of $40 a week—an amount he once spent on taxes and cigars.

Unemployment is the head shipping clerk, stranded when his textile plant moved from New York to North Carolina, subsisting on odd jobs of heavy cleaning and reading an inspirational pamphlet. Its title," "Get Rich in Spite of Yourself."

Unemployment is the rhinestone setter, with all her state and federal benefits drawn, watching a give-away show on television and murmuring, "It makes me feel bad to see people getting all these nice things."

Unemployment is the electrical worker, fearful that automation has permanently wiped out his chances for re-employment, wondering whether he can volunteer for a space flight to the moon.

* * *

More Puzzled Than Angry

TO PUT faces on figures, correspondents of The New York Times have spent the last week talking to idle workers and their families in states where unemployment has remained high despite the general pickup in business.

Their story makes a gray backdrop for reports of higher production, higher sales, higher profits, higher wages and other indices of returning prosperity. It is a story told without bitterness — almost apologetically —even by those who have gone through the last anguishing turn of the wringer and been forced to turn to public relief.

Puzzlement is more apparent than anger in the attitude of men and women who have tramped the streets, month after weary month, with nothing to show for their efforts but holes in their shoes and a growing pile of debts.

In Detroit, capital of the automobile industry, one worker in seven is jobless and cutbacks in the output of some 1959 models threaten to add thousands to the idle lists in the next few weeks. Pittsburgh, crossroads of steel and coal production, is worried that large-scale unemployment will become a chronic drag on its economic well-being.

Bruce Alexander, district staff member of the United Steelworkers of America in McKeesport, predicted that many workers would never regain their jobs.

In the mine regions of West Virginia, the specter of permanent pools of idle workers is even more tragically present. Mechanization has cut the need for manpower so drastically that 68,000 men now dig more coal than 125,000 did ten years ago. The displaced, returning from futile job-seeking expeditions to Cleveland, Columbus or Detroit, are less disposed to be philosophical about their plight than most of the country's uncomplaining unemployed.

Surplus food — "mollygrub" is what they call it in the Kanawha Valley coal fields — has become a mainstay in the diets of tens of thousands of families, not only in West Virginia but also in every other state. In December, 5,230,000 persons benefited from the federal dole of butter, flour, corn meal and other surplus commodities. The food lines were almost twice as long as they had been a year earlier.

* * *

Privation Minor Problem

YET, by the standards of mass misery that prevailed in the great depression of the 1930's, privation is a minor problem. What bears most raspingly on today's jobless is the sense of uselessness that comes with being unwanted and unneeded in the world's richest and most productive nation.

The corrosive effect has been acute among youngsters — high school and college graduates, ex-GI's and others in the 20 to 35 age group—locked in their first real bout with hard times and deprived of the community of suffering that helped preserve the fabric of self-respect in the depression years when everyone was in trouble.

In many ways this was a young man's recession, especially in factory industries operating under rigid seniority systems. The most recently hired were the first to feel the layoff. Now science, moving with the same breathtaking speed in the improvement of industrial technology as it is in the conquest of the atom and of outer space, is making the day of recall to work more remote.

The harnessing of electronic brains to mechanical muscles has made it possible to produce more goods with fewer workers. Men with ten, 12 and even 15 years of seniority remain on the surplus list while their companies climb past the production peaks they set in pre-automation days.

To make the outlook gloomier, other employers hesitate to hire them for fear that their desire to safeguard their pension equities and priority status in their old jobs will cause them to quit when and if the recall whistle sounds.

* * *

Most Prefer Job to Welfare

THERE is little tendency to clutch for the comforts of the welfare state. Confronted with the necessity for going on relief, most workers will grab a job at half or less than the standard they used to enjoy. And there are plenty of employers ready to capitalize on this preference for staying independent of a government handout.

In Detroit and other centers of "productivity unemployment," the relief rolls have risen rapidly. But everywhere the idle, without insurance or other sources of support, echo the remark of the Detroit mother of five, who told a reporter:

"I don't want the children to grow up with the idea of welfare aid. My parents back in Arkansas raised me never to lean on welfare."

Where Baltimore Had Junky-Looking Streets, It Now Has Lawns and Play Areas

Baltimore Shows How Florida Cities Could Clean Up Slums

By JUANITA GREENE
Herald Staff Writer

Baltimore taxpayers picked up their newspapers recently and saw a happy new version of a standard old picture: one man handing a check to other.

The grinning giver was a federal man from Washington. The smiling receiver was the city's mayor. The check: $254,364.

, And that was just the last installment.

The City of Baltimore was being reimbursed for two thirds of what it cost to erase a 23-acre blot of blight in its close in residential area. Where old tenements once sagged, new apartment buildings now stand.

All over the nation, other mayors are smiling. But not in Florida. Many mayors in this state, however, are working to get the Legislature to change a state law that prohibits Miami and other Florida cities from receiving these Urban Renewal grants.

In the Baltimore project, private enterprise is the landlord of the 321 families who live in the 24 new two-story apartment buildings.

The Waverly Apartments Corp., headed by two local realtor-developers, leased the land from the city and put up the buildings. City and federal officials saw to it that they conformed to "acceptable" standards.

There are green lawns all around, wide streets in front. Kids and cars are accommodated with play areas and parking facilities.

And the completion of the whole area was celebrated with the dedication of a 17-store shopping center on one part of the old slum area.

* * *

Had to Have Help

ON ITS OWN, the Waverly Apartments Corp. never would have been able to assemble 23 acres for redevelopment. The job was done by the City of Baltimore, as has since been done by large and small cities all over the nation.

They used legal remedies that slum property owners have prevented Florida from obtaining. But a new attempt will be made in the upcoming session of the Legislature to change state law and allow resale of condemned slum land to private enterprise.

Eight years ago one city in Florida—Daytona Beach—moved to take advantage of federal Urban Renewal. The city planned to condemn, buy and tear down a row of old houses along a railroad track. The land was to be resold to private interests for commercial and industrial development.

Opponents of the plan sued and the fight reached the Florida Supreme Court. It decided the city could keep the 6½-acre plot for public purposes, but could not sell it to private interests.

The decision stopped Urban Renewal all over Florida.

To get it started, the Legislature must pass and the people of Florida approve an amendment to the State Constitution.

The Urban Renewal project at Waverly was the first of its kind in the nation to be completed. Hundreds of others are in the making, but not in Florida.

The attack on the blight infesting the Waverly area began eight years ago.

"Only an operation on the decaying core could save this whole section of the city," explained Ellis Ash, deputy director of the Baltimore Urban Renewal and Housing Agency.

The conglomeration of houses, apartment buildings and stores was condemned and the 197 families, mostly Negro, were moved out. They had been paying rent averaging $20 a month.

Fifteen families went into public housing; 79 bought homes elsewhere; 52 were placed in other private housing. The remainder didn't bother to report to the statistics keepers.

* * *

Take Bids Now

FROM ALMOST the beginning, Harry Bart and Albert Stark, owners of the private Waverly Apartments Corp., were in on the program. The land was sold to them in exclusive negotiation.

"Since this was the first project of its kind," said Ash, "it was difficult to get private enterprise interested."

On all subsequent Urban Renewal projects in Baltimore, however, Ash's agency has insisted on competition.

"We take the developer who can offer the best plan for reuse and the best price," he said.

"It will take us just nine years to get back the half million dollars the Waverly project cost us," said Ash.

The amount of money the city gets from property taxes on the 23 acres has more than doubled since the new redevelopment.

* * *

Can't 'Profiteer'

THE PRIVATE developers aren't allowed to grab an excessive return on their investment from the new white tenants who have moved in. Rents, for the unfurnished units, excluding all utilities, are: $50 a month for the 44 efficiencies; $59 for the 112 one-bedroom units, and $68 for the two-bedroom apartments.

With the Waverly project completed the Baltimore agency is busy on many other Urban Renewal projects. One big private housing project will cost almost $6 million. The federal government is down for a $3,380,000 contribution.

Another will completely change the face of one fourth of the downtown area. Planned are eight new office buildings, a transit terminal, an 800-room hotel, three parks, a TV center and underground parking for 4,000 cars.

But while Baltimore builds, Miami waits. And the money Florida contributes to the fight is spent on somebody else's blight.

* * *

The Cost

Here's how the bookkeeping worked out on Waverly:

To buy, clear site:	$1,811,301
Lease: (reuse value)	300,000
Loss:	$1,511,301
Federal government paid:	1,007,534
Net city cost:	$ 503,767

Other Cities In U.S. Are Cashing In

Hundreds of cities outside Florida are cashing in on the federal Urban Renewal program to rescue them from blight.

Here's a quick look at some of them:

* * *

Philadelphia

Bought 50 acres of downtown blight as site for private apartment houses, stores, playground and school.

Cost: $7,323,643. Federal government paid $4,640,047 of this. Of city's share, $1,163,060 was written off in improvements, including the playground and the school in the Southwest Temple area.

Converted six acres into public housing for 203 families.

Cost: $1,155,504. U.S. paid $851,260; city paid $304,244.

* * *

New Haven, Conn.

Cleaned out 40 acres of slums to make way for new highway and commercial area. City's share of the cost: $575,000. Increase in tax revenue from the tract: $375,000 a year. So the city will get its money back in less than two years.

* * *

Nashville

Spending $11,700,000 to clear 65 acres around the State Capitol building. To get back $5,200,000 from the U.S., $4,000,000 from resale of some of the land, $1,000,000 from the State. City's share of about $1,500,000 is expected to be made up by increase in taxes on improved property at rate of about $160,000 a year. That's a 10 per cent return on its investment.

* * *

District of Columbia

Expects to get $7,000,000 more a year in property taxes on completion of its vast redevelopment projects. Its share of the cost will be about $200,000,000. Can be written off in 10 years.

* * *

Murfreesboro, Tenn.

Getting 10 times as much revenue from rehabilitated slum areas.

* * *

Manchester, N.H.

Tore down 18 tenements to make way for a two-acre downtown parking lot. Cost: $76,949. U.S. paid $51,299.

* * *

Fairbanks, Alaska

Log cabins built during the Gold Rush will disappear under a recently approved $1,839,219 program. In their place in downtown area will go stores, a park, and some residential units.

* * *

Milwaukee

Just approved a 15-year, $193,000,000 Urban Renewal program to improve 7,300 blighted acres.

* * *

New York City

Expects complete return of a $26,000,000 investment in seven years, because of 184 per cent increase in tax revenue from the area.

Stars and Lovers

By CULLEN MOORE

Marriage Can Endure Despite Incompatibility

DEAR MRS. MOORE:

My childhood was very unhappy with a cruel father who had no regard for his family. Now at 28 it seems my second marriage is breaking up. Neither of my husbands could stand criticism. This one, born in the sign Libra, drinks too much and won't go to church with me or the children. He is sloppy in his dress, too fat, won't diet. I've kept my figure and try to be neat around the house. Though we were in love when we married eight years ago, now he deliberately says things to hurt me. He calls it nagging when I want him to be closer with his own family. He never wants to be with us. When he sees that he has made me weep, he slams out of the house and joins a low crowd at the local hotel. After one divorce I hate to think of another. Is there any hope for happiness? Can our marriage be saved?

AQUARIUS WIFE

DEAR AQUARIUS:

Yes, enduring marriages have been built in spite of differences in tastes and incompatible temperaments. You can save yours if you will accept less than a girlhood dream-mate. You will need a sense of humor and a clear appraisal of your husband's ego. You will have to learn how to care for him as he wants to be loved and not merely in your own way.

You have a strong mind. Apply your powerful will constructively and you'll have marital harmony if not wedded bliss. Observe that your husband is irritated and made rebellious by a perfectionist. His preference for low characters is only an escape into a society that cannot reproach or patronize him. Try giving him the luxury of being in the right. There must be something you can fail to do properly. Ask advice instead of giving it.

Mating Tip Of the Week

A splendid week for SAGITTARIAN mates who want to put across some private plan. For LIBRA widows and single gals the likelihood of a proposal even though the wedding lies in the far future. LEO wives might well consider travel as a solution to some personal problem. GEMINI seems attracted to someone of great difference in age. VIRGO homelife improves.

THE Stars WHISPER TO:

Scorpio in Love:

This is your marriage year according to your horoscope. After April the planets move to influence your softer emotions. Although you make special physical requirements for the girl of your dreams, this attitude will change. There is a magic in one girl's eyes that will move your heart so that you won't notice their color. When you know real love every part of the beloved will be dear to you.

* * *

Libra Male:

You are neat and have a passion for order in your life. Beware of marrying the Pisces girl. She will laugh at your whims and leave her wet laundry where it offends your eye. Don't be mislead by the good times and fun. You are a bachelor type, accustomed to a well-run establishment.

* * *

Moon Sign Wife:

No, your husband is not running around with another woman. He is not too different from most men of his age. As his own sex powers wane a bit, he is quite naturally more inclined to pretend a great interest in the female sex. Rare is the philanderer who talks about it. Polish up your sense of humor and help him feel he is a man women still find attractive. Then you won't need to worry.

What Life's Like in Our Biggest State

Isolation, Economic Problems Bedevil Alaska's Citizens

By SAUL PETT
Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

NOME, Alaska—Sights and sounds of Alaska:

In Alaska, when you say you're going out, it doesn't mean out of the house or out of jail or out of hock. It means you're going to Seattle, to the main part of the U.S.

Among Alaskans, "outside" traditionally has been the word for the rest of the country. It reflects the isolation of the long winters, the waiting for the weather to lift so that planes can fly, waiting for the ice to break up so that ships can sail.

Among Texas-type Alaskans impressed with their state's size and newness, the rest of the U.S. is called "the little 48" or "the old country."

Joke from a Texas-type Alaskan about Texas-type Texans:

"If those Texans don't quiet down, Alaska will divide itself in two and make Texas the third largest state."

* * *

No Golf Courses

IF ALL the people who said they were coming came to Alaska, the new state would be more overcrowded than Japan in a decade and Juneau, the capital, would be bigger than New York in a year.

Mayors, chambers of commerce, newspapers receive thousands of letters a week from people saying they're on their way to grow with the new frontier. The Chamber of Commerce of Juneau, whose population is 7,500, receives 3,000 to 4,000 letters a week.

One man says he's coming up to start a nail factory. Another says he's a tennis pro. Still another is a golf greenskeeper. All three thought they might have a big future in Juneau.

Juneau needs them like it needs imported ice cubes. The whole town hugs the sides of two steep mountains. There is little building going on in a town where a two-bedroom frame house goes for $30,000.

There are two tennis courts in Juneau, both concrete, and, by exact count, an even dozen tennis players. There is no golf course although recently a few addicts tried to make one. They rolled out some patches on the excess gravel of an old defunct gold mine and, since these became the only level stretches in town, they called them greens. One man, digging a divot, looked down and found a gold nugget, but no grass.

* * *

Economy Hurting

ALASKANS may try to outbrag Texans but their heart isn't in it. The new state has economic problems. Its chief income is from the Army, Navy and Air Force. Ranking far behind are gold mining and salmon fishing. Both are way down.

Salmon are scarcer and, while there are still millions of dollars worth of gold in the ground, the price of gold remains the same ($35 an ounce) while the costs of mining it have tripled and quadrupled. So, there are scores of dead gold mines around Alaska.

"Write something to boost Highway 97," plead a banker, a waitress, a bartender, a doctor in Nome. Nome, like Juneau and many other places in Alaska, are not connected to any other town by highway. For years Highway 97 starting from Fairbanks and Nome has been abuilding. Both ends are still 400 miles apart.

Juneau, the capital and third largest city, has two roads going out of town. One stretches five miles south and the other 35 miles north. But both just end in the timber.

* * *

Travel by Air

IN A STATE a fifth as large as all the first 48, where there is only one railroad 500 miles long and less than 1,000 miles of paved roads, the airplane is the modern stagecoach.

Flying in Alaska frequently gets informal. There are many stops at tiny settlements of only 100 or 400 people, where only a handful are white and the rest Eskimo and everybody in town knows every member of every flight crew that arrives once a day or once every two days.

At McGrath, where the control tower and the post office occupy the same quonset hut, we delivered some coffee, popcorn and newspapers and waited an extra 15 minutes for a local passenger who had overslept.

During an Alaskan winter, it is not uncommon to be grounded two or three days by bad weather. During that time, you wait in a tiny hotel to get out, while the local population anxiously waits for the mail to come in. In Alaska, the flying slogan is WPPW—"weather permitting, pilot willing."

The University of Alaska in Fairbanks has a basketball team and a hockey team and only one problem: They have no one to play. The nearest American college—and there are very few Canadian ones in between—is in Seattle, 1,500 miles southeast. So they play military teams and even high school teams.

They have matured television in Alaska. Most programs are filmed versions of shows seen previously in the other states. The World Series arrives at least a week after the baseball season ends and Alaskans try to forget they already know the outcome.

The biggest single form of gambling in Alaska is betting on ice pools. You see them advertised in bars from Juneau to Fairbanks to Nome. Every year millions of dollars are bet on precisely when the ice will break up in the Nenana, the Chena, the Yukon and other rivers.

* * *

No Mukluks, Sealskin

THE CAPITOL BUILDING is the old Territorial Building in Juneau. The new legislature shares space with the post office, the museum, the courts and the FBI.

The visitor who expects to find sealskin, mukluks and other frontier sights among the state legislators will be disappointed. Most of them dress, talk and act like legislators anywhere. Most wear jackets and ties, including the Eskimo members.

Since the days when fur, fish and gold first drew Americans up here, Alaska has had a big turnover in its white population. Many Alaskans going south for college still don't come back. But the trend, according to acting Gov. Hugh J. Wade, is being reversed.

* * *

Saloons Still There

HERE AND THERE, Alaska tries valiantly to suggest its lusty past. There are still old sourdough log cabins in Fairbanks, still occupied. Anchorage is a big, modern cosmopolitan city with some international flavor resulting from the over-the-pole air traffic it receives.

In Juneau, there's the revived Red Dog Saloon: Sawdust on the floor, the big nude painting over the bar, table tops of huge tree trunk slices, moose heads, bear skins, the tinny old piano, but also a TV set, electric bowling game, juke boxes and rock and roll.

Peppery Charley Jones, who still hunts gold at 84, remembers when the population of Nome was 40,000 (around 1900), when the gold rush created a tent city overnight on the shore of the Bering Sea, when the town had 63 saloons and gambling houses.

He remembers Wyatt Earp, a "very quiet man," who ran a bar on a site now occupied by a hardware store; Tex Rickard, who ran a gambling concession; and Dick Dawson, who advertised "the only second class saloon in Alaska," drawing great attention since every other joint claimed to be first class.

Now Nome's population is only 2,000. Five hundred miles farther west than Honolulu, it has one business street with board sidewalks and a muddy roadway, seven bars, three liquor stores, six churches, one three-times a week paper called the Nome Nugget, an Eskimo population three times bigger than the white, a drugstore where comic books outsell all other literature and, I noted, a two-month old copy of the New Yorker magazine gathering dust.

Party Brass Eyes Movement

Will Dixiecrats 'Throw' Presidency Into House?

By W. H. LAWRENCE
The New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The rise of a neo-Dixiecrat movement in the South presents the distinct possibility of another bruising party loyalty battle in the 1960 Democratic convention.

The Southern move, so far embraced by five states, is aimed not at creation of a third party, but rather toward freeing presidential electors from any obligation to vote in the Electoral College for the Democratic presidential and vice presidential ticket even if the nominees carry the home state of the electors.

National party leaders are keeping the new movement under close surveillance with a view to determining whether these states should be denied seats in the Democratic convention, which will convene in Los Angeles July 11.

Present national convention rules state the understanding that a state party organization, by certifying delegates to the national convention, "thereby undertakes to assure that voters in the state will have the opportunity to cast their election ballots for the presidential and vice presidential nominees selected by said convention, and for electors pledged formally or in good conscience to the election of these presidential and vice presidential nominees, under the Democratic Party label and designation."

The Southern campaign, which amounts to a threat to try to force the presidential election of 1960 into the House of Representatives where each state — large and small — would have a single vote, gained impetus recently when the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee freed its electors of any obligation to support the national ticket. Similar freedom of choice exists for electors from Georgia, Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

If enough states were to join the movement and withhold their votes from either the Democratic or Republican presidential tickets, then neither major candidate would have the necessary majority to win election in the Electoral College. With the addition of Alaska and Hawaii to statehood by the 1960 elections, the electoral college will have 537 members, with the 269 required for election.

Paul M. Butler, Democratic national chairman, declares, however, that his organization would not be deterred from the fullest support of civil rights by threats of secession.

"Even though some Democrats do not agree with the position of the Democratic party on civil rights, we do not believe that they will serve the best interests of themselves or of the states or of our nation or of our party by walking out on the Democratic Party or its nominees," Butler said recently.

BUTLER

"I do not wish to speculate in 1959 on what action the Democratic National Committee or the Democratic national convention of 1960 might take with regard to states whose delegates do not come to the convention in good faith or whose electors are not pledged to support the nominees of the Democratic Party.

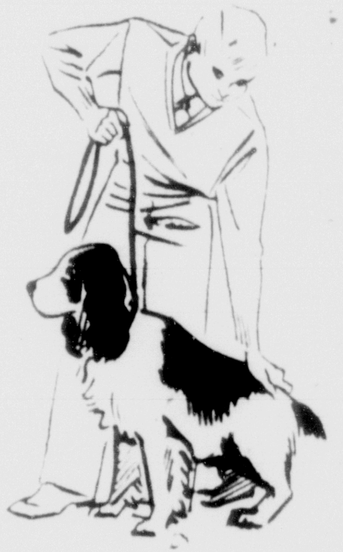
"At this time I wish merely to associate myself with the view expressed by former President Truman when a similar question was addressed to him last fall and he replied that he did not think the South was going to secede again in 1960."

The Southern move, which has been picking up steam for some months, differs from the 1948 strategy of the Dixiecrats. At that time, the States' rights party nominated its own ticket headed by J. Strom Thurmond, then a senator, of South Carolina. It received 39 electoral votes, including those of South Carolina, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi, but not enough to prevent the election of President Truman.

DOG BEHAVIOR

It's Easy to Teach Your Dog to Sit

By FRANCES OTTE



TEACHING YOUR DOG TO LIE DOWN — AND STAY:

Try the simplest method first. Put your dog in the sitting position, on leash. With your right hand, motion as you say, "Duke — Down," pressing on his shoulders.

At the same time, draw his head downward with short jerks—not too rough or you may startle him. If he hesitates or seems confused, with one hand gently pull his feet forward from under him as you press down with the other.

Be patient. Coax him rather than force him. After he gets the idea take your hands away, but stay near as you repeat "Duke — Stay." Motion him to stay down. Later, repeat as you stand erect.

Next, take a pace or two away from him, walk back farther; walk slowly around him in large and small circles, stand back of him. After he will stay in position momentarily gradually lengthen the time to one minute, two minutes, three minutes or longer. Eventually down and stay him, stretch the leash straight out in front of him, then go out of sight, where he cannot see you but you can watch him.

To release him from his position, say "Duke — Sit" or "Okay."

Repetition and more repetition does the trick. Practice for a short time on every occasion until it becomes a fixed habit to lie down anywhere and stay on command.

* * *

Does He Chase?

IN RESPONSE to many inquiries from readers about how to stop their dog from chasing cars, the following suggestion is offered.

Try the simpler methods first. Attach a long leash to the dog's collar. Hold the end of the leash but keep it slack so the dog has plenty of freedom. Let him go some distance away from you. As a car passes and he starts to chase after it, allow him to go almost the full length of the leash. Give the command, "Stop."

Simultaneously take a firm hold of the leash and let him get a sudden and unexpected spill. If he is large or highly excitable insert a suitable coiled spring in the leash to take up the sudden shock. Give the command to return, and pat and praise him. If necessary, bring him to you with the leash. Never scold him when he comes to you, even if you have to bring him in.

Or, fasten the end of the leash to a tree or post, adjusting the leash so the dog cannot leave the yard. Stay out of sight until the dog has started to run after a car and, just as he takes his spill, go where he can see you and call him to you. You can arrange for a helper to drive down the street, but it should be someone the dog does not know or cannot recognize.

Books In Review

BEATRICE WASHBURN
Herald Book Page Editor

News from Sharja, Dir, Amb, Sark, Swat

PLEASE DO NOT REQUEST the return of books brought in for review. In fact, we might almost say please don't bring us books for review. The publishers already send more than 50 volumes a week. The task of sorting, and reading them, to say nothing of reviewing them is already gigantic. If we had to return the books too this department would fold up in despair.

Through regular channels it seems as though we already get most of the books in the world. If you have written one the chances are 10 to 1 a copy will reach us through your publishers. We can't even guarantee to review it for, naturally, on one newspaper page a week it is quite impossible to mention every book. We try to select those which might appeal to our readers and, indirectly, to us.

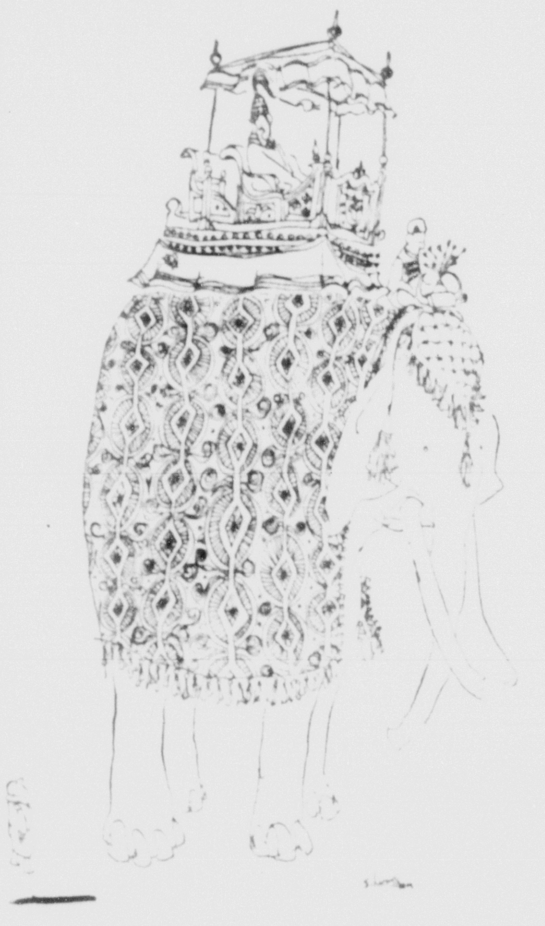
Nawab Scares Wali

Harnett Kane
. . . visitor

HARNETT KANE, whose last book The Golden Coast, (Doubleday, $4.95) is now in the book stores, was in Miami last week, lecturing, talking on the radio and meeting friends. Kane has published 19 books, most of them based on real people or real places.

He lives in New Orleans, was graduated from Tulane, worked for years on The New Orleans Item, takes four months off a year for travel and scouting up new ideas. The other eight he applies to the typewriter. It is the perfect life, one to which all writers aspire. It just so happens that he hits the nail on the head each time. In other words, his books sell.

Travel buffs always yearn to find some new place off the map where the tourist rarely goes. John Sack in his Report from Practically Nowhere, (Harper, $3.95) has done just that. He describes Sark, the third of the Channel Islands which one rarely hears about, and the only feudal state surviving in Europe. Dame Hathaway is lord and mistress of her domain of 500 inhabitants. She also levies a tax on chimneys.



From Kashmir to Punial
. . . 'Report from Practically Nowhere'

The island of Lundy, in the British Channel is known chiefly for its puffins — a small black and white sea bird. The Sovereign and Military state of Malta is the smallest country in the world and is found next door to a haberdasher in Rome. Sharja is on the Persian Gulf, known for practically nothing but its sheik, and then there's the Wali of Swat who retains a bodyguard of 2,000 to protect him from the Nawab of Dir, a tiny and even more insignificant country.

Monaco, San Marino and Liechenstein have been written about, of course, but how about Athos, a country on the Aegean where no woman has set foot for 1,000 years? Here live 2,200 monks as well as other males such as drakes, dogs, bulls and tom cats. Other remote places are Punial, which you reach by a vine bridge from the Vale of Kashmir and the land of Amb which is so small most people take its name on the map to be merely an abbreviation.

You can see all 14 miles square of Amb with a pair of field glasses from Pakistan. Men in Amb dye their beards red. Nothing is said about the women. Names of these places are diverting but one wishes that the author had spent a little more time in each and had given them more detailed description.

Prose Creates a World

IT TAKES almost as much attention to understand Lawrence Durrell's books as it must have taken to write them. Mountolive, (Dutton, $3.95) is the third in a magnificent tetralogy of the Middle East of which Justine and Balthazar are the first two. It has done for the Egyptian port of Alexandria and for much of the Middle East almost what Dickens did for London or Balzac for Paris. Durrell has created a world — sensual, tropical, bizarre and beautiful — where people walk in a kind of third dimension.

"Modern life offers us no unities," he explains, "so I have turned to science and am trying to complete a four decker novel whose form is based on relativity."

Indeed, time is the real hero of Durrell's books, time as a river, flowing ever past the shore, time as a human experience. His characters are seen from one point of view, then another for the same characters persist in all three novels.

Justine, mysterious, Jewish-Egyptian; her husband, fragile and fantastically wealthy; Leila, his mother, a lovely recluse dreaming away in the garden with only books and a cobra for companion. Years before she had young David Mountolive, new in the Foreign Service, for her lover. In the last book he returns as British ambassador to Egypt — picking up the threads of the past.

Lawrence Durrell
. . . time

He does not even recognize the one-time beauty who had occupied his dreams, now "a plump, square-faced Egyptian lady of uncertain years, giving out the scent of orange water, mint and cologne.

"'I hadn't stopped to think how old Leila must be . . . What if I, too, have changed as much as she?' Somewhere in the past they had exchanged images of one another like lockets. Now his own had faded, changed. He had forgotten that women never surrender the image of their heart's affection. She would remain forever blended by the old love."

Durrell's prose is rich, intricate and beautiful. It is as though he had borrowed from the strange countries of which he writes. Read it carefully if you read it at all, for it deserves minute attention.

Can Cow Baron Defy Justice?

Town Eyes Its Conscience

STRANGER IN GALAH, by Michael Barrett (Norton, $3.75).

Reviewed by Mike Morgan

Stranger in Galah tells what happens to a small, dusty, browbeaten town deep in the heart of the Australian Bush, when a stranger drives in and unloads the body of a hanged aborigine.

John Deane had taken to the bush in a beat-up, rust-worn truck fleeing a gang of crooks who wrongly thought he had hidden away a large sum of money. He stopped in Galah and, for some reason, wanted to see that justice was done for the hanging of the black man.

The aborigine had been murdered by Malone, owner of the Clancy Rock Ranch, and top dog in the area. The town and all the area around depended on Malone.

But the land was dry from drought and the people of Galah were bitter and wanted nothing to do with provoking Malone.

Lawrence, the district constable, wanted only to get Deane, the troublemaker, out of Galah.

This is a harsh, tight novel written with economy but maximum effect. In a way, it is not unlike a "western" with the dominating cow baron controlling a small empire while an outsider dares challenge what the townspeople ignore.

But there the sameness ends. Basically, Stranger in Galah is a tough portrait of the people of the tiny, bush town who have grown insensitive to the highhandedness of Malone — and thus lost much of their own humanity. This is a raw, angry, good story.

Allied Heroism at Arnhem

Jump Into Disaster

ARNHEM, by Maj. Gen. R. E. Urquhart, (Norton, $3.95)
Reviewed by Ned Aitchison

This is the story of the greatest airborne assault of World War II, the battle for the Lower Rhine in September, 1944, by which Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery sought to drive a wedge across Holland, opening the way for the Allies to penetrate industrial Germany.

Instead, it resulted in disaster for the British First Airborne Division, which Gen. Urquhart commanded. It was, on a smaller scale, another British Dunkirk, and British courage and tenacity were magnificent.

Deprived of promised air and ground support, of desperately needed supplies, survivors of the First fought on, until ordered to withdraw across the Neder river.

Of 8,905 airborne troops and 1,100 glider pilots, only 2,163 Britons, 160 Poles and 75 Dorsets clawed their way out of the "cauldron," as the Germans had dubbed the perimeter into which the British and Poles had jumped.

Gen. Eisenhower paid them this tribute. "Your officers and men were magnificent. Pressed from every side, without relief, they inflicted such losses that the Nazi infantry did not dare to close with them . . . Their great battle contributed effectively to the success of operations to the south."

Gen. Urquhart makes no effort to pass the buck for the tragic failure which he charges prolonged the war in Europe for at least a year.

He says conception of the airborne offensive, in which the American 101st and 82nd Airborne Divisions participated in adjacent areas, was strictly Montgomery's; Eisenhower as supreme commander "did not see eye to eye" with Monty on the operation.

No airborne effort, the general explains, can be sustained for more than 24 hours without reinforcement, relief and re-supply, without air and ground support. But the valiant First held out for nine fearful days.

Urquhart pays great tribute to the Americans' part in the battle. Monty later wrote him ". . . there are few episodes (in British military history) more gallant than the epic of Arnhem." This is not a book for casual reading, nor is it a technical military work — rather, a warm and detailed record of one of the great tests of human heart, courage and stamina in the fearful crucible of war.

His Trailerites Rate 'Who's Who'

CHARACTERS ON WHEELS, by Rex Thompson, (Crowell, $3).

Four million people now live in trailers in America and Rex Thompson, who operates a luxury park in California's lovely Laguna Beach, is the dean of trailer park managers. It's a wacky job, he admits, and his friends have even suggested that he see a psychiatrist.

There is nothing small town about his Aliso, where the rates are $150 a month not counting extras and it's the extras that count. Thompson's guests are business executives, doctors, lawyers, movie personalities, most of whom are listed in Who's Who.

He opened to the public like a Hollywood premiere with lights, fanfare, reporters, entertainers and hors d'oeuvres.

Once on hand, the guests did not spend all their time lolling on the magnificent beach. They were offered barbecues, movies, dances, movies, steak fries, group breakfasts, masquerades, shuffleboard tournaments, fish derbys and a park newspaper.

Running a trailer park takes not only money but tact. There was the time when Mrs. Rheinfield got stuck in the bath tub and had to be released with two gallons of liquid soap, when the rest rooms spouted boiling water, when someone planted a plastic snake on a $1,000 table, when a skunk hid in the closet of the richest and most exclusive trailer, and when the Samoan dancers threw real knives over the heads of the dancers.

Needless to say, Thompson's guests are all rich. They have to be to afford the rates. Unquestionably they're all extroverts or they couldn't stand the pace. It's an amusing book, even if you live in a house.

Book Examines State of Utopia

In doing the research for such historical novels as Rampart Street and Louisiana Cavalier, Everett Webber has read widely on the back trails of American life.

Out of these wide-ranging literary adventures has come an absorbing new book Escape to Utopia (Hasting House, $5.50), a fine piece of Americana describing the various "communitarian movements," mostly religious, that flourished in 19th century America.

How Plot To Smear Albert Failed

CONSORT FOR VICTORIA, by Vaughan Wilkins, (Doubleday, $3.95)

Vaughan Wilkins is a gifted story-teller and is perfectly at home in the era of the good Queen Victoria. On two counts, therefore, Consort for Victoria is off to a good start. Interest remains high to the last page and Wilkins lives up to the reputation which has brought his previous books readership in 10 languages.

This is the last of a trilogy dealing with the life of Victoria. It tells of a plot to discredit Prince Albert who had been selected to share the throne and had won the devotion of the young queen.

It is a side of the Victorian story that is not all morality and convention. Some of the plots and counter-plots show that the Victorian Englishman had a bent for political chicanery and the road of empire was not always smooth.

This is not a great book but it shows the mark of research and sound craftsmanship. —BERT COLLIER

Vengeance After 1812 Capture

Yank Plagues British Ships

LETTER OF MARQUE, by Andrew Hepburn, (Little, Brown, $3.95)

Here is a lusty yarn of high adventure on the seas. Letter of Marque is the story of a young American, first mate on a fine American ship, who was captured at the outset of the War of 1812.

Swearing to get revenge, bold Edward Stockton achieves it in spectacular fashion. He becomes captain of a darting privateer, half man-o'-war, half pirate, and ravages British shipping over half the globe.

Woven into the description of stirring sea fights are episodes in an island port where Stockton and other Americans find haven between forays. Here the plot is spun out with the aid of good and evil men and an aristocratic, charming Frenchwoman.

This is a historical with plenty of color, and far more action than most. The smell and tang of the sea are on every page.—BERT COLLIER

Last Chance?

Four Wars Pay Off—in Suffering

THE FACE OF WAR, by Martha Gellhorn, (Simon and Schuster $3.75).

These four wars are really one war, says this former Collier's Magazine correspondent who, with a typewriter as true and accurate as a camera, describes World War II, the Spanish Revolution, the war in China and in Korea. In eight years she covered 12 countries and found in all 20,000,000 dead, millions of children orphaned, millions of maimed, blinded, insane.

This is positively our last chance, she writes passionately. In a nuclear war, after the mammoth attack comes the instant retaliation. And who will bury 800 million dead?

Starving, wounded children are the same in Barcelona where the bombers shot like silver bullets across the sky as in Finland. There people put their children in buses and drove them blindly into the forests to be safe from the attack. In China they lived in caves.

Martha Gellhorn
. . . 800 million dead?

The civilian side of war is often the most pitiful, she writes. The Dutch folk of Nijmegen were ignorant of all the techniques that soldiers learn. It takes a while to gauge shell bursts and to know what is dangerous and what is not.

"The old people and the children have lived in cellars for months. There is not heat in Nijmegen and the small supply of coal is used for electricity. At night behind the blackout curtains people can at least look at each other while they listen for the shells."

She describes the Black Widow night fighters in England, the Battle of the Bulge where "the road passed through a curtain of pine forest and came out on a flat, rolling snow field. In this field the sprawled bodies of Germans lay thick."

It is all history now, of course, all in the past. Miss Gellhorn brings it back in vivid, photographic prose. As you read you may reflect that in the next war there will be no one to read about it, much less to write.

West Indies Allure Like No Other

LOVE AND THE CARIBBEAN, by Alec Waugh, (Farrar Straus, $4.50).

This is for those who love the Caribbean and the great arc of tiny islands that stretch from Florida to Venezuela. There are no two alike. As Waugh says, the "caprice of history, has made each one distinctive."

The slave trade, the buccaneers, the French Revolution, all the great movements in Europe have had their repercussions on these islets, owned variously by the great powers and yet each one with a different citizenry, language and customs of its own.

"The West Indians are an uprooted people," says Waugh. "They have lost their country, their language and their faith. They have retained many of their native superstitions, have more faith in their witch doctors than in their priests.

"Until lately there was a clause in the Haitian code forbidding the use of zombies, the raising of dead men to work in the fields."

For years Alec Waugh has been going back to the Hot Countries, the Sugar Islands as he calls them. Though they are all tropical, with sandy beaches, blue surf and palm trees there is as much difference between Martinique, the Empress Josephine's island where they still practise Obeah, and the sand-swept islet of Aruba with its tiny Dutch houses and it's fine schools as there is between countries in the Western and the Eastern hemisphere.

Dominica, where there are no hotels, no bathing beaches, "is a melancholy island the one I think of most often." Santa Lucia is the loveliest of its kind, most nearly resembling Tahiti. In Saba people live in the crater of a volcano."

Much of this book was written 30 years ago but the author has returned lately and comments that time moves slowly in the West Indies — in some places not at all.

Life Shifts Swiftly for Widow, 42

THE MIDDLE AGE OF MRS. ELIOT, by Angus Wilson, (Viking, $4.95).

Angus Wilson, major English novelist, is only just beginning to be appreciated in America. He is difficult to describe as his work does not quite belong in any category. You might call him a modern Henry James with a tincture of Charles Dickens.

He views his people from many angles, as does James, so that, observed from so many points you are apt to lose sight of the person entirely or find, as in real life, that they are too complex to understand at all.

His book is filled with characters, all delineated in a few strokes. Here we have 42-year-old Meg Eliot, wealthy, attractive, well-bred, who serves on the Committee for Aid to the Elderly as a kind of atonement for the advantages of a wealthy husband and a contemplated trip abroad.

She likes to dominate any group of people, and does so charmingly. Her friends are Viola, Lady Pirie, who lives in a dismal mid-Victorian house and is very lonely; Poll Robson, heavily made up, much married; Jill Stokes, sharp, discontented, who detests her son-in-law.

Mrs. Eliot's husband, Bill, "whose tearing grind of hard work had given him success and thrombosis," meets a shockingly sudden death in an airport in India and Meg, her life torn in half, comes back to her brother David.

He is a gentle, intellectual, engaged in the nursery business whose involvement with his friend Gordon is one of the major elements of the story.

The gradual transfiguration of Mrs. Eliot, left with very little money and a vacuum at the heart of her life, follows bewilderment, despair, and readjustment. She emerges an entirely different kind of person.

Everyone who enters the story, even the spectators in Badai, where Bill was killed, Meg's various friends, their friends and relatives, the doctor, even the servants, attain a personality.

It is like a play in which the light shifts depending on who comes out from the wings, not a novel you can lay down easily. Stick with it and gain from its depth and maturity of outlook.

Art Review

The Playhouse Gallery looks good this viewing-period.

The walls of the central gallery are given over to a one-man of paintings by director Jack Amoroso, many of them very large and very bright in hue — but they are hung far enough apart to be effective.

Two of the small galleries are devoted to the new water-colors of Richard Merrick, and well-arranged on the floor of the large gallery are sculptures in many media by Coconut Grove sculptor Al Vrana.

Amoroso shows work in two styles — his present silhouette style, and his earlier one of fitted planes. Most of the earlier works are in mixed media involving gold, tri-tec and casein-plastic, most of the later ones in lacquer.

In the earlier style he starts always with realistic subject material and develops it in a stylized manner, with more intention of creating mood.

The lacquer works are, in general, forthright statements on a simple theme, usually involving one or two figures and some of the apparatus of man's present-day mechanical existence. In most cases we prefer the earlier paintings.

In the most eye-catching space in the room is an eight-foot canvas, "Readying the Tongs," the theme for which evolves from the activity around an active oil-well. It is almost purely realistic in presentation, though it does suggest the contrast between the physical size of man and his mechanical creations.

There are three paintings of churches, all emphasizing the reach skyward of steeples and other architectural features, and these derive from what we may think of as Amoroso's "church period." They are all excellent.

We also particularly like "Feeding the Pigeons," a mood-piece, "The Derelict," and "The Arch."

Merrick's new work in watercolor is very creative, very unusual for work in this medium (since almost everything except landscape is touched upon), and very meaningful.

In all cases the medium is correctly used, and the general aura is one of rather moody poeticism and thoughtfulness.

The painter is especially skilled in conveying ideas and philosophical conceptions. He also rates high in composition and in subtle use of color.

Every painting on view has quality, but favorites for us are "Elohim," "Kabbalast," "Jericho," "Urban Rain," "Spring," "The Tempter," "Scribe and Pharisee," "Cosmic Unfoldment," "The Pool of Bethesda," "Walpurgis Night," "Village Sonata," "Evening," and — most favorite of all — "Flight into Egypt."

Vrana's sculptures are all exceptionally well crafted, and many of them are also idea-pieces. This artist uses many media, all with equal craftsmanship and with a reaching after three-way beauty — of idea, form, and surface.

We were particularly intrigued with the Torso and Mask in hammered lead, which gives a particularly lovely surface. We found the Torso one of the finest pieces in the show.

Of the carved sculptures in limewood and mango wood the finest seems to us to be "Fall-out," which has a rather complicated theme. "John Henry" in cement is a handsome piece, as is "The Blind Moor" in mahogany.

The fiber-glass bas-relief, produced by means of a cement mold, is intriguing as a new kind of decoration in architectural projects.

AT THE HUBER Gallery, Miami Beach, the present exhibitors, Hilton Leech and Henry Lawrence Faulkner, both have distinctive styles and express their ideas in novel ways.

Leech's work, apparently all recent, differs from his earlier work in speaking with greater sensitivity and more incisive style, and we feel it is more creative.

The painter has got much inspiration from a trip into the Southwest and Northwest and we particularly like his poetic interpretations of the cliff dwellings of Southern Colorado.

His "Altitude," a study of mountains, is also very expressive, as is "Geyser Basin," and "Molten Valley." The simple study of "Leaves" is delightful.

The works are abstracted, but not abstract, and the use of abstract forms on a realistic base is very attractive. The works never get too far from the base, however, to make instant recognition possible.

Faulkner paints in a style of subtle primitivism, if there is such a thing, and uses lovely and lively color to intrigue the eye — a kind of "peasant" use of color, if you will, combining hues that would not, at first thought, go together. They make out well, however, as do the bright contrasting ribbons on a peasant costume.

One of the most attractive canvases is "Spring in Lexington." Others are "Garden City" and "Vizcaya Gardens," as well as a charming flower study.

* * *

JOSEF PRESSER, whose one-man is now up at the Tucker Galleries, Miami Beach, uses a smoothly sophisticated approach, and devotes himself mainly to studies of women's heads and to compositions involving clowns.

He handles paint expertly, with a sleek line and not much attempt, in the head studies, to depict character; the interest seems to lie in composition and color-use. In addition to several of the heads, the handsomest piece in the show is a horse study titled "Great Stallion." All the paintings are in gouache.

* * *

BLANCHE PLAFSON'S one-man at El Centro, McAllister hotel, shows a liking for the curved line and a certain darkish blue that is utilized in one painting after another. Some paintings are extra-smooth, others use a heavy impasto.

Most of the subjects are Mexican. The pastel nudes are not too impressive, and we believe finger-paintings should not appear in any show.

LOWE PREVIEW THIS AFTERNOON

Five Art Exhibits Opening

Five new exhibitions will be available to this area's contingent of gallery-goers this week.

Lowe Gallery will open with a preview this afternoon a show of 60 oil paintings by Americans who have studied abroad under Fulbright grants. This will be available to the public from Tuesday through April 26.

The Fulbright Painters exhibition was organized by the Smithsonian Institution, in co-operation with the Institute of International Education, to mark the tenth year since the Fulbright program went into effect.

The paintings, no two by the same artist, were selected by Lloyd Goodrich, director of Whitney Museum of American Art, where the show was premiered. The choice was made after a survey of work by the 200 artists who have journeyed to India, the Far East, and Europe to study under the U.S. government - sponsored Fulbright Act.

A preponderance of abstract and semi-abstract pieces make up the exhibition. Commenting on his selection, Goodrich wrote:

"This is a faithful reflection of the prevailing trend of the works submitted, and not something imposed by the selector. The exhibition typifies our decade, in which abstract art has been the predominant tendency among the younger generation."

Lewis Stern

Ethel Fisher

MIAMI BEACH Art Center will open with an informal 2 p.m. preview today the annual exhibition of members of Blue Dome Art Fellowship, which will remain on view through April 22. Blue Dome is known as the oldest active art organization in Florida.

Five equal awards of merit will be allotted by jury, in addition to two honorable mentions. The awards will be announced at the preview.

LOCAL PAINTER Ethel Fisher will have a one-man showing of paintings at the Studio Craft Shop, Coconut Grove, from Monday through April 30. She studied at University of Texas, Washington University, and Art Students League.

Mrs. Fisher has shown at the A.C.A. and Jacques Seligman galleries in New York City, and was included in the "9 from Miami" show at Riverside Museum, New York, in 1957 and the "Three Miami Painters" show at High Museum in Atlanta. She was also represented in the "Art in the U.S.A." show in New York last winter.

She has had one-mans at Mirell Gallery, Lowe Gallery, Miami Beach Art Center, in the Washington Federal bank series, and at the National Museum in Havana.

LEWIS STERN JR., 29-year-old South Miami artist, will be the next exhibitor at the Gallery Restaurant, where his one-man show will open today.

Stern overcame the handicap of almost complete paralysis in learning to paint. He was stricken with rheumatic arthritis at the age of 7.

He is also noted for his huge "constructions," which are pictures in bas-relief built up on sheets of masonite.

Limited to slight use of his hands and forearms, Stern works with the aid of mechanical devices and mirrors. For the heavy constructions he uses helpers to do the actual work while he directs, using sketches he has previously created.

THE NEWEST painting organization in the area, the Watercolor Group of Miami Art League, will have its initial show at Burdine's Miami store auditorium from Monday through Saturday.

Prizes totaling $150 will be awarded in the juried exhibition. Non-members may hang with the group upon payment of a $5 fee.

AT MIAMI WOMEN'S CLUB TODAY

Audition Winners in Contest

Nine winners in the recent Miami Music Club Young Artist auditions will give the ninth annual concert presented under this sponsorship at 3 p.m. today in Miami Woman's Club auditorium.

The young people were judged as being of "concert caliber" and well-prepared to appear in recital at this time. The performers, however, due to the large number selected, will play only one work each.

Many winners of these auditions in the past have done concert work, and several have achieved recognition in their various fields.

Of the young people to be heard today two are still only 12 years of age. They are Janice Feld, pianist, and Elliot Chapo, violinist.

Janice, a student at Shenandoah Junior High school, has played a concert for members of the Miami Beach Music and Art League. She plays both piano and flute. In piano she is a pupil of Cyrus Ullian.

Elliot Chapo has studied violin with his father, with Mrs. Constance Seeger, and presently with Eugene Dubois. He has appeared as soloist several times with Billie O'Day and the Miami Symphonic Society Orchestra.

Fourteen-year-old Rochelle Drazier, both flutist and pianist, will perform on the flute in this concert. She plays in Coral Gables Youth Symphony and is first flutist for the Miami Symphonic Society orchestra. Last year she was a winner in piano in Miami Music Club's junior division.

Bonnie Bromberg, 15, is an honor student of Miami Conservatory, where she studies with Joan Stein, chairman of the music department. She is enrolled in the diploma program at the conservatory.

She has played numerous solo recitals for the Miami Beach Recreation department and has appeared on its TV program, Opus 2.

Young pianist Michele Greenberg, also 15, attends Miami Senior High School. A student of Peggy Neighbors, she won the golden certificate award of National Federation of Music Clubs three years running.

Sixteen-year-old pianist Martha Flynn, who has studied four years with Estelle Brown, attends Notre Dame Academy. She is planning on a career as a teacher of music.

Coloratura soprano Louise Raboin, 17, has studied four years with Mrs. Jonnie Hoffman. She was winner of a Miami Music Club scholarship last year, and recently won the position of one of the "Jeanie Maids" in the Stephen Foster Memorial competition. She has just been selected as one of the members of the "Cavalcade to Alaska" this summer.

Soprano Marlene Hurwitz, 20, has been brought up in Miami and studies here with Dr. Paul Beck. She plans a career as a dramatic soprano.

Baritone Harold David Garrity, also 20, is a senior at University of Miami, where he studies with Bertie Long. He has appeared with the Music Circus and in the Playhouse musicals. He will present a senior recital in Beaumont Hall on May 25.

Young Miami musicians discuss recordings of some of the music they will perform at their joint recital at 3 p.m. today in Miami Womans Club auditorium. They are recent winners in the 1959 Miami Music Club Young Artist auditions, and the recital is their prize. Left to right, front, are Elliott Chapo, Martha Flynn and Bonnie Bromberg; rear, Janice Feld, Louise Raboin, Marlene Hurwitz, Rochelle Drazier, Michele Greenberg.

Miamians in Key Convention Roles

Dr. Bertha Foster, founder-president of Musicians Club of America, will be one of the guest speakers who will address sessions of the National Federation of Music Clubs Biennial Convention in San Diego, Calif., April 19-26. Several other prominent workers in the music field from this area will also participate in the convention activities as follows:

Bertha Foster — Mrs. McNutt — Mrs. Muir — Mrs. Sperow

. . . Miami supplying a speaker and delegates

MRS. GARLAND McNUTT, a member of the advisory committee of the legislation department, will serve as judge for senior achievement records during the biennial.

MRS. CLIFTON J. MUIR, who has served the national federation for the past four years as vice-president of the Southeastern Region, represents Florida on the board of directors, and is a member of four important committees, including the executive committee.

MRS. BYRON A. SPEROW will represent the Florida Federation of Music Clubs.

MRS. FRANK D. WEBSTER will be the Coral Gables Music Club's delegate.

Among the performing soloists and groups to be heard during the eight-day sessions will be the Paganini Quartet, Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra conducted by George Solti, the Tucson Boys Chorus, and folk-singers Marais and Miranda.

Federation Young Artist winners who will appear in recitals include soprano Nan Merriman, pianists Ivan Davis and John Browning, baritone McHenry Boatwright, and violinist Stanley Plummer.

In addition, baritone Igor Gorin will appear as soloist with the San Diego Symphony, the Denver Opera company will give a performance, and the San Diego Bach Chorus will appear.

One of the convention highlights will be performance of a commissioned symphonic work by Lukas Foss.

The semi-finals and finals of the 1959 Federation Auditions for young artists will be held in San Diego during the sessions.

Besides the full recitals accorded to the top groups and individuals mentioned, many western and midwestern choruses and orchestral groups have been accepted for briefer appearances during afternoon and morning sessions.

Among these are the University of Portland String Quartet, the Youth Orchestra of Minneapolis, the Apollo Male Chorus of Great Falls, Mont., the Salt Lake Symphonic Choir, the Twin Cities Philharmonic Society of Minneapolis, and the Louisianians of Fineville, La.

VIOLINIST'S FIRST VISIT

Senofsky Is Next Symphony Soloist

Berl Senofsky, young American violinist who became the first American artist in his profession to win the Grand Prize in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium international competition three years ago, will make his Miami debut on the next pair of concerts played by University of Miami Symphony Orchestra.

Senofsky will perform Lalo's "Symphonie Espagnol" with John Bitter and the orchestra next Sunday evening, April 12, in Miami Beach auditorium, and Monday evening, April 13, in Dade County auditorium.

The orchestra is programming the "Magic Fair" overture of Surinach and the Cesar Franck D Minor Symphony.

Senofsky made his New York debut in Town Hall in 1946, and later appeared with a dozen or more major symphony orchestras, including the New York Philharmonic and Boston Symphony.

His Town Hall debut was the result of his winning the Walter Naumburg Award of that year. He has served as soloist and assistant concertmaster of the Cleveland Orchestra under George Szell.

Strassburg And Samuels Train Choir

Two of Miami's well-known musical directors will train the choir which will appear with Metropolitan Opera singer Jan Peerce April 22 and 23 for the Community Passover Seder in Miami Beach Exhibition Hall.

They are Robert Strassburg, pianist-composer, and Eli Samuels, for five years choir director of the North Jewish Center. Peerce will be making his local debut in singing the ancient Passover chants at the Community Seder.

The event has been arranged with vacationers of the Jewish faith particularly in mind.

Strassburg's career has included the music directorship of the recent Festival of the Americas here. He has composed some 40 film scores. He is also director of the Miami Youth Symphony and the Doctors' Symphony.

Samuels came to the area from Brooklyn, where he was choir director of the Brooklyn Jewish Center and Temple Emanuel in Paterson, N.J.

Choir Plans Program

The Brahms Chorus, composed of members of Miami Music Club, the Coral Gables Madrigal Society, and the Eight O'Clock Music Club, will present a program at the home of Mrs. M. S. Wales, 5712 Granada, Coral Gables, at 10:15 a.m. Wednesday.

The chorus is directed by Mrs. J. Barbour Russell. Edwin Clarke will narrate, and the two-piano accompaniment will be played by Eleanor Clark Linton and Junia Sells.

The program will consist of Four Love Songs.

Breeskin In Recital

A violin recital to benefit the Miami Beach Civic Orchestra will be played Sunday evening, April 26, by the orchestra's conductor, Barnett Breeskin, in the Temple Beth Sholom auditorium, 4144 Chase Ave., Miami Beach. Marten Godwin will assist at the piano.

The program will include the Brahms Sonata No. 2 in A major, the unaccompanied Bach Chaconne, Glazounov's Violin Concerto in A minor, and a group of short pieces including two by Miami composer Mana-Zucca.

CHINESE scarf-dance will be performed by Mme. Averil Tong in a one-woman dance program, "A Chinese Fantasy," at 8:15 tonight in Barry College auditorium. The event is the last of this season's Culture Series.

Kistler Heads Chamber Music Again

Robert S. Kistler was re-elected president of Friends of Chamber Music, an incorporated non-profit organization, at a board of directors meeting last week. He has served in this position two years.

Also re-elected were Burton T. Wilson, vice president, Lawrence Friedman, treasurer, Ernest S. Silverman, secretary, and Mrs. Jane French, assistant-secretary.

Directors newly elected to the board are Leonard D. Baskin, Mrs. Marjorie Stoneman Douglas, and Mrs. Anna Golden.

Membership in the organization is now open to the public, and a limited number of memberships are available through Mr. Friedman, 68 W. Flagler St., Tel. FR 9-1083.

Nassau Bands Vying With Tinkle of Cash

By LOUIS MARIANO
Herald Travel Writer

NASSAU, Bahamas—Nassau is stepping high these days, but it isn't only to the beat, beat, beat of the jungle drums and Calypso bands.

The music that is sweeter still comes from the jingling pockets of vacationers and the millions being poured into hotels and homes by British, Canadian and American interests.

Behind the rush of investment capital to Nassau is the growing tide of visitors and new residents to this harbor capital of 700 cays and islands. In 1949, New Providence Island accounted for only 30,000 tourists annually; now they pour in by ship and plane at the rate of 200,000 a year, with the end far from sight.

To meet the growing demand for accommodations, the island opened two new luxury hotels this year on the heels of a modernization and expansion program for many of its older hotels.

Away from Nassau itself, two major projects are rising—one the plush Coral Harbour development on the south of the island and the other at Lyford Cay at the western side. Both will eventually become self contained communities of luxury homes built around country clubs.

Prices for home sites are reasonable — for millionaires — running as they do to about $30,000 for ocean front locations.

Most luxurious of the two new hotels is the Nassau Beach Lodge, which was built by Canadian interests headed by Frank J. Crothers. It is being operated by Howard Johnson, American motel and restaurant operator.

The hotel, containing 278 rooms, is three miles from busy Bay St. in Nassau and almost a complete resort city in itself.

It features a large free-form pool and a beach just a few feet beyond, dining and dancing in the Lamplighter Room, luncheon at a poolside terrace and bar and night club entertainment in the Cave.

Speed Eliminates Lunches

By RAY FALK
Women's News Service

PARIS — Continental jet service, going into effect this spring, will make traveling between cities in Europe so speedy there won't be any time for refreshments.

Jet flying time between major European cities will be 50 minutes. Deduct another 15 minutes for ascent and descent and you end up with a stomach-ache, unless both passengers and chefs adjust to the new speeds.

The airlines report that passengers will have to be able to take to caviar and pate de foie gras like eggs and liverwurst or leave their appetites behind at the napkin line.

To facilitate jet-age digestion Air France has designed a push-cart that will hold 32 trays. Two trips down the center aisle and all 70 passengers aboard its jet are served.

SAS has decided to stretch out its deluxe dinners. Each leg of the journey will feature a different course. You may be served a caviar-topped baked Idaho potato between Copenhagen and Munich, Petite Ballotine de Volaille (a stuffed chicken) between Munich and Vienna and Salmon Pirogue (an egg dough filled with smoked salmon, minced capers, diced eggs and boiled rice) between Vienna and Istanbul.

All of Air France's cabin crews are being retrained for the 515 miles an hour Caravelle Jet Service. The demand for stewards and older hostesses will be greater than ever. It takes an experienced hostess and a man's strength to serve 70 meals in 35 minutes.

At the jets' high flying altitudes every seat will be equipped with an oxygen mask. This is an extra service many a passenger may be thankful for. Any passenger may use the oxygen bottle if he partakes too long at the champagne bottle. There will be no extra charge for the oxygen service.

Milk Pipeline

Tourists vacationing in the Italian Alps near Trento will see what is probably the first major pipeline for milk in the world. The line, four miles long, carries milk from cows grazing near Vallina, 6,500 feet up in the Alpine pastures, to a cheese factory at Roncone, 2,200 feet below.

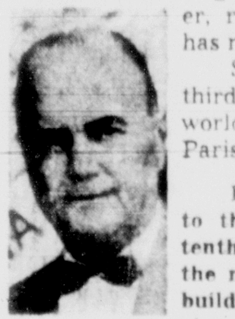
VACATIONLANDS

Enchanting Land Offers New and Old

By NED AITCHISON
Herald Travel Writer

MEXICO CITY—Blending the rich and colorful background of its centuries-old colonial Spanish heritage with the ultra-modern facade of one of the world's greatest metropolises, this fascinating capital never loses its appeal for the traveler, regardless of how many previous visits he has made here.



AITCHISON

Situated in the central highlands, on the third highest plateau of comparable size in the world, the great city covers twice the area of Paris, France.

But the tourist, whether on his first trip to the land of the ancient Aztecs, or on his tenth sojourn there, is most impressed not by the massed might of the great metal and glass buildings that arise along Avenida Juarez and elsewhere in the busy business districts, but by the lovely residential areas—out the Paseo de la Reforma and in the Pedregal section near the fabulous University City.

There are many beautiful thoroughfares in the world's large cities, but to our mind none more inspiringly so than the drive out Reforma, where stand the mansions of the rich and the more modest abodes of Mexicans in the now increasing middle class.

Replete with statues of the nation's heroes; the six-lane roadway is arched by towering trees, green with foliage. Up a steep, winding road stands Chapultepec, recalling the days of Maximilian and Carlota, where the lofty old castle, now a national museum, offers an absorbing view down over the restless city.

Mexico City's Cathedral Is 300 Years Old
. . . located on city's main square or plaza

Below is lovely Lago (Lake) Chapultepec, its surface dotted by colorful small boats rowed by throngs of Mexicans and visitors, alike; its formal gardens, flotillas of wild fowl and rock formations, reflecting pools and wonderful fountains; bridle paths and verdant parkways.

* * *

Unusual Location

PEDREGAL, OF COURSE, was carved out of lava beds formed by the eruption of Mt. Ajusco some 5,000 years ago. It is an improbable location for smart, fashionable homes, but there they are, in settings of broad, green lawns and exquisite gardens.

Nearby is the famed University with its internationally-known mosaic murals and exciting ultra-modern architecture. Chartered in 1553, it is regarded as the oldest in America.

And across the highway which runs back into the capital, is the vast Pedregal stadium.

* * *

Wonderful Restaurants

OUT AVENIDA JUAREZ and Madero, lies the famed Zocalo, a great paved square on which the cathedral, the oldest church on the American continent, fronts.

And the Government pawn shop is another interesting port of call for bargain-hungry visitors.

There are, of course, magnificent modern hotels—the Plaza Vista Hermosa, El Presidente, the Continental Hilton, the sumptuous Reforma, Del Prado, facing the large city park known as the Alemeda; the Bamer, and the Monte Cassino, to mention only a few.

And wonderful restaurants, serving Mexican, continental or plain old American "meat-and-potatoes" meals, which appeal to many tourists from North of the Border.

There are the National Palace with frescoes by Diego Riviera; the white Fine Arts Palace; theaters, clubs—and the climate.

More United States tourists than visited Europe in 1958 traveled to Mexico last year, government sources report, and spent some $350,000,000 there. Already enjoying a brisk winter season, the city is set this summer for the greatest influx of guests from the U.S.A. and Canada in its history.

In Mexico

You Just Don't

—TRY TO CASH personal checks; you'll be out of luck. Carry traveler's checks.

—TRY TO SEND collect telegrams.

—COMPLAIN about slow food service; Mexicans enjoy leisurely dining. Take it easy.

—WEAR SPORTS shirts, Mister, or white shoes in city; jackets and ties are de riguer.

—EVER, if you are a girl or woman, wear shorts or slacks and bra in city; they are permissible only at beach or other resorts.

—AND, GIRLS, forget the idea of picking up romantic Latin swains in night spots or other amusement places. Unattached gals should travel in groups, not unescorted.

—TAKE A CHANCE on tap water. Good hotels supply bottled water. And don't indulge in fruit that can't be peeled by yourself, or in uncooked vegetables: They may be all right, but your tummy doesn't want to take a chance.

Vet Traveler Off Again

Lee Lincoln, Miamian and a veteran traveler, is leaving for New York with his son Paul to begin a slow trip around the world. They will take a trailer from Capetown, South Africa to attend Oberammergau's Passion Play produced once every 10 years.

Under the sponsorship of England's National Union of Students, he joined student groups visiting Belgium and Spain. But, in 1954 the State Department seized his passport for visiting USSR on an English-Russian student exchange tour.

Most of his traveling has been on student trips — bicycling along the Rhine; traveling through Scandinavia, Italy and the Near East.

BY AIR — Mexico City is 1,275 air miles (4½ hours) non-stop from Miami, or via Havana and Central America by airlines.

POPULATION — City 4,300,000 (about size of Chicago); country, about 30,000,000, or one-sixth the size of U.S.

SIZE — Mexico has roughly one-fourth of the area of the U.S., of 760,000 square miles.

CLIMATE — Mexico City, at elevation of 7,349 feet, is springlike the year 'round. Mornings sunny; light afternoon rains, June through October. Excellent for asthma sufferers.

ACCOMMODATIONS — Hotels range from luxurious to modest, prices from $4 to $100 a day; many, many excellent restaurants, serving Mexican, American and continental-type food.

CLOTHES — Mexico City is dressy; men wear conservative business suits and ties (no loud sports shirts, please); women, tailor-made suits or dresses year-'round. And never, never shorts or slacks in city, but they are permissible at resorts. Women wear hats only at formal parties, weddings, at church and the race track.

CURRENCY — Mexican peso; official rate, 12½ to U.S. dollar. But the 8-cent peso is designated by a $ sign.

TIPPING — Two pesos a bag for porter or bellman; otherwise about the same as at home, 10 to 15 per cent of food check. But don't overtip.

WATER — Most hotels furnish bottled water; tap water potable in larger cities; elsewhere, carry bottle of chlorine tablets.

MEALS — Dinner, 9 to 11 p.m., preceded by cocktails from 6 to 9 in better places. Luncheon, 1 to 3 p.m., big meal of day for Mexicans, who enjoy leisurely dining.

WARNING — Mexicans don't tolerate drunks in public; the high altitude makes tippling hazardous for tourists; don't over-eat or over-exercise until you've become acclimated. Take it easy. Single women should go in groups, not alone unescorted.

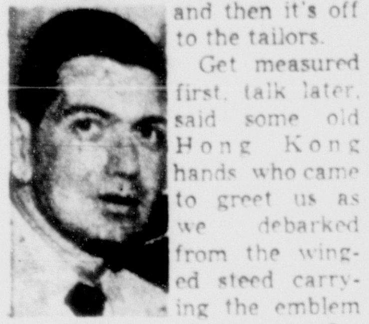
You Get New Clothes If You Go to Hong Kong

By HORACE SUTTON
Herald Travel Writer



SUTTON

HONG KONG — Here in this seaside haberdashery they give you just 30 minutes to drop your bag at the hotel, and then it's off to the tailors.

Get measured first, talk later, said some old Hong Kong hands who came to greet us as we debarked from the winged steed carrying the emblem of the new Japan.

And so we were not very long in the country, maybe 40 minutes or so, when we took the ferry from Kowloon on the mainland across to Hong Kong Island and presented ourselves at the tailoring establishment known as Chan Tuck.

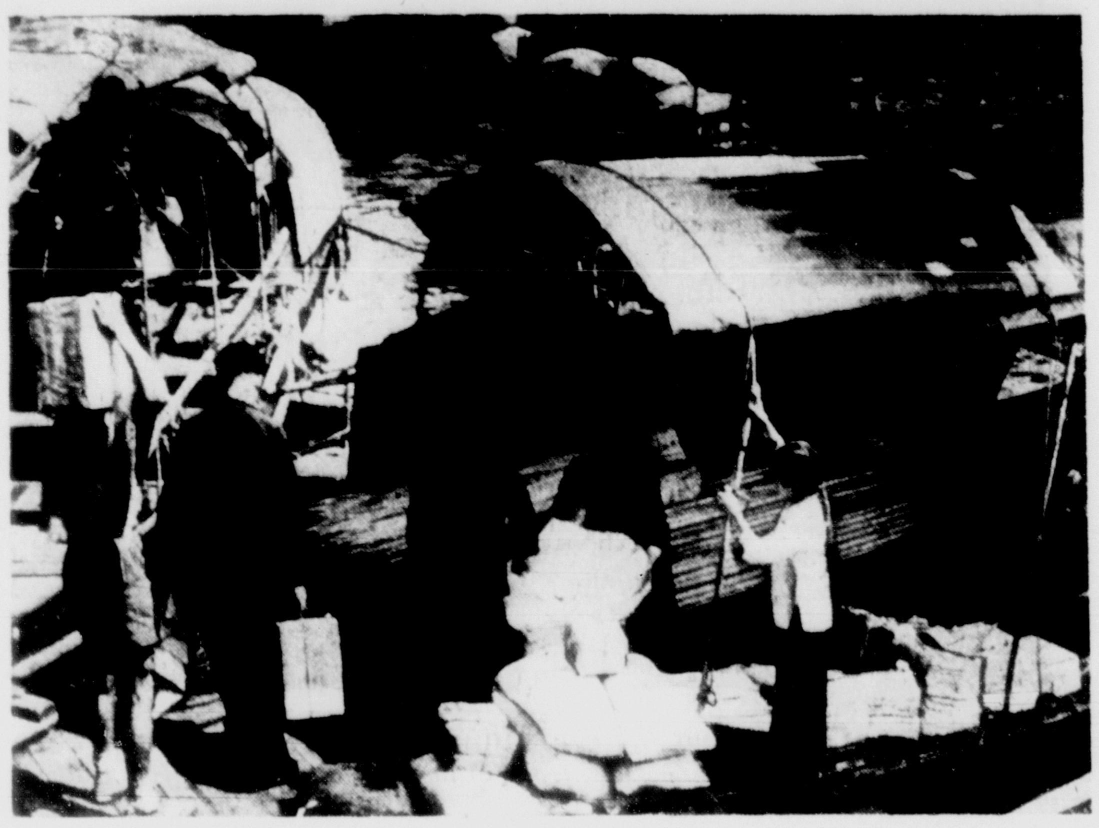
A lady I have come to think of as Lou stood amid a thousand bolts of cloth, squatting tailors, tangled measuring tapes and haystacks of pins. She wore a simple Chinese sack dress decorated with the medals of past encounters with a bird's nest soup.

"You want East Coast style or West Coast style?" asked the lady known as Lou. She was referring to the shoreline of our native land, long since left behind.

"We live in the East," we said to this South China-Savile Row savant. "Ah," said Lou, like Charlie Chan uncovering a clue. "You want Blooks Blothers."

"We are Brooks Brothers three times removed," we said as we gave her a recent suit of ours bought not three doors from Madison Avenue, USA. "Perhaps you can copy this, except give us flap pockets on the trousers to protect the roll."

"I give you flap pockets," said Lou, "but you sure you want those wide lapels? Very much out of style now."



Chinese Junks Transport Merchandise in Hong Kong

Winter suits with jazzy Madras linings, very much in style, cost inside $40 here in Hemstitch-by-the-sea, and most tailors like to give three fittings, the last two on your premises if you wish.

Visitors here for short stays are sometimes hard put to get all their fittings in. Friends of ours excused themselves early the other night.

"Have to get up at six for a fitting," they said. "Plane's leaving at eight."

And recently a departing tourist came running into the airport terminal followed closely by a panting Chinese tailor who toted a box. They disappeared into the men's room for a last-chance fitting even as the flight was being called on the loudspeaker.

Back in his own clothes a few minutes later, the customer dashed for the gate while the Chinese bowed him goodbye. "We fix, we send," the tailor said.

Hong Kong lives largely on Red Chinese vegetables shipped daily over the border and sold in the markets along with sugar cane, ginger, and snake meat from Communist pythons. Oranges from California compete in the market with tangerines as big as grapefruits.

Piggies come to market in straw cages suspended on poles carried by ladies who wear black slacks.

Pick and shovel work is done by Hakka women who wear straw hats with a floppy fringe, like old fashioned lampshades.

Sidewalk beauty parlors will do madame's hair with glue, a sort of permanent permanent. And bootleg butchers sell chow dog puppies, a delicacy of the table around here if cooked properly with garlic and dried bamboo shoots.

The whole colony of Hong Kong including the island, the city of Kowloon, and the New Territories comprises 391 square miles which means that Manhattan would fit in it more than 17 times.

There is room to cruise out to the New Territories stopping at the handsome Shatin Heights Hotel where luncheon is served on the terrace overlooking the crazy quilt of gardens and the lichee nut trees cover the finger of land that runs out into the China Sea.

Over on Hong Kong Island the elite live on The Peak, the higher the house, the better the view, the more the rent, the higher the social standard.

Plenty of Travel Field Activity

A new agreement between Grace Lines and the federal shipping agencies of the United States will provide new tourist traffic between Great Lakes ports and ports in Venezuela, the Antilles and the coast of Colombia.

Beginning April 20, with the opening of the St. Lawrence Seaway, the new service will provide three or four cargo and passenger sailings monthly during the eight-month open navigation season.

Special calls will be permitted at Jamaican ports and those of other Caribbean islands. Cargo will be carried both ways between the United States, Canada and the Caribbean area. Six freighters, providing passenger accomodations will be employed on the run.

Opening of the deep-water channel, under construction by joint agreement between the Canadian and American governments, enables the ocean route to extend 2,000 miles into the heart of North America.

Directly on the route are such major North American trading and population centers as Duluth, Sault St. Marie, Chicago, Detroit, Windsor, Cleveland, Buffalo, Hamilton, Toronto and Syracuse.

A NEW landmark in American travel history has been made with the formation of the Interamerican Travel Agents Society in Mexico City.

This new group's goal is to foster travel to all sections of the Western Hemisphere, through mutual assistance and cooperative promotion programs.

A Miamian, Charles North, of North's Travel Bureau was elected treasurer. The new society voted to hold its next convention in Port-au-Prince, Haiti during the Easter week of 1960.

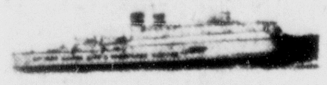
SEABOARD RAILROAD is boasting of a 25 per cent increase in passenger travel to and from Miami. W. J. Ficht, general passenger agent reported a 6 per cent increase for the month of January; a 9.56 per cent increase for the first half of February and a 24 per cent increase for the last half.

Records for March show a 25 per cent increase over last year Ficht said, and at present there is a 15.1 per cent increase in passenger travel for the whole of Florida.



THE S-S City of Havana, 500 foot passenger ship sails from Key West to Havana twice weekly, accomodating 500 passengers and 125 automobiles. During the six hour crossing, the fully air conditioned City of Havana offers to its passengers the use of lounges, day rooms, parlors, a cocktail lounge and snack bar. The ship has accomodations for all types of vehicles including motorcycles, luggage trailers, boat trailers (with or without boat), house trailers and bicycles.

National Airlines has refiled its request with the Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington for a 25 per cent reduction in night coach fares between northern communities. National officials state the board's rejection of the original filing was for technical reasons and expect the new tariff will become effective April 20 as planned. The new fare, between New York and Miami, would be $35.10 less than bus fare between the two cities.

Beach Likes Dressy Idea

By NIXON SMILEY
Herald Farm and Garden Editor

TWO YEARS AGO after I had shown Miami Beach to the Brazilian landscape architect, Roberto Burle Marx, he was so pleased with the colorful parkway plantings that he said:

"I feel that I have been through a city."

And thus Marx, who is widely known among landscape architects the world over for his work, paid Miami Beach his highest possible compliment.

For to Marx a city, to be worthy of the name, must have more than streets and handsome buildings. It must have parks and trees and colorful plants and flowers.

Marx came by his definition of a city from his association with Rio de Janeiro, his home city, and with the cities of Europe where he spent many years studying art.

* * *

MIAMI BEACH HIT HIM utterly unexpectedly. He had been on a lecture tour of the United States the year before and he had heard about Miami Beach and had preconceived ideas about the place.

Although he wouldn't admit it in an outright way, Marx had found the average city of this country rather drab.

There is little doubt that he expected to find Miami Beach, well, not only drab but also a honky-tonk.

The parkway plantings captivated Marx and, instead of returning to Brazil with the honky-tonk idea, he remembers Miami Beach for its colorful parkway plantings — a city that looks like a city.

Miami Beach's gay parkway plantings were begun in 1952. The first test planting was made along Pinetree Drive, from 23rd St. to 28th St. It was so popular that the park department was given funds and encouragement to go ahead with additional plantings.

Today Miami Beach has about three miles of parkway plantings — plantings so colorful and so outstanding that this island city has become the pride of Florida.

And across Biscayne Bay citizens in other Dade County communities are urging their leaders to look at what the Beach has done, and they are asking the question:

"Why can't we have the same?"

COLORFUL parkway plantings have transformed Miami Beach into a city that is now the pride of Florida.

This transformation has taken place within the last few years. The cost has been small compared with the immeasurable publicity value.

The parkway plantings were begun with little fanfare; with some hope, it's true, but not with any great expectation.

Yet, the transformation was so great that the people who started it were surprised.

How did it happen? What does it take to transform the appearance of a city in such a short time?

Leadership, yes. But it takes more than that. It takes ideas, cooperation, enthusiasm, and willingness to use public funds unstintingly for "non-practical" purposes like beautification.

* * *

IT WOULD BE hard now to find the spark that ignited this program. The origin has been swamped under city-wide enthusiasm. But it might have begun in the garden clubs — in the Miami Beach Garden club and the Tropical Garden club.

Claude Renshaw, the veteran Miami Beach city manager who has since retired to go into banking, gave the go-ahead signal in 1952.

"We've put so much of the taxpayers' money under ground," Renshaw said, "that it's time to let them see something above ground."

(He was referring to the millions of dollars which had been spent on sewers and water lines.)

* * *

JOHN POULOS, who had just recently been named superintendent of the park department, was authorized to put in a test planting of "colorful things" along Pine Tree drive.

The plantings were striking. With the backing of the city councilmen, Renshaw authorized more plantings.

By this time Renshaw and Poulos had the enthusiastic backing — and some friendly pressure, too, — of the powerful Miami Beach Taxpayers Association. (Frank Smathers is now president of the association.)

The garden clubs also were powerful backers.

Probably the outstanding contribution of the taxpayers association was its work to get businessmen to back the planting program under the theory that beautification is good business.

With such enthusiastic support of the program, it got a quick ride through council meetings, and funds were provided as fast as they could be used.

Nothing apparently was overlooked. Funds were provided for maintenance as well as for development.

The program has continued to enjoy support of councilmen, as well as that of the present city manager, Morris Lipp.

* * *

SINCE POULOS became park department superintendent in 1952 his budget has doubled, and now is $450,000 a year. He has 97 employes in his department.

The park department budget is not considered to be excessively large for a city the size of Miami Beach.

The city of Montreal, Canada, for instance, provides $500,000 a year for the Montreal Botanical Garden, which is separate from the city's park department.

Recently Poulos was given funds to employ a trained horticulturist, Sam Mauro. It will be his job to see that plants are well grown and that they are kept free of insects and diseases.

* * *

THE SUCCESS of Miami Beach's parkway plantings has not been overlooked by the communities on the west side of Biscayne Bay.

Miami is now planning an ambitious beautification program along its main entrance, Biscayne Blvd.

Coral Gables is also expanding its parkway plantings, which it began in a planting program along Miracle Mile.

But most communities are faced with several problems before they can go in for beautification in any extensive way.

First, it takes money, and money comes from taxes. And, secondly, it takes a lot of know-how to grow, plant and maintain the stuff used to beautify parkways.

So, unless a community is willing to provide money for planning, installation, planting and maintenance, well, it's best to forget about the whole thing.

No Gardening at Home

Poulos Says Little About Himself

Who is this fellow, John Poulos, who supervises the planting and the maintenance of Miami Beach's colorful parks and parkways?

We had trouble getting information out of him when he thought his name would be mentioned.

But we did learn that he was born in New York 39 years ago and that he was graduated from Cornell University's agricultural college.

Poulos came to Miami in 1946 and worked four years for Exotic Gardens before going into the Miami Beach parks department in 1949.

When Milton Link (he now lives in Fort Lauderdale) resigned as park superintendent in 1952 Poulos was given the job.

Poulos seems to be endowed with two qualities that are important to success. He has drive and he can get along with people. He is quick to give credit to others. He not only likes the people under whom he works but has a great deal of respect for them.

Having a practical turn of mind, Poules doesn't consider himself to be exceptionally good as a landscape designer.

He usually calls in Jonathan Seymour, Coral Gables landscape architect, to do landscape plans for him. But if he is in a hurry he may go ahead and tackle the job himself.

Above everything else, he is a topnotch horticulturist. He not only knows plants, but he knows how to grow them and to maintain them.

And he knows their limitations as ornamentals, observing the theory that most ornamentals in cultivation are really out of their element and quickly become unhappy without attention.

Poulos was recently given a citation by the Miami Beach Taxpayers Association for the "outstanding job" he has done.

Last month he loaded up a big truck with Florida plants and went up to the National Capital Flower show to stage an exhibit. His exhibit naturally took first prize.

Poulos, his wife and small daughter live in Miami.

No, he doesn't have a garden himself. And a good thing. His preoccupation with his Miami Beach job gives him no time to work at home.

Your Garden Guide

Now's the Time To...

April 5, 1959

ALL-FLORIDA
On The Farm--
In The Garden
Registered in U.S. Patent Office

CITRUS — Go over trees and remove all dead wood from them, even the smallest dead twigs. All suckers, or watersprouts, also should be removed. (These are rank growths that spring from the base of the trunk.) Where large branches are removed, paint the pruning wound with a pruning paint.

LAWNS—Now is a good time to replant lawns that need it, renovating the soil and reseeding or resprigging.

GROUND COVERS—Now is a good time to plant new beds and to renovate old ones.

REPLANTING — Root prune shrubs, palms and trees which you must transplant. The idea is to develop a ball of roots to move along with your plant at the time of transplanting. Most trees can be transplanted safely about two months after root-pruning.

WEEDY LAWNS — Regular mowing is one of the best ways to keep weeds under control.

BULBS — This is a good time to plant a few gladiolus, but one must be prepared to spray weekly with a combination of insecticide-fungicide in order to produce topnotch plants as warm weather arrives.

ANNUALS — This is a good time to plant both marigolds and zinnias. A great many varieties of these plants are now on the market. In fact there are so many varieties of these from one another that when they are planted side by side an experienced gardener would think they are different species.

YOUNG TREES—Now is the time to begin pushing shrubs and trees you wish to increase in size during the months ahead. Fertilizing can be done monthly. But rotate with sheep manure one month and with regular garden fertilizer the next month. This will provide your plants with the nutrients they require and at the same time help to build up the organic matter in the soil.

PRUNING—Spring is the time to begin training shrubs or trees in the form desired. Greedy new growth on vigorous shrubs should be headed back, and heavy branching should be encouraged. To produce good shrubs the gardener must not be reluctant to cut back branches that are too long. Trees on the other hand must be trained to take the form of a tree. A single vigorous lead growth is desirable. If it is weak, tie it to a stake in order to get the desired form and branching.

Planting Calendar

VEGETABLES — Collards, cucumbers, mustard, squash, turnips.

ANNUALS — Alyssum, balsam, celosia (cockscomb), cosmos, globe aramanth, marigold, morning glory, petunia, salvia, zinnia.

BULBS — Amaryllis, caladium, eucharis, gladiolus, gloriosa lily.

The Inquiring Gardener

Readers with queries should include a self-addressed stamped envelope. Limit queries to two or three. Complete specimens are required for idntification, including a twig with foilage and flowers or fruit.

QUESTION—Two years ago we planted a rubber tree near our house. I believe it is called fikus Benjamin. It was a small thing when we planted it. Now it is pushing up toward the eaves. Is this a big tree?

We planted the fikus after a friend said she had used it as a hedge for years. But a neighbor said it makes a huge tree and that it will strangle our house. Who's right?—Mrs. W.L.P., Miami.

ANSWER — You probably refer to the common shade tree, Ficus benjamina, sometimes called the "weeping fig." It does make a very large tree. Your friend who uses it as a hedge keeps it pruned. But if not kept pruned this tree becomes enormous in size and would eventually dwarf your house.

QUESTION—I planted an avocado seed in water and it has grown into a plant 12 inches tall. Can I take it out of the water and plant it out in the yard? How can I do this?—Mrs. A. Sheridan, Miami.

ANSWER—Carefully transplant your water-grown plant to a container of soil. After it has established itself, let it harden up in full sun for a week or so before planting in a permanent location in the ground.

QUESTION—What is a slug? You're always mentioning them in your section, but you don't explain what they are. All of these things are confusing to me, who am new at gardening. When you mention slugs, mineral sprays and things like that, please explain the meaning of these terms for us.—Mrs. H. H. C., Coral Gables.

ANSWER—You raise a good point. We do try to explain these things from time to time; but we just can't give a course in elementary gardening every Sunday.

We have articles from time to time for newcomers, in which we try to introduce them to tropical gardening and to gardening terms.

To answer your question, a slug is a kind of snail without a shell. It is a night feeder, and lives on plants. Their slimy trails are often seen on walks and driveways where they have crawled during the night.

During the day they hide in shady places, especially were there is lots of moisture.

Slugs can be killed by spreading a bait containing metaldehyde in the plant beds where they are active.

QUESTION—Please tell me what might be eating my ground cover, zebrina. I used slug bait but the leaves are still disappearing from my plants. Yet I never see anything. What can it be? Do you think that the slugs are getting resistant to the bait?—Mrs. Claire Crane, Fort Lauderdale.

ANSWER—I would guess that night-feeding caterpillars are eating your zebrina. Spray with DDT, lindane or lead arsenate.

QUESTION—How can I get rid of a wasp nest SAFELY?—Mrs. M. Birchansky, Miami.

ANSWER—Tie a small rag on the end of a long pole, soak it with kerosene or lighter fluid and touch with a match. Pass the flame under the nest, just long enough to singe the wings of the wasps.

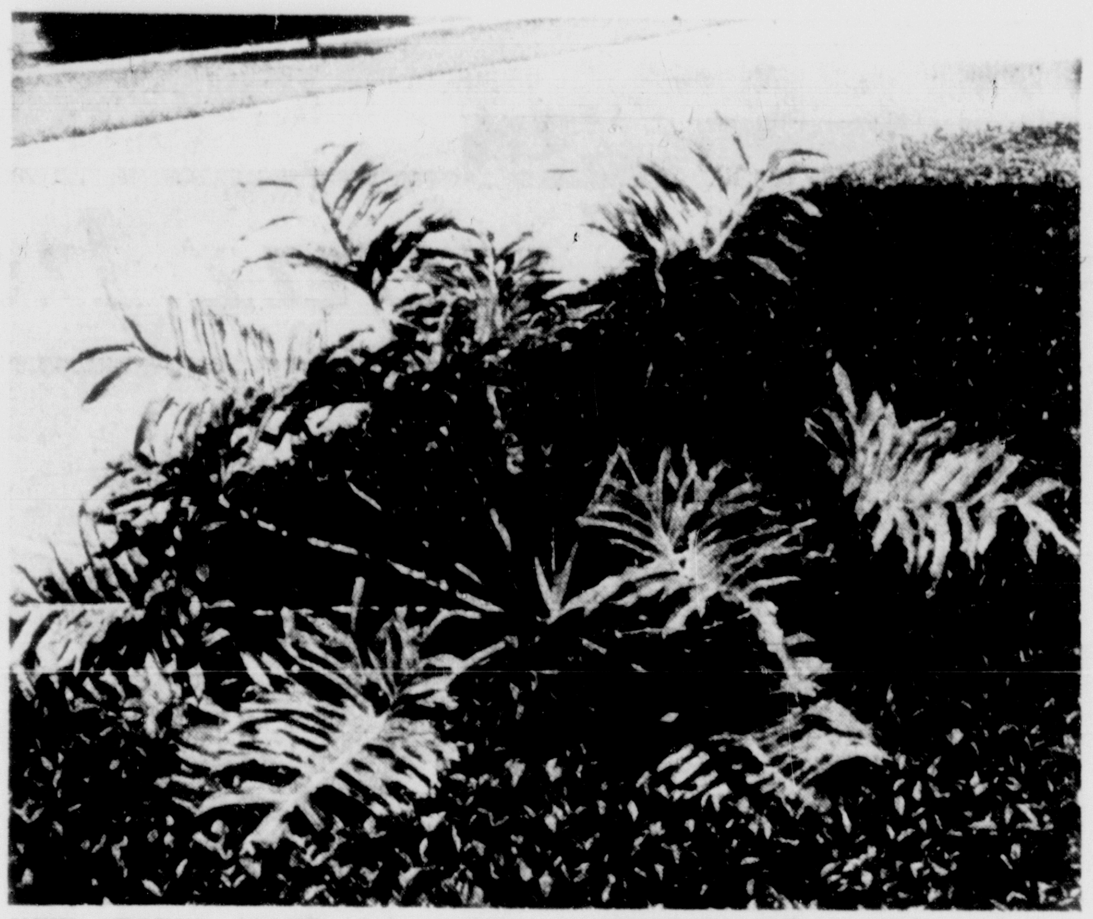
The wasps will fall to the ground, where they can be killed, and you can then remove the nest. But I don't guarantee this to be a SAFE method. You might get stung, or you might burn your house down if the wasp nest happens to be in a cob-webby loft or where the flame might ignite papers or debris.

You're on your own here. So be careful.

QUESTION — A weed my neighbors say is dichondra or dollar grass is trying to take over my lawn. Is this objectionable? Will it take over and kill the grass? If it is better than the grass I would prefer to kill the grass and let the dichondra or dollar grass cover the yard. — Mrs. K. C. Roberts, Miami.

ANSWER — The specimen you sent in is not dichondra but a wild, creeping plant of the wet flatwoods. It probably would be just as good a ground cover as dichondra, which it resembles but has larger leaves.

I would not recommend trying to kill the grass especially to encourage this plant. It will do all right by itself, so long as the soil is moist. Growth is more rapid at this time of year, it seems, than in other times.



NEW GROUND COVER of increasing popularity in South Florida is "blood leaf," a small plant with deep red or copper foliage. It is sold by nurserymen under the name of Iresine lindenii and also by its correct name, Alternanthera versicolor. Its foliage makes a sharp contrast with that of the arborescent philodendron shown here, at Alton Rd. and 21st St., Miami Beach. The plant, a native of Brazil, is easily propagated from cuttings.

Flower Show Opening Friday

South Florida's "greatest show of the year" — the Metropolitan Miami Flower Show — will open Friday for a four-day run.

Some 3,000 members from 62 garden clubs, plus the staffs and equipment of seven parks departments, will work all this week to transform the two and one-fourth acre auditorium into a colorful flower garden.

Opening time will be at 4:30 a.m. Friday. This year's opening ceremony will be short, and the public will be admitted immediately after the ribbon cutting.

The show will open at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and will close at 10 p.m. each day.

There will be an admission charge.

A near-record cold winter last year caused postponement of the show. So the women are doubling their efforts to draw people to this year's show. In recent years attendance has passed the 20,000 mark.

The Miami Beach parks department is coordinator of this year's show. Miami, Coral Gables and Dade County parks departments will put on exhibits. And three additional communities will be represented for the first time, Hialeah, Miami Springs and North Miami.

Landscape Architect Jonathan Seymour is the show's designer.

The exhibits have been planned for their educational value as well as being striking displays of foliage and flowers.

"Home owners will most certainly get many ideas that they can use in their own gardens," said Mrs. Frank Nichols, show president. "Our people have been working on this show for two years. It should be the best that we have ever put on."

Displays will include individual garden projects by garden clubs, arrangements, horticultural specimens, junior garden work, conservation exhibits, and commercial displays showing garden equipment and landscape material obtainable in local nurseries.

VC-13 Effective On Chinch

The insecticide VC-13 is giving satisfactory control of chinch bugs, in tests conducted in the Miami area by Dr. S. H. Kerr, entomologist of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Gainesville.

Parathion continued to give the best control, but this very poisonous material is not recommended for use by the home owner. Furthermore, two applications are required.

Diazinon also gave good results, but tests confirmed recommendations that two applications are required, and that the second application must follow the first in 10 days to two weeks.

Only one application of VC-13 was needed for good control.

Dr. Kerr's tests showed that DDT appears to have lost much of its effectiveness, and that the strength of the solution must be greatly increased to get good control.

Thus it would appear that the two chemicals, VC-13 and diazinon, take precedence over all other compounds for chinch bug control by the home owner.

VC-13 came out originally to be used for the control of nematodes.

But tests showed it also killed chinch bugs, and thus it became so widely used that the manufacture of the material had to be stepped up.

One thing Dr. Kerr emphasizes is thoroughness of application.

Secret of Beach Plantings Covers Soil, Maintenance

YOU, TOO, CAN GROW the colorful things that thrive in the parkways at Miami Beach.

The secret is to plant masses of ground covers, annuals and such bulb plants as caladiums and Easter lilies, in good soil and keep them well maintained.

Quite a number of ground covers can be grown which have colorful foliage all year.

These include purple queen, zebrina, rhoeo (oyster plant), blood leaf (Alternanthera versicolor), and even orchids (Epidendrun radicans).

Not too many annuals are suitable for ground cover effect in Florida because they are not long lasting here. But an exception is the firey salvia, which remains in bloom for several weeks. Alyssum is another, but at Miami Beach it is used only as a border.

Wedelia is one of the most vigorous and rugged ground covers, and it produces more orange or yellow flowers in late spring and summer than annuals do in Florida.

Caladiums last for several months. At Miami Beach they planted for winter and early spring color. (In summer the caladium requires some shade to do its best.)

Easter lilies are expensive for most folks to grow. At Miami Beach they are grown in containers and are planted in beds when they begin to bloom.

* * *

IN SEMI-DRY AREAS, where the soil is well drained, the kalanchoes make excellent ground covers.

They are interesting because of the texture of their fleshy leaves, and some of them produce colorful bloom. Ornamental aloes also go well with the kalanchoes.

Another plant that does well in Miami Beach parkways and which you also can grow is the dracaena. These come in many varieties some of them amazingly colorful.

Nurserymen have been getting in a number of varieties from Hawaii that have a lot of promise here.

The dracaena does well in full sun, provided it is planted in good soil and receives ample fertilizer and moisture. But it may do best for most folks in part shade, especially if there is any likelihood that the plants may go neglected at times.

* * *

BUT SUITABLE SOIL is necessary to grow most plants well. The soil should have plenty of humus in it, both plant and animal matter. If you have no compost, use peat moss and sheep or cow manure in liberal quantities.

And it must be remembered that good soil doesn't last long in Florida.

It must be renewed from time to time. That means plant beds must be "dug up" and renovated, every two years for many plants.

WHEN MRS. BUD (RUTH) EDGERTON, 250 Cranwood Drive, Key Biscayne, sat down and wrote a letter about how her house was being turned into a home-grown Seaquarium, she had no idea that she would burst into print as a full-fledged feature writer, byline and all (page 24).

MRS. EDGERTON

This unexpected excursion into journalism was simply the latest in a series of chain reactions that started when her eldest daughter won two guppies at a church carnival. Unfortunately, the guppies were of opposite sexes.

Being the mother of five children can make life pretty confusing at times, says Mrs. Edgeton, but it's as nothing compared to being foster mother to a couple of hundred guppies.

SPORTS EDITOR Jimmy Burns, recently returned from a look-see at the various spring training camps of major league teams in Florida, takes a trip down baseball's memory lane on page 8. He recalls how a snowstorm in Arkansas was responsible for Florida becoming baseball's spring training headquarters. This spring of 1959 was not the happiest time in Florida baseball annals. Rain that just wouldn't stop ruffled tempers and wrecked exhibition game schedules. But, like they always say in baseball, next year will be different.

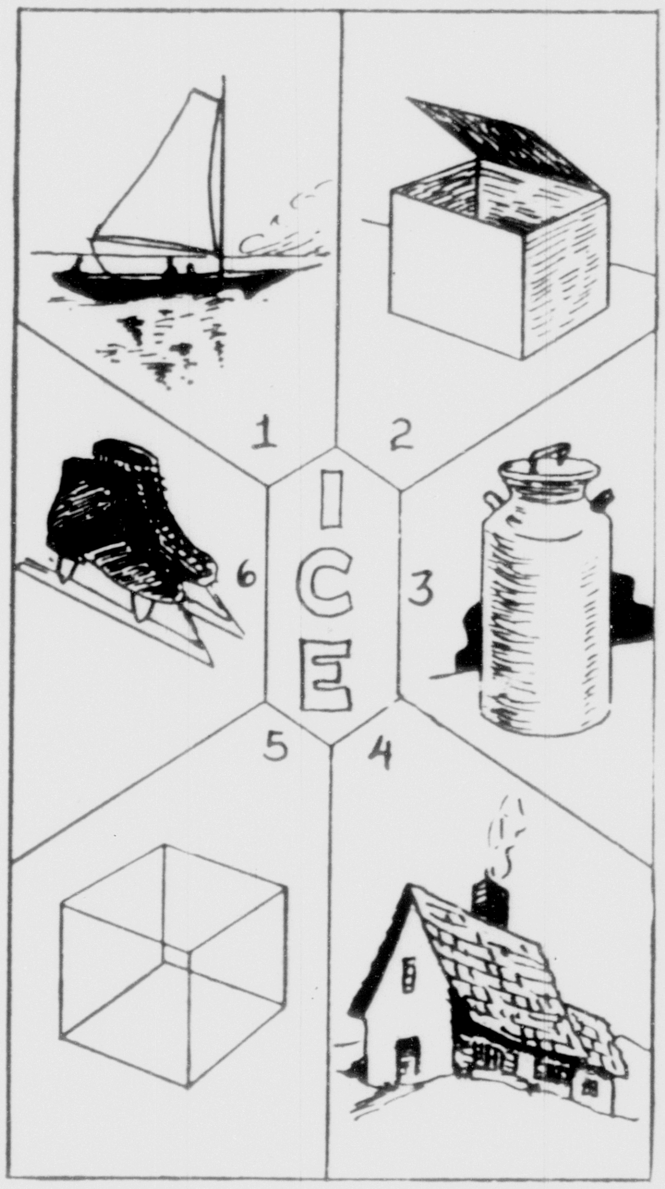
Prize Offers Chance For You to Try Aim



THIS IS AN 'ICY' PUZZLE
. . . tell what objects are

By Cappy Dick

BOYS AND GIRLS! Here's a new Cappy Dick prize for you to win!

It's a catapult target flyer. The outfit includes a cardboard launching platform, a rubber-nosed plane and a powerful rubber band which will send the little ship zinging forward to any target you select. If your aim is good, the ship will stick to its target after striking.

Catapult target flyers will be awarded to 10 boys or girls who send in one of the most neatly prepared correct solutions to the puzzle in the above picture.

This is an "ice" puzzle. Surrounding word "ice" at the center of the picture are six objects. Each has a name which includes the word "ice." Can you tell what the objects are?

As you decide what each one is, print its name on your contest entry after clipping out the picture and pasting it on a sheet of paper. For example, one of the objects is a can such as farmers use for hauling cream. In this case, the correct word is "ice cream." Print that in your list of five other "ice" objects.

When the list has been completed to your satisfaction, print your name, age and address on the paper. If you wish to decorate your entry with paints, crayons or pencil to make it more attractive, you may do so.

Finally, address your entry to Cappy Dick at The Miami Herald, Box 630, and mail it before midnight of day after tomorrow.

The contest judges will carefully examine all entries to find the 10 correct ones most neatly prepared. The catapult target flyers will be awarded to the boys and girls who sent those 10. Names and addresses of the winners will be published here and their prizes will be sent to their homes by mail.

Night-Blooming Art Show

The Old, Old Art Of Glass Blowing Brought Up to Date With 25,000 Volts Of Electricity

NEON ARTIST DAVE ALBERT'S STUDIO LOOKS MORE LIKE LABORATORY

. . . as he transforms glass, gas, heat and electricity into neon signs

HIGH-VOLTAGE art is the business of Dave Albert.

He is an artist who creates beauty—not with pallet, brush and paints—but with 25,000 volts of electricity, heat, gas and glass.

When finished, his works of art do not retire demurely to the walls of a museum. They flash from the rooftops, turning Miami after dark into a blaze of color.

Albert makes neon signs.

Everyone see his work but few know how it's done. The craft of designing in neon lighting is similar to the ancient art of glass blowing except more complicated, Albert explains. "You have to be a combination artist, electrician, and if you don't know much about science you soon learn."

* * *

MANY OF the men who work at this modernized glass blowing are just as dedicated as the famous old world artisans, he says. A case in point is one of his fellow workers at Claude Neon Company, John Kastl, whose family were glass blowers in Germany for generations back.

Few people realize, says Albert, that neon lighting is not really very new. It dates back to 1910 and the experiments of French scientist Georges Claude.

Albert is himself a neon pioneer, having been in the field since 1914.

"Among the other little known facts of the craft is that the name 'neon' is really a misnomer. Neon gas is really red," he explains, "but we work with 45 colors that range from snow white to surprise pink. All of them are created from various combinations of two kinds of gas —neon and number 10 blue gas."

* * *

"TODAY WE CAN do almost anything in neon," Albert says proudly, "but this was not so back in the old days."

He remembers 1922, for instance. "We had just started making neon signs for beauty parlors. We had no coils to light with so we used spark coils from a Model-T Ford."

Watching Albert at work in his "studio" is fascinating. His "pallet" is a long workbench equipped with electric wires, propane gas burners and sealed bottles of air.

Neon designs all begin with four-foot lengths of clear glass tubing. Here's how Albert explains the process.

"First we must heat the glass and pump all the air out of the tube with an electric vacuum pump."

He pushed a button and 25,000 volts of electricity began pulsating.

"You have to be careful here" he says casually, "you could get killed if you touched this wire."

After air is pumped out he opens the stop cock on a bottle of gas and gas flows into the tube.

As he works on his design, Albert constantly blows through rubber tubing, "to keep the glass from getting so hot it collapses."

Once the proper gas is in the tube, the designing of certain shapes can begin. He places the glass tube over propane burners—which can heat up to 800-degree fahrenheit.

Slowly the tubing begins to soften, looking like an enormous piece of taffy candy. Then, with the deftness of long experience, Albert twists and turns the glass into the desired shape—blowing air constantly as he works.

"We have only about eight seconds before the glass hardens," he said, "so we have to work fast."

Strangely, all neon lights (except gold) look white until electricity is applied, then the color appears. Color is created by the various elements introduced into the tubing.

For example, gold is made by filling amber tubing with blue gas and mercury, Albert explains.

He and his fellow workers at Claude Neon have made everything from an enormous Santa Claus to a rotating pig amidst roaring "flames" for a restaurant sign.

"Biggest" job to date is the recently completed sign for Miami's new First National Bank Building, the largest neon sign in South Florida. Its letters are eight feet high and it required over two months for construction and installation.

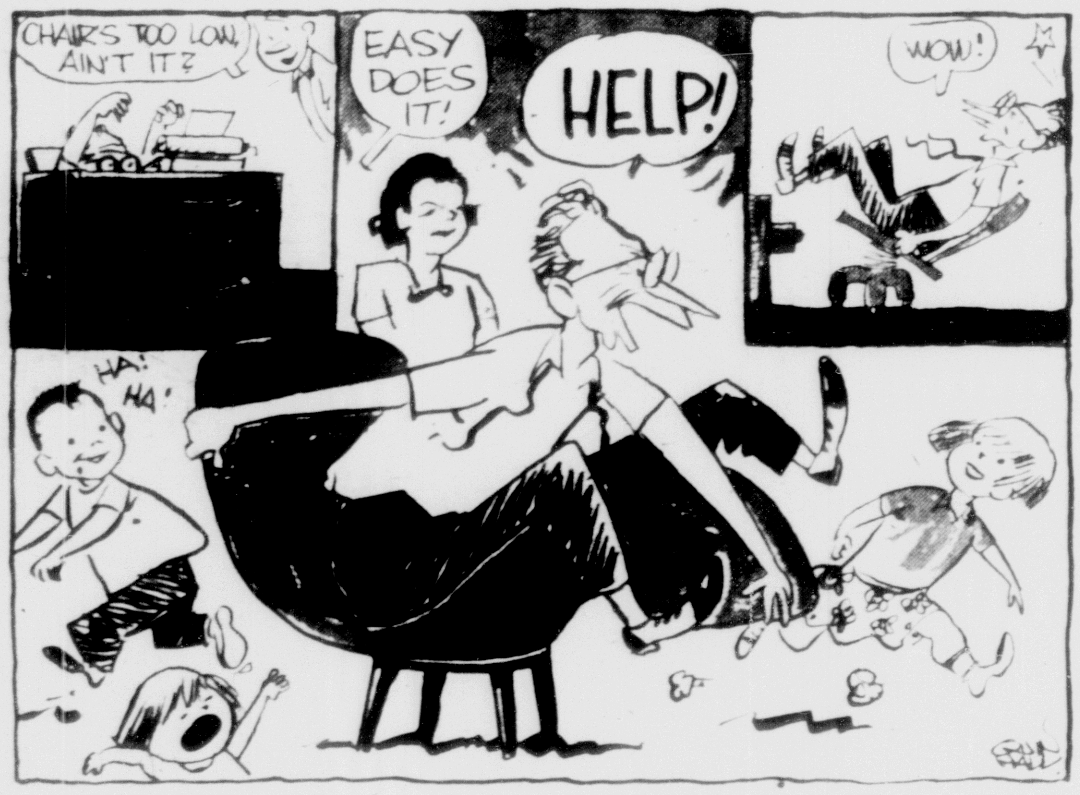
Chairs That Cheer--and Some That Don't

By Lawrence Thompson



CHAIRS TOO LOW, AIN'T IT?
EASY DOES IT!
HELP!
WOW!
HA! HA!

GERTRUDE STEIN could never have written a poem about a chair, because "A chair is a chair is a chair" would not be right at all.

A chair has individuality and personality. There are good chairs and bad chairs, stiff chairs and soft chairs, comfortable chairs and impossible chairs.

In our office at The Herald we have standard newspaper chairs, which are about the most practical working chairs known to man. They are set at the right height, and have springs in the back so you can lean back and relax as you labor.

But we have three black sheep.

* * *

ONE OF THESE has such weak springs that when you lean back it doesn't give gently, it collapses. You may think you are going to lean back just enough so you can read your story through your bi-focals, but you end up with the back of your noggin on the floor.

Another is a rigid chair. It has no springs in the back. For some reason, this makes it impossible to think. You feel as if you are sitting on a throne or in an electric chair. You have to sit perfectly upright, which may be good for your posture but is disastrous to your prose.

* * *

AND THE WORST OF ALL is the chair with the low seat.

This one looks like all the others. But apparently it was custom made for a midget. Anyhow, the seat is 6 to 10 inches lower than the rest.

You don't realize when you have this chair that it is a tricky one. You sit down in it as you would any other chair. The only trouble is that you don't hit bottom when you should. You keep on going. By then, of course, you have no control over your descent, no more than you would if you changed your mind on the fifth floor after jumping off the top of a 10-story building.

As you are going down, you have the distressing feeling that some jokester pulled the chair out from under you. This isn't the case, because eventually, just as you are sure you should be hitting the floor, you hit the seat.

You do this with a dull thud and with a complete lack of dignity. You are afraid that you broke a vertebrae, but you are too mad at the chair to be concerned about your health.

* * *

I PREDICT that one of these days, somebody who has just made a descent into this low-level chair is going to break it into splinters, right in the city room. I hope I'm around to see it, so I can cheer.

But except for those three mavericks, our office chairs are very satisfactory, designed for work and comfort.

This is not true of many types of chairs.

* * *

MY IDEA of solid comfort is an overstuffed, leather chair, like my father used to have in our front room. The rest of us respected that chair and it was only when both parents were gone that we dared to try out its cavernous, rich-smelling luxury. When you sat in that chair, you sank down deep, and it had arm rests on it big enough for a bushel basket.

In contrast to this is the chair with straight back and spindly legs, found in too many living rooms. You can sit on these, but you might as well squat on air for all the good it does you. You can't lean back, and you sit as straight-backed as the chair itself, and you're glad when it's time to go home.

* * *

THEN, OF COURSE, there are these so-called contour chairs which are supposed to be built for relaxation.

In these you sink way down at the bottom, but your legs are elevated in front of you. Once you get in one of these, you are as helpless as if you had sat in a creek bottom of quicksand.

You can't get out of it, except by kicking your legs around like an upside-down turtle, waving your arms like an acrobat on a high wire, and great heaving and grunting. You can relax better by standing on your head.

There are other chairs, such as the milking stools which can be right comfortable if you've been harvesting all day, and the bus benches which are softer than an easy chair if you've been on your feet for hours. A chair, as I said, is an individual and no subject for Miss Stein's stutterings.

RED CROSS PHARMACY

At last—an all-family skin cream! Now one activated skin cream performs all these modern miracles. Makes hands look whiter, softer, younger, causes outward pimples, acne and enlarged pores to disappear; fades age marks and other weathered blemishes, guards skin against infection for hours at a time.

I am excited about a "good looks" cream for the whole family

Fades Horrid Age Spots*

*Weathered brown spots on the surface of your hands and face tell the world you're getting old, perhaps before you really are. Fade them out with new ESOTERICA, the new medicated cream that breaks up masses of pigment under the skin to make it look white, smooth and young again. Younger folks may use ESOTERICA to retard age signs indefinitely.

Checks Enlarged Pores

Open, enlarged pores may cause your complexion to look burlappy, rough and unclean. Regular use of ESOTERICA helps shrink the opening to smooth out recesses. Here's a tip for men: Use ESOTERICA after shaving—stops razor-burn, soothes, refreshes. Its delicate fragrance soon disappears, yet, the beneficial result is long-lasting because ESOTERICA works under the skin.

Clears up Acne* and Blackheads

Stubborn 'teen age pimples and black heads respond fast. ESOTERICA the medicated cream clears up skin troubles where other creams have failed. *No longer need you suffer the embarrassment and loneliness caused by unsightly blemishes. Apply ESOTERICA at night—tomorrow, your mirror will reveal a clearer, brighter and smoother skin. It's "date bait." It's not a cover-up. It penetrates deep to work from

By Adrian Mitchum

I was utterly amazed the other day when I reviewed the latest reports about the dramatic and almost unbelievable results from a new and different kind of skin cream. According to these reports it seemed almost "like magic" the way it worked. Reports were so glowing, I can only report to you what I heard.

Ugly weathered brown spots, freckles and other darkened areas on the surface of the skin, caused by weather or neglect seemed to lighten before your very eyes. And, I'm told that in just a few days, they've faded away—almost completely.

Not only did this wonderful skin cream called Esoterica cause unwanted darkened spots to fade, but skin became softer, lighter and regained its moist, dew-like texture.

Even tiny wrinkles and crow's feet, so often tell-tale signs of approaching age, quickly began to fill out and become unnoticeable. Women of all ages reported wonderful results.

One lady reported, her husband had been bothered with a complexion potted with enlarged pores, redness—so often the first sign of age in a man's skin—skin that seemed to look muddy and unwashed. She urged him to try ESOTERICA and presto—in just two days his skin cleared—pores regained their natural size.

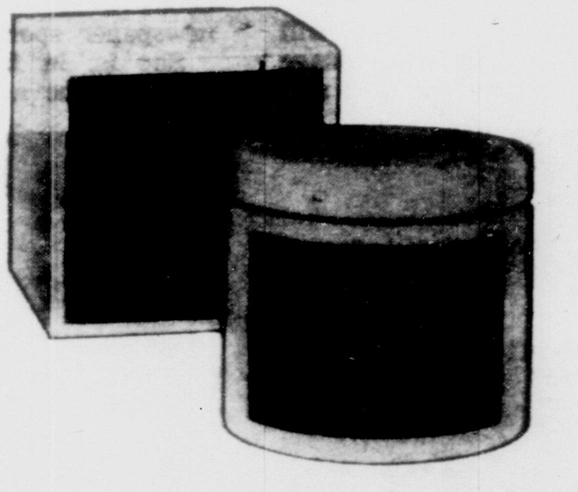
And a cosmetic salesgirl showed me the result of a personal test she had completed. For one week she applied ESOTERICA on one hand—on the other—ordinary hand cream. Today she showed me the result. The hand on which she had applied ESOTERICA was soft, white, smooth—looked 10 years younger than the other hand on which she had used ordinary cream.

And, another lady reported "black heads and ordinary clogged pores, horrid outward pimples that so often result from surface acne, which trouble 'teen agers, quickly responded to ESOTERICA. The results were so exciting on my youngsters, I told my friends about it—now they're all boosters for ESOTERICA."

And still another matronly lady of 50 reported, "I had several large brown spots and many small ones on my hands and arms. After a few days of ESOTERICA use, they are so faded you have to use a magnifying glass

Truly Amazing Results

No one, yet, has discovered all the possible uses for ESOTERICA. Every day a new use is revealed which is added to the ever-growing list of benefits. No wonder, for ESOTERICA is produced by a trustworthy 38-year-old laboratory devoted to helping clear skin and complexions through topical application of science's most advanced "wonder drug." ESOTERICA penetrates to work from inside out and leaves skin clear, smooth and radiantly soft. It's fragrant, greaseless—economical, too. For best results, use it as an over-night cream and as a powder foundation. On sale in our cosmetic department.



New ESOTERICA IS AN ALL-PURPOSE CREAM FOR EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY. Works equally well on face, neck, hands and arms, Brings wonderful results in 5 days or your money back on request. Only $2 plus tax. Economy size. $4!

The only product of it's kind in the world!

OUR 8th YEAR EXCLUSIVE MOTALOY SALES

NO TOOLS TO BUY
NO WORK TO DO

MOTALOY'S MODERN SCIENTIFIC ACTION
Dissolves carbon—Raises compression
Stops costly oil burning—Increases mileage
Stops piston slap—A cooler smoother motor
With Motaloy regular gas is recommended

Drop 4 Motaloy tabs in gas tank. While you drive, the flash-fire and intense heat create an action with Motaloy that first reduces hard carbon deposits then goes to work building-up and filling-in worn, pitted, scratched surfaces, actually tinplating worn pistons, rings, valves and cylinder walls. Motaloy continues this replating for the life of the motor.

Sold on money back guarantee!

NOTARIZED AFFIDAVIT AUTHENTIC EXCERPTS FROM FILES MOTALOY MAIL ORDER DEP'T — —PROOF OF MOTALOY'S AMAZING ACTION

"The following compression test was made on my personal car.

Cyl.	1	2	3	4	5	6
Before	80	81	85	75	92	88
After	122	124	118	115	128	121

This second compression reading was taken one month after placing the pellets in the tank, or after 701 miles of driving."

"I enjoyed the Motaloy in my old Chrysler, now I want (4) tablets for my Buick. I have all the Doctors, patients and nurses using Motaloy — It's great."

"Please send me your complete Motaloy ring and valve job. I have used it once and got good results, would like to try on another car."

"I would like a package of Motaloy for my new car. I have used them before and liked the results very much. I bought a new car this week and would like to start using them as soon as possible."

"Since I dropped the four little Motaloy Tabs in my gas tank, I have had much smoother engine performance, more gas mileage and less oil consumption. I am certainly pleased with the results, which I can attribute only to Motaloy."

"A mechanic who said before using Motaloy that it couldn't be done was more surprised than I after he got behind the wheel. He accused me of installing a new motor and had to raise the hood to satisfy himself. Here's what Motaloy did to my De Soto. It stopped the oil pumping, raised the compression, am using less gas and no piston slap noise, and I also note that old buggy starts at the first turn of the starter which is something it hasn't done for ages."

"Incidentally, several years ago I bought some Motaloy Tabs from you and used them in a Packard car that I had. I ran this car a total of 86,000 miles before I bought my present car and never needed any motor work and until the day I sold it I never needed any additional oil between oil changes."

"After 700 miles I had to have my carburetor adjusted on my 8 cyl. Dodge, as the mixture was too rich. It now has gone 350 miles since I dropped the Tabs in and it only requires 1 pint of oil, before I needed a quart for 350 miles."

"I, the undersigned, have put four Tabs of Motaloy into my Hudson about three weeks ago. I had 15,000 miles on my car at that time. After a very short while of driving, I have noticed considerably better pick up and absence of "Ping" when I use regular gas. I have also noticed a decrease in gas and oil consumption, all of which satisfies me."

"Motaloy worked fine in my '53 Ford and now I want to be sure to get my '58 Ford off to the right start."

"Having purchased Motaloy tablets for my past 2 new cars which have given satisfactory results using Motaloy, I wish to send some to my son who has just purchased a new car."

"As you know, and your records will show, I purchased Motaloy from you just about two years ago for my four-year-old Nash that was loaded with carbon and badly in need of a valve job. I never did get that valve job; and, in fact, I have not had any motor expense since using Motaloy. Besides taking care of the carbon situation in my car, Motaloy also gave my motor much more pep than it ever had before, that it really seemed fantastic."

"I tried Motaloy in Chevrolet Pickup. It had 61,000 miles and was using 1 qt. oil 300 miles, now after 64,000 miles I can drive 1,000 miles without adding oil. Many thanks to your product."

"I have used your Motaloy in my last three cars and know it is good."

"Please send me a set of Motaloy tablets. I used them successfully in my last car and anticipate the same results with my present car."

"Have used your product six years ago and was satisfied with results."

"I am a cab owner and driver. My car, a Dodge, was using 2 quarts of oil weekly. Two weeks after putting Motaloy tabs in am now using only 1 quart per week. My gas mileage has gained 1½ miles per gal.!"

"I used Motaloy on a Cadillac, drove it 72,000 miles and it still runs like a new car and used little or no Oil."

"Please send me the Motaloy Tabs for my Cadillac. I bought some for my 1952 Cadillac and my old car ran very well, in fact I bought some tabs for my son's 1953 Cadillac, you sent them to him at L.A."

"Please send me set of Motaloy Tablets, to be used in an Oldsmobile. These were brought to my attention by my brother, who has used them for 1,500 miles, before this he was adding 2 quarts of oil between oil changes. On his last trip to Jacksonville last week it used NO OIL."

● I hereby certify that the above excerpts are true and correct excerpts taken from the letters on file with Motaloy Sales.

Signed Arthur F. Lehman
4201 Ponce Blvd Coral Gables, Fla
My commission expires 4/16/62

"Two months ago I purchased your product, and I want to take this opportunity to tell you how completely satisfied I am with its results. I purchased this first because my car with 46,000 miles had commenced to use oil after about 1,000 miles, later it completely stopped oil burning; I now have 52,000 miles on my car after returning from a long trip. I went to Chesapeake Cadillac Co. and had my car checked on a dynameter and was told the engine was in excellent condition."

"On September 9, 1956, we had the compression checked on our 1954 Model International School Bus:

The readings were as follows:

Cylinder	No. 1	No. 2	No. 3	No. 4	No. 5	No. 6
	110	105	110	115	115	110

The readings taken on January 1, 1957 with the speedometer reading 26,600 showed the following:

Cylinder	No. 1	No. 2	No. 3	No. 4	No. 5	No. 6
	130	130	130	140	135	130

The motor definitely has more power and snap than before the tabs were put in."

"Please forward a package of the Motaloy Tabs. I have a new car and as they gave such good results in my previous car I feel sure they will be O.K. for the new one."

"After running a test on Motaloy in a Pontiac station wagon, we are happy to give the following report. Before using Motaloy we were having to add a quart of oil every 200 miles. After adding Motaloy this vehicle traveled 524 miles without having oil added. The gas mileage has also increased, and we are getting better performance out of the operation of this station wagon."

"I have used Motaloy for the past several years, and find it very satisfactory."

"I used Motaloy in my last auto and have just traded and would like to have it for my new one soon as possible."

"We have been using Motaloy Tabs in our cabs for some time. One set was dropped in the gas tank in 1956 and it proved to do such a good job that in June 1958 I ordered seven sets for the rest of the cabs and my Cadillac car. They are all running like motors should. Thanks to MOTALOY."

"I have a Buick which had about 40,000 miles on it at the time that I dropped the Motaloy tabs in the gas tank. The first thing that I noticed after driving several hundred miles was that my pick up was terrific. Then I began to check on the gas consumption and I am pleased to advise that I have increased my mileage by 3½ miles to the gallon."

"I have used your tablets and I do not have to have any ring job or motor work done on engine."

"Please send us by mail (2) packages of Motaloy for our 2 trucks (¾ ton pickups). We are having good results with your Motaloy in our trucks and we wouldn't be without it."

"I have just traded cars and want to get started right. I had them in my last two cars and wouldn't do without."

"Please send me four Tabs. I have used them for several years and have recommended them to several friends and they work."

"Please send me your pellets of Motaloy. I put those pellets in my last car and believe me it ran like a new motor after six years of running. Now I have purchased another car and wish to use them in this motor."

"Kindly send 2 sets Motaloy Tabs. I have used them myself with excellent results, and am getting this additional order for my children's cars."

Stable Girl for a Day

A Little Girl's Nicest Birthday

By Joy Reese Shaw

Photos by Jerry Shaw

BILLY BARRY, 4, AND STACEY LEARN HORSE SLANG

. . . watch as animal is 'hotwalked'

THE SMELL of hay and horses and leather lay lightly on the early morning air as we turned into the big back gate.

Excitement cut through the wonder of it like a jeweled knife. Twin slices shimmered in Stacey's eyes.

"Jimminy, Mom!"

It was a soft, breathless, understated exclamation from my 11-year-old daughter on her best birthday.

By the time you read this, the gay hub-bub of racing will have transferred to Gulfstream.

But Stacey's thoughts will be fastened still on backstage Hialeah, where she was stable girl for a day.

★ ★ ★

AT 11, it seems, a young girl's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of cloven feet.

Well, not so lightly with our Stacey.

At present she is saving her allowance for a trip to the Kentucky Derby. Minors aren't allowed at races, of course—but then the project may take considerable time.

Meanwhile Miss National Velvet talks horses, dreams horses, draws horses. Onto the shelves have gone the once-beloved dolls. Funny books have yielded to the newspaper sports sections.

She is, in fact, going to grow up, be a lady lawyer, own a farm and race horses.

(If she is a rich lady lawyer, she will race horses because she wants to. And if she is a poor lady lawyer, she will race horses because she needs to. I have not fully figured all this out yet, but I am not to worry at all about money for the farm—because Suzanne will chip in. Suzanne is a fifth grade friend, who is going to be a nurse and a partner in the farm venture. If she is a rich nurse . . . well, anyway, it's all settled.)

★ ★ ★

ALL OF THIS adds up to what better place in the world for a horse-loving little girl to live on her 11th birthday than in Miami, home of Hialeah and on Utopia Court in Coconut Grove, home of:

1. Bill Barry, a former horse show rider, polo player and trainer—now with Florida State Racing Commission's veterinarian division.

2. Betty Barry, his wife, a former girl jockey. Betty was one of the first exercise girls in the business to hold a license. She finished second in the girl's races at Pimlico and has galloped such famous horses as Double J, Bon Jour, Rampart and Parlo (1954's filly of the year.)

★ ★ ★

IN BLUE JEANS and Bill's boots, the trip was a lark for a lass whose chief prior acquaintance with equines has been courtesy of Walter Farley, author of the Black Stallion books. Stacey read all 10, is now stretching them to 20 with a re-reading.

The big barns and stripways between were alive with color from the red water pails to the colorful helmets of the exercise boys. Round and round they marched the gleaming horses. Great mounds of hay stood like silent sentinels and rows of saddles rested on the rails, awaiting their polish. It was like a circus in slow motion.

What a morning! Stacey met Bourbon Prince and

Ride Smoother, Stay Drier By Balancing Load in Boat

YOU WERE heading into the early morning sun which was sparkling on the waves and glistening on the bow fittings. It was a beautiful day but something was wrong. Solid spray was drenching the deck and windshield. No need to look at the tachometer to know that your outboard engine wasn't turning up top speed.

Your craft was listing badly to port and burying her bow instead of lifting to meet the seas.

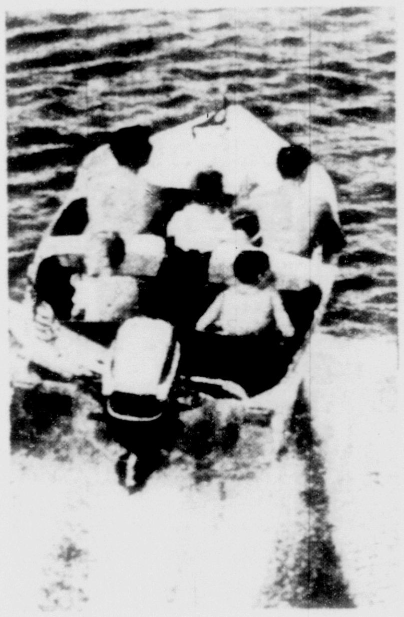
You knew why. It was Uncle George, sitting to your left. He never missed a meal in his life.

Top performance from your outboard motorboat calls for the proper planing angle at all times so that that the shape of the hull in contact with the water is exactly what the designer intended.

The problem of maintaining this ideal condition under unusual load situations resolves itself into two parts — lateral trim and fore- and aft trim.

* * *

YOU COULD correct the lateral trim somewhat by getting Uncle George to move closer to the center, but this might put him astride some of your fishing tackle or crowd you at the wheel.



WELL BALANCED

. . . 5 seated right

If someone else were along, you could have him sit to starboard aft so that two of you could balance Uncle George's weight and help bring the bow up at the same time. Or you could shift that spare gasoline can, anchor and line and other heavy items to starboard, aft.

Now if you have the lateral trim correct, but are still scooping spray with the bow, move more weight aft.

If this doesn't do the trick, a final correction on fore-and-aft trim can be made by changing the bracket angle adjustment on the outboard engine so that the propeller is farther away from the stern. When the pin is dropped into the right notch, the change in thrust will just about offset Uncle George and his avoirdupois.

The smaller the boat, the more important it is to trim ship. When a hull is thrown off her natural lines, she not only is operating inefficiently, losing speed and wasting fuel, but a certain amount of stability is lost.

The small amount of time to make proper weight and bracket angle adjustments are well worth while, even for an hour or two of boating.

. . . Stacey picks up first-hand experience

Idun, champion filly of '58. She fed sugar to Gray Phantom and rubbed noses with Venomous, who belied the name and became her favorite promptly.

She watched them hot-walk First Landing, saw Verdie get a pedicure, romped with Lady and Wendy, shaggy mascots for the Cain Hoy Stables.

* * *

THEN, best of all, she and little Billy Barry, 4, got a chance for first-hand horse talk at the knee of the dean of trainers himself—84-year-old Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons of Wheatley Stables.

The grand old sage of Sheepshead Bay was bent with arthritis but quick and alert.

I did not hear the conversation. Perhaps Mr. Fitz recalled it was at 11 that the horsebug bit him, too.

Perhaps he told how he trained Nashua, or how he's saddled six Derby winners more than any trainer in America — or how he, with Eddie Arcaro, was added to the turf's Hall of Fame last year . . . or maybe he told with chagrin about the time he sold a horse named Seabiscuit for $8,000.

But more likely he just talked about horses period—the heart and courage of them.

* * *

HOW MUCH can a girl learn in one birthday? A million things.

That race horses: Get tender, scrupulous care with legs rubbed and bandaged for protection after each work-out . . . love to make noise often banging their buckets just for the fun of it . . . look fuzzy when they come from the North but are clipped here to a cool, satiny finish . . . are led from the left or "near" side . . . love smaller animals and pets . . . need vegetables for health, just like boys and girls, and are fed carrots and greens as well as oats . . . are "hot-walked" to reduce body temperature gradually after heavy effort.

That the word groom comes from guinea because grooms were once paid a guinea in England . . . that Idun was named for a Norwegian Goddess and Venomous once won a $110,000 purse.

One hundred ten thousand dollars.

What was that, dear, about that farm and lady lawyer bit?

WEATHERTRON
ALL-ELECTRIC HEAT PUMP

COOLS
WITHOUT WATER HEATS
WITHOUT FLAME

The Age of All-Electric Cooling, Heating Is Here!

Now General Electric introduces a new era of better living! The age of the Weathertron All-Electric Heat Pump—cools without water and heats without flame!

It's an era of new SAFETY! You keep warm all winter without flame or flammable fuels in the house. It's an era of new CLEANLINESS! Even the cleanest fuels are less clean than no fuels—and the Weathertron burns no fuel. It's an era of unheard-of CONVENIENCE! You set the thermostat once—Weathertron All-Electric Heat Pump does the rest automatically, all year 'round.

An entirely new concept of home heating and cooling produced the wonderful Weathertron. This all-electric heat pump automatically extracts heat from the outside air—pumps it into your home—circulates it via ducts throughout the house during the winter. In summer, the Weathertron automatically reverses itself and pumps heat out of your home. Your indoor temperature can remain the same throughout the entire year.

The cost? You can own a Weathertron All-Electric Heat Pump for about the same cost as a conventional furnace-cooling unit combination. And your investment is protected by General Electric's famous warranty.

Safest Method of Heating and Cooling Ever!

The all-electric Weathertron eliminates the danger of flammable fuels—it burns none! Eliminates the need for fuel storage, gas pipes and meters. It's the safest method of heating and cooling ever devised. And since the Weathertron uses no water for cooling, it eliminates the need for a cooling tower, buried pipes or well. Installation of the Weathertron All-Electric Heat Pump greatly increases the value of your property, too. You can station your Weathertron in the basement, attic, utility room, closet—almost anywhere.

CLEANLINESS
such as you've never known

Think of the cleanliness of all-electric Weathertron heating and cooling. No soot, no grime, no odors. Even the cleanest fuels are less clean than no fuel—and a Weathertron burns no fuel. You will discover that the wonderful Weathertron means far less housework—substantial savings in cleaning bills.

12 Full Months of Spring Every Year

No matter what the thermometer reads outside, your indoor temperature will be controlled all year long by a simple thermostat setting. When winter's icy winds are blowing—or the sultry summer sun is beating down—you can depend on the Weathertron All-Electric Heat Pump to keep your home at an even comfortable temperature. For this triumph of General Electric engineering is designed to keep the breath of spring in your home—12 months a year. Ideal for stores, offices and factories too!

You Can Install Outboard Controls

By John Bohannan

YOU'RE ANXIOUS to hook up the remote controls for throttle and reverse gear on that outboard engine and boat and we don't blame you. Steering from a forward position is more fun, and it helps shift the weight for better planing balance.

Control cables come already made up in lengths from about five to 20 feet. How long should yours be?

After attaching the lever box in a convenient position, use a steel tape to measure down the gunwale to the quarter, then across to the center of the transom. This should give you the correct length for the gear shift cable for a single-engine installation.

Add another foot to the measure for the length of the throttle cable.

Where the job calls for twin engines, use the same method of measuring down the side and across the transom, but instead of measuring to the center of the boat, measure to the center line of the point where each engine will be clamped into position. This will give you the lengths for the two reverse gear cables. Then add an extra foot for each throttle cable.

FIRST STEP
. . . mount controls

* * *

IN EVERY CASE, and particularly with the new controls in which throttle and shift functions are combined in a single lever, manufacturer's instructions should be followed carefully. Have your dealer check your measurements before ordering cables if he doesn't have your lengths in stock.

The cables may be supported out of the way beneath the gunwales with small strap fittings, but should be left loose at the stern to avoid binding.

Recently a skipper had ordered his cables too long, and had left big loops in them at the stern. The controls were hard to move because of the added friction. When he turned them back to the dealer and obtained the proper lengths, operation became smooth and easy.

If your engine has a twist grip throttle control, remove the tension spring from the handle. Otherwise the remote lever will pull hard.

Check your controls before starting the engine to make sure that they are operating properly throughout the steering range of engine rotation and that all clamping screws are secure.

Follow the Basic Steps To Paint Plywood Boat

PROPER and adequate painting of the popular plywood boat is the boat owner's best guarantee of many added months of fun and service afloat.

The life expectancy of any recreational craft is directly proportional to the care and maintenance of the hull.

That's why owners of plywood boats should follow these basic suggestions for the proper painting of their craft:

First, dealing with above-waterline surfaces, thoroughly sand the areas to be painted.

Dust and wipe with a cloth moistened with a brushing liquid to remove all loose particles.

Check the area carefully for scratches, abrasions and dents, filling them with surface putty. Also, putty-up all screw holes.

Apply the one coat of high-grade wood sealer, let dry and sand lightly.

* * *

IF YOU DESIRE a particulaly smooth finish, apply one coat of brush cement and sand smoothly.

Then apply one coat of wood surfacer, again sanding lightly after it has set for two or three hours. A second coat, following the same procedure, may be applied if desired.

The first step in preparing the bottom of the plywood boat to receive paint calls for the initial sanding and a coat of wood sealer. Finish up with two coats of anti-fouling paint.

In painting the interiors of the plywood boat, use one of the Noskid compounds, powder added to finish paint which gives surfaces a sandpaper quality. The complete painting procedures are the same whether the plywood boat is in salt or fresh water.

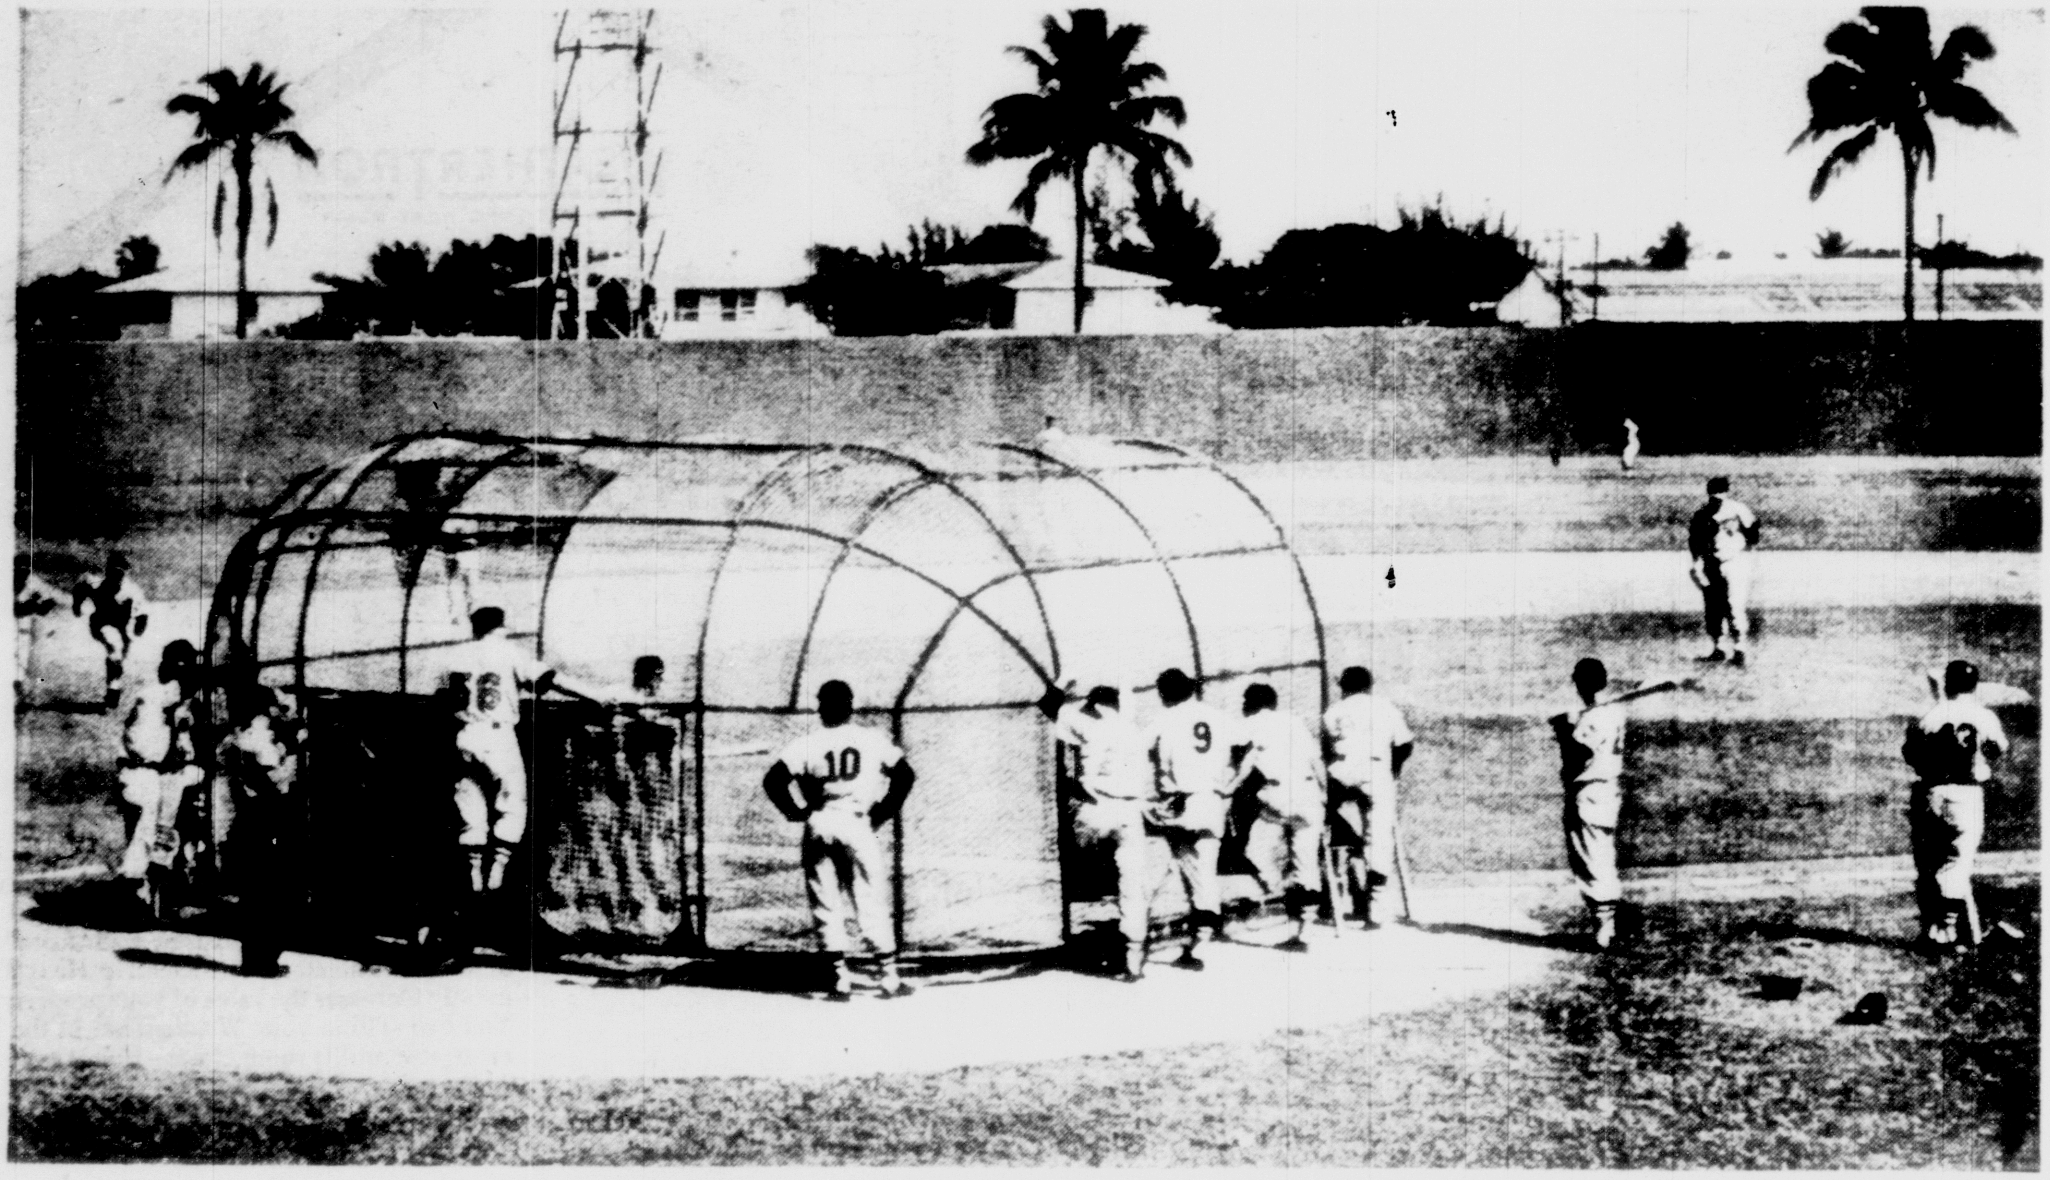
Arkansas Snowstorm Made Florida Big-Time Baseball Headquarters



IN MIAMI, APPEARANCE OF ORIOLES—NOT ROBINS—SIGNIFIES THE COMING OF SPRING

... there were times this rainy spring when they thought they'd have to turn into ducks

Florida Looks Like a Baseball Hall of Fame In Spring as 12 Big League Teams Move In

By Jimmy Burns

A SNOWSTORM in Hot Springs, Ark., and a man, who came to St. Petersburg to live out his last few months set the stage for Florida to provide 12 of the 16 major league baseball spring training camps.

The clubs, six from the American league and as many from the National, are departing for their home parks to launch another championship season. They depart grousing over the wettest March encountered in years.

Incessant rains wrecked exhibition schedules, but the teams are in good physical condition and the chances are bright that the 1959 World Series for the fifth straight time will involve Florida trained teams.

And despite griping over "unusual" weather, the prospects are that next spring Florida will be host to 13 teams — the story being that General Manager Frank Lane will shift his Cleveland Indians from Arizona to Sarasota, vacated this past year by the Boston Red Sox.

★ ★ ★

IN TURNING back down Memory Lane of spring training in Florida, one goes past 1911, when Al Lang noted in a Pittsburgh paper that the Pirates had missed three days of practice at Hot Springs because of snow.

Lang, a native of Pittsburgh, had been told by his doctors he could not live another year. He headed for St. Petersburg to spend his last days in comfort. This past spring, Lang, still spry despite a recent illness, was busy seeing that everything went okay for the Yankees and Cardinals in their St. Petersburg camps.

"When I saw the story about the Hot Springs snow in March of 1911, I was going around in a straw hat and flannel trousers," Al recalled.

"We invited the Pirates to come to St. Petersburg the next year, but negotiations failed. Then we got the St. Louis Browns here in 1914, but they stayed only one year. The Phillies came for three years and in 1921, the Braves — then of Boston — came and have been in Florida ever since. The Yankees came in 1925 and we got the Cardinals to replace the Braves in 1939."

It was Lang, who first interested other Florida cities in adding

Chopin Preludes

Record Tide Turns For Miss Lympany

By Doris Reno

ONE OF THE great woman pianists of our time, Moura Lympany, is presented to record-buyers in a fine light in her new Capitol EMI 12-inch disc containing the Chopin Preludes, Op. 28.

The English-born Miss Lympany, who's been before the public for a good many years (she made her U.S. debut in 1948), has not previously been well represented on records, and we hope this beautiful new version of the Preludes indicates that the tide is turning, disc-wise, in her favor.

MOURA LYMPANY
. . . mature playing

Hers is very thoughtful, mature, collected playing, not showy in the slightest, full and round yet crystalline. There is warmth and passion in the readings of the larger, more dramatic Preludes, and bigness too — but it is feminine bigness, and recognizable as such.

There is not nearly as much color in these readings as in those of other mature pianists, and when there is sparkle it is more like the sparkle of bright cascading water than of blue depths. There is great exquisiteness of feeling, limpidity and fine textures.

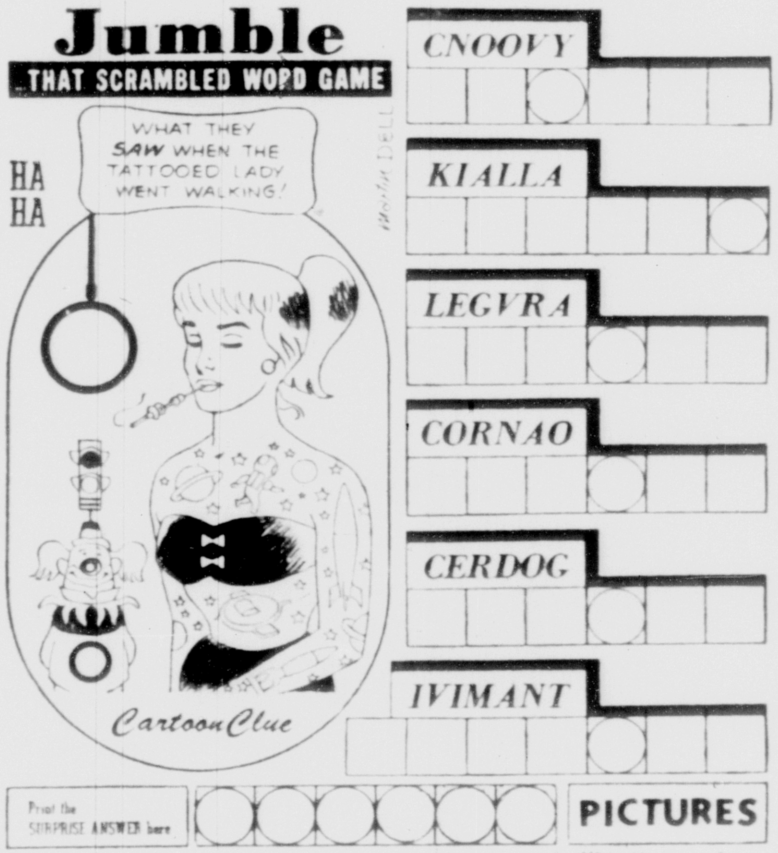
The technical prowess is everything which could be desired in a pianist, and the prestos are extremely fleet and light. The technique actually appears to be infallible and limitless.

* * *

ANOTHER PIANIST, the slightly younger Bulgarian artist Yury Boukoff, also deals with Chopin in a presentation of all the Polanaises on two Westminster 12-inch LP discs. There are 16 in all.

Boukoff's work is straightforward and competent, and has many virtues, but there are no surprises in his readings and not many subtleties. His style is not clearly defined, and he needs to utilize more variation in dynamics.

Boukoff made his U.S. debut in 1957 in the Prokofiev Third Piano Concerto with the Cincinnati Symphony. We should like to hear him in something by Prokofiev and other contemporaries, where he would probably prove more effective.



Unscramble the 6 sets of letters, making a word of each jumble. Print each word, a letter to a square, beneath each jumble. The letters you have printed on the circled squares may then be arranged to spell the surprise answer suggested by the cartoon clue. What is it? (Solution on page 27)

ONE OF THE FEW 14-year-olds in the world who signs autographs instead of collecting them is American Singer Brenda Lee. She busily autographs photos of herself which she intends to send her friends in Paris, where she will soon have a singing engagement.

John Gielgud Talked His Way Into a Hit

By Hugh Mulligan

NO ONE was more surprised than Sir John Gielgud when his one-man show of readings from Shakespeare turned out to be the runaway hit of the current Broadway season.

Sir John wasn't prepared for this sort of reception at all. For eight weeks he had been touring the tank towns, appearing in high school auditoriums and movie houeses, waiting for the right sized house to become available on Broadway. He wanted a small, intimate house, for his "Ages of Man" was a small, intimate show.

It had no scenery, no custumes, no fancy lighting, and the only props were a large volume of Shakespeare, which he seldom bothered to look at, and a lectern. Most nights, Sir John just tossed his hat on a hook and stepped on stage.

Finally a Broadway house did become available, the 46th Street Theater, one of the largest on Broadway and not what he had in mind at all. But rather than return to England without playing Broadway, he reluctantly decided to take it for two weeks.

Sir John would up staying for six weeks, playing to standing-room-only audiences every night. He could have stayed for six months, perhaps even six years, had be so desired. It was that kind of a hit.

* * *

THAT SOPHISTICATED New Yorkers would go wild over a man who did nothing more than recite selected passages from Shakespeare must have come as a very pleasant surprise to a man who has been reciting Shakespeare almost all of his adult life.

Gielgud's "Ages of Man" made theater history, and now it appears that his Columbia one-man cast album of the same name will be even more successful. It is undoubtedly the top show album of the year.

For when it comes to speaking Shakespeare, no actor—not John Barrymore nor Maurice Evans nor Laurence Olivier — can speak it quite so well as Sir John.

Florida had seen major league clubs long before 1911, but there had been no concentrated effort to keep them here. The first appearance of major clubs in Florida was for a single game at Jacksonville, March 21, 1888. The New York Giants and Washington Senators, both of the National league, were brought there by a promoter by boat for an exhibition.

In 1896, the Giants become the first major club to train in Florida, selecting Jacksonville for their camp.

★ ★ ★

IN THOSE DAYS, hotels catered only to rich tourists and ball clubs were hard pressed to find quarters. Once in a small Florida city, the late John McGraw made reservations for his team by mail at a boarding house.

When McGraw and his 40 some odd athletes arrived, there were accommodations for only nine men. The surprised boarding house keeper explained, "I thought there were only nine men on a team."

Times have changed. The best hotels seek the baseball business and this past spring, the Baltimore Orioles were quartered at the McAllister on Biscayne Boulevard. The Giants might still be training here, except for losing their rooms at the plush Biltmore when it was converted into an Army hospital during the war days.

★ ★ ★

BALL PLAYERS today are welcome and well behaved guests, their athletic figures and youthful appearances being the only way to distinguish between the players and sun seeking tourists.

Once in the lobby of a Sarasota hotel, I remarked to Joe McCarthy, then Boston Red Sox, about how well-dressed his players appeared.

"They should be," snorted McCarthy. "They are only young business men."

It is estimated that a big league team spends from $50,000 to $75,000 in quartering and feeding its athletes — this is in addition to what they spend themselves.

"Twenty seven of the Yankees live outside of the hotel at St. Petersburg," said Bob Fishel, public relations director of the New York club. "They rent apartments and have their families with them."

★ ★ ★

ASIDE FROM the money spent, the major league clubs produce intangible benefits. The chief one is nationwide publicity for the city in which they are training.

Wire services and sports writers from big city newspapers prowl the camps, writing daily stories and columns under the datelines of the city they are visiting.

The daily workouts and exhibition games fill out the entertainment program, both for tourists and home people.

The Dodgers, while still in Brooklyn, created their own camp —Dodgertown at Vero Beach and train their National and minor league teams there. At times they have more than 300 athletes in camp.

Detroit has tried the same system at Lakeland, with Tigertown.

In addition more than 50 minor league teams train in Florida, mainly in small towns where the influx of some 40 athletes is quite a boon to trade.

Baseball spring training is big business, and a major advertising medium for Florida. It is one which the cities should strive to maintain.

OFF AND RUNNING DESPITE 'UNUSUAL' WEATHER

Guppies, Anyone?

By Ruth Edgerton

BEWARE of the guppy. Our life as a Fish Family began about a year ago when Carol Ann, the oldest member of the pony tail brigade, came bouncing home from the church carnival with two guppies that she had won.

I said how nice and put them in the bedroom on top of the closet so Bobby, 3, Jackie, 6, Kathy 7, and last but not least, Peggy, a break-everything 1, wouldn't decide to barbeque them.

Being prolific as rabbits, the guppies in that bowl soon numbered 32.

Naturally, you have to separate the babies from the large guppies or they will eat them. Enter the second aquarium, and my first mistake. I should have let them eat them!

* * *

MY HUSBAND appeared on the scene at this point, saying there were so many fish that maybe they weren't getting enough air so he'd buy the kids an air bubble. I told him the fish were doing fine and would he please hurry up and finish enclosing the Florida room as our family was increasing faster than the guppies.

Naturally, my word is law so he arrived home that night with an air bubble, plus another three-gallong aquarium, with four darling Angel fish. I say darling Angel fish because somebody forgot to teach them about the mating call and we still have the same number of Angel fish, only four.

I was good and mad then, and I really put my foot down, right on a five-gallon aquarium which he couldn't carry in with the first aquarium, complete with motor to run a filtering system, charcoal, glass wool, sand, gravel, plants, coral rock, a clamp shell that opens and closes burping air as it does.

And he had to have a small skin diver that also burped air. Naturally, the children were delighted, and I include their father in that category.

After I argued myself blue in the face that we didn't have enough room for all the fish — which had increased to Dwarf Gouramies, Wags, Neons, Pearl Gouramies, Rasporas — name it, we have it — my husband proved he was very clever. He knocked a hole in my Florida room wall and there sits a 15-gallon aquarium and mounted next to it are aquariums from floor to ceiling.

* * *

IF ONE of the fish dies, you have to remove it from the tank immediately or it will polute the wateer and the other fish die. I thought that would be the answer to my problems but the kids caught wise and informed on me.

We had a little burial service for this first fish, but Kathy and Jackie kept digging it up, saying, "See, Mommy, it didn't go to heaven yet!" So now we just flush them down the john when the children are not looking.

* * *

BOBBY DECIDED that the fish menu wasn't satisfactory, and he good naturedly gave them the leavings of his dinner plate — chicken a la king. I never did tell his father he did it, as I have become rather fond of Bobby. I told his father that all the fish probably died because of fungus or something. We had mass burial in the john that night.

However, good old dad went out and bought a new batch of fish. He thought I was crying for joy when he brought them in the house that night. I was merely hysterical.

RX: The doctor said three or four days of complete quiet and bed rest (with five children in the house?) and I'll be up and around again, good as new.

My husband's solution was much better. He's going to enclose the carport for the fish and everyone has taken the pledge: NEVER go to a church carnival without Mommy.

31
ANNUAL ACADEMY AWARDS PRESENTATION

THIS FAMED TRIO, Kirk Douglas, June Allyson and Burt Lancaster look over the program of the annual Motion Picture Academy Awards show to be telecast by NBC on WCKT (Ch. 7) at 10:30 Monday night. More than 100 stars will take part in the ceremony in Los Angeles. (See 'Oscar' score sheet on Page 12).

Masters Golf Tourney on Ch.4

The final, climatic play in the 23rd Masters Golf Tournament at Augusta, Ga., will be covered at 4:30 this afternoon by CBS on WTVJ (Ch. 4).

This will be the second session to be covered by CBS. The network also had its cameras trained on Saturday's go-round. The tournament has been televised by CBS for four years.

Arnold Palmer won last year's Masters with a 284 total after a series of spectacular shots starting with the 12th hole. His prize of $11,250 was the biggest Masters win ever.

The Masters is the first of two big golf tourneys to be covered by CBS cameras. The PGA tournament is slated for coverage during the summer.

Daytime Switch on Channel 10

ABC Discarding Hayes, Liberace In Show Shake-Up

THE ABC NETWORK'S Operation Daybreak is trying desperately not to become Operation Sunset. Low ratings and reluctant sponsors have played havoc with the row of programs the network introduced with high hopes last October.

As of April 13, the Peter Lind Hayes, Play Your Hunch and Liberace Shows are calling it quits.

ANDERSON

The Hayes couple simply couldn't buck the quizzers on NBC and the quiz-soap opera combination on CBS. The Play Your Hunch and Liberace shows ran into the same trouble.

ABC wanted to cut the hour-long Hayes show to a half hour in an attempt to save it but Hayes and his wife, Mary Healy, wouldn't stand still for it.

It's too bad they're giving up. Hayes and his wife are a talented and sprightly couple who had a lot to offer daytime television. But as has happened so often in the chronicle of TV programming, charm and talent availeth a performer nothing if he has to compete against human slot machines and maudlin drama.

ABC Tossing New Shows into the Breach

ABC IS BY NO MEANS striking its flag, of course. The noon to 1 p.m. slot will be filled by the Buddy Deane Show, an audience participation dance show out of Baltimore.

This has been a top rated local show on Baltimore's WJZ-TV and ABC is hoping it will pick up a national audience Hayes, Liberace and company weren't able to.

The 1 p.m. slot will be filled with a quizzer called Musical Bingo. This game type program has been on ABC for some time but until now hasn't been carried by the local station, WPST-TV (Ch. 10).

There's another change at 2:30. ABC is moving the newly acquired Gale Storm Show into that spot. Miss Storm and CBS came to the parting of the ways recently. Her show was not holding its own in the Saturday night rating battle.

Liberace will exit as a live network personality but return to the Channel 10 on daily filmed re-runs at 11:30 a.m.

Funny, Liberace Didn't Make the Grade

IT'S SURPRISING Liberace didn't make a bigger impression as a network performer. At one time Libby was the hottest star on television—right up there in the ratings with I Love Lucy and Arthur Godfrey.

His current failure goes to show the diminishing value of trying to perpetuate a television flirtation. The pearly smile, the sequin jacket, the candles and grand piano are fine for awhile but sooner or later, apparently, a gal viewer has got to feel she's getting somewhere, even in an imaginary romance.

I think what lowered the boom, though, on Liberace was the rise in favor of the tough guy private detective—the Richard Diamonds, the Peter Gunns, and the Mike Hammers.

Maybe the women are weary of the candlelight and wine routine. They want a more cave man approach and the cracking bone may be giving off a more provocative sound now than a Chopin etude.

UM Starts New Series

A new series of programs under the title, "Survey of Learning," describing the fields of study at the University of Miami will be premiered at 12:30 p.m. today on WCKT (Ch. 7).

The series which replaces Watch Your Language will have Dr. Dan Steinhoff Jr., dean of the UM Evening Division, as host and interviewer.

Each week he will chat with a different specialist in a particular field of study.

On today's opening show, Dr. Granville C. Fisher, chairman of the Department of Psychology, will talk with Dr. Steinhoff about his area of study.

Future programs will deal with the fields of sociology, electronics, physics, economics, teacher education, history and chemistry.

Fishing Jurist

Bill Gwin, who plays one of the two judges on ABC-TV's "Day in Court" series, dotes on deep-sea fishing. During a recent show rehearsal he was recounting a struggle he had had with a swordfish that got away. Producer Gene Banks commented, "Listen to him. The Old Man of the Sea from ABC-TV."

NEW TV BOOSTER STOPS TV INTERFERENCE BRINGS IN HARD TO GET CHANNELS

NEW YORK CITY—Here's wonderful news of an amazing attachment that clips on to the back of your TV set and drowns out ghosts, snow, streaks, static, other interferences, and even acts as a booster to channels you've never gotten before. In case after case it was demonstrated that you can now help do away with interference . . . that you can have clearer, sharper, brighter TV pictures . . . that you can bring in TV channels formerly impossible to receive. How is this all possible? First you must know that interference does not come from within your set but from outside sources that compete for attention on your TV antenna. The TV picture signal, leaving the TV station is a clear signal, but on its way to your screen interference from FM stations, household electrical appliances, aircraft, cars, buses, factories all act to jam the signal and as a result you see all kinds of interference on your TV picture and even complete TV channels are stopped from reaching your TV set. This is where the amazing TV Cleartuner comes into play—it acts as a booster by matching the TV signal your set picks up with the TV signal sent out by the TV station so that the TV signal becomes so powerful, so clear that outside interference such as ghosts, snow, streaks, static are all drowned out. Channels you couldn't get before come in clearly with the TV Cleartuner. Order your TV Cleartuner now: if within thirty seconds after you clip it on the back of your set you are not getting picture-clear reception . . . if you don't get channels you couldn't get before, then return your TV Cleartuner for your money back. This may be the last time we can make this amazing offer. Rush $2.98 cash, check, or money order to TV Cleartuner Co., Dept. 964, 66 Summer St., Stamford, Conn.

For Women

Gregory System

CLINIC

Monday, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

LEGS ARE CLEARED permanently of ugly hair by Gregory technician. Many women also have their arms cleared. Speed of radio-wave method makes it practical to eliminate large areas of unwanted hair anywhere on the body.

EYEBROWS ARE SHAPED permanently in most becoming style by Gregory technician. Many women also have the hairline shaped permanently in smart "widow's peak" favored by Hollywood. Removal of ugly hairs from chin, upper lip, cheeks, is routine service.

See unwanted hair removed permanently by radio-wave method that's comfortable, safe, medically-approved

YOU'VE READ in beauty columns and medical articles about the new radio-wave method for permanent removal of superfluous hair.

You yourself can enjoy the benefits of this modern scientific discovery.

For Gregory System's Miami clinic features the new radio-wave method of epilation, used by technicians carefully trained in Gregory's international organization.

Think how wonderful it would be if you never had to pluck or shave again . . . if you never again had to worry whether unsightly hairs were showing! And how wonderful it would be to quit wasting your time with old-fashioned methods of temporary hair removal!

Gregory System offers you just such a hair-free life.

Women by the thousands are already benefitting from the treatment, in the U.S., Mexico City, Havana and Canada.

What Is Treatment Like?

You'll see why Gregory System treatment is so popular when you try a demonstration treatment. You sit in a comfortable reclining chair. The skin area to be treated is cleansed with alcohol. The electronic wire, microscopically thin, is sterilized. Then the skilled Gregory technician deftly applies the tiny wire to a hair follicle, taps the radio-wave switch with her foot, withdraws the free hair from its inactivated papilla . . . and goes on to the next hair in a fraction of the time it's taken you to read about it!

PAINFUL? Not at all. There's a slight feeling of warmth from the current—which can't be uncomfortable, judging from the number of women who sleep through treatment. Actually, plucking a hair is ten times worse than removing it permanently.

SAFE? Completely. So safe that physicians the world over recommend this treatment to women worried by superfluous hair. Ask your own physician about it.

FAST? So fast is the method, so skilled the Gregory operators, it's not unusual to eliminate as many as 2000 hairs in an hour.

EXPENSIVE? No. Almost any woman can afford this one-time luxury now. Actually, you may have as many as 500 hairs removed permanently for about the cost of two tubes of depilatory.

Hair-Free Forever!

And you walk out of the Gregory System clinic with so many of the unwanted hairs gone forever.

No more worrying about them. No more hours wasted removing hairs temporarily from the same places over and over again. No more "staying home" because you haven't had time to do anything about those un-pretty, unfeminine hairs. You solve the problem once and for all!

Come in tomorrow and see what Gregory treatment offers you. Ask the technician to remove a few of your own most troublesome surplus hairs, just to see what it's like. No charge, of course.

Be sure to come. Clinic hours are 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. weekdays, 10 to 3 on Saturday. Phone for an appointment if you wish.

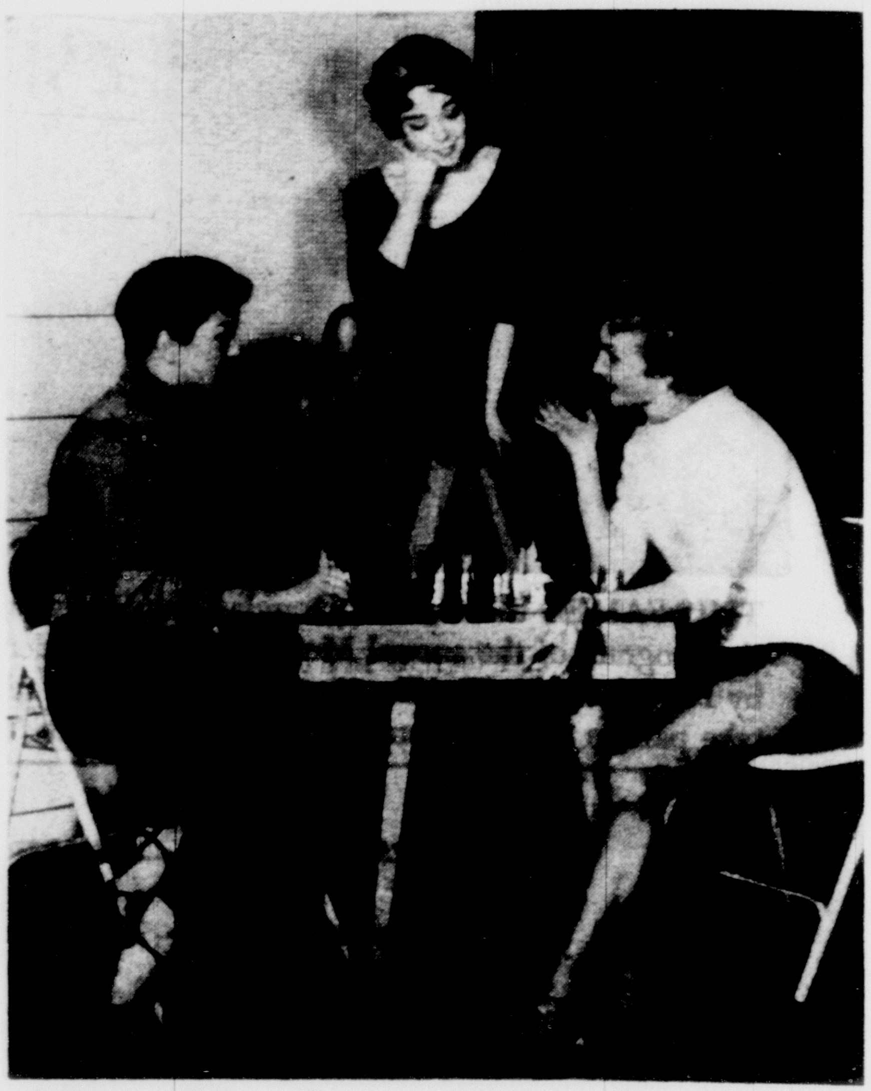
The Old Man And the She's

THE FUZZY-WUZZY GENT with the hardware is Dr. Ima Klinker, a zany character who holds forth every Saturday morning at 8 on WCKT (Ch. 7) on a comedy movie show for kids. Klinker's real monicker is a big secret.



CHESS CAKE is what you might term this trio of lovelies, Lisa D'Orso, left, Jayne Turner, center, and Cynthia Scott, involved in a game during a rehearsal break on CBS' Your Hit Parade. All three are dancers on the show.

AS PINCH-HITTER last summer on Dick Clark's network version of his own show, Wyler was a solid success with Clark's fans in Philadelphia.

WYLER WELCOMES recording star, Fabian, (center) and WINZ disc jockey Bob Green who dropped in for visit on his 10's Bandstand recently.

Recording Stars Are Regular Visitors to Channel 10's Saturday Afternoon Teenage Dances won't take chances away from the studio with dances in locations we think are questionable."

Wyler's local success with 10's Bandstand was duplicated on a national level last summer. He was one of several regional teenage TV impresarios invited by ABC to pinch-hit for vacationing Dick Clark. It was the unanimous opinion of ABC staffers that Wyler did it best.

One of the most demanding phases of Wyler's work is keeping up with the musical trends. Teenagers are notoriously fickle in their enthusiasms and the deejay — on TV or radio — who doesn't ride with these enthusiasms can develop a large square status with the kids in a hurry.

And who's popular with the kids at present? At the time this was written, Wyler still listed Elvis Presley on top despite the pelvis' current involvement with Uncle Sam. But Ricky Nelson runs him a close second. The Everly Brothers are right up there and so is Connie Francis, the only distaff threat.

These are the monarchs of the teenage musical world, young singers whose appearance and stylings are so arresting to the young eye and ear that almost anything they sing can make the hit lists.

But, as aforementioned, some relative old-timers you might think the kids would associate with the musical ice age are popping up on the hit list. Such rockingchair types as Gordon MacRae and Toni Arden, for example.

MacRae made the grade with "The Secret" and Miss Arden, with a tune called "Padre." And take a look at what got out of the mothballs and back into circulation again in the way of songs — "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," "My Happiness," "My Heart Sings," and "There Must Be a Way."

It may come as a nasty shock to a few 14 and 15-year-old cats but "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" is a relic of a Broadway musical called "Roberta" produced way, way, way back in 1933.

Wyler reports that for dance purposes the teenagers have currently taken a liking to what he calls visual songs. "Bunny-hop" and something called "The Freeze" are typical of these. These tunes are not only highly danceable but suggest certain fancy footwork variations, Wyler explains.

A native of Chicago, Wyler had lined out a theatrical career for himself after finishing his schooling. For several years in the early 1950's he worked with Chicago's Goodman Theater and toured with a road production of "South Pacific."

He then spent two years in the Army and when he returned to civilian life, he deserted the uncertainties of acting for a job in radio as a deejay with Chicago's WJJD.

He came to Florida in 1954 to join the staff of WITV (Ch. 17), now defunct. It was on that station that he organized his first teenage TV dances under the program title, Wylaway Club.

Later he went to WGBS (Ch. 23) which ultimately became the present day WPST-TV (Ch. 10). He is now 28 and although married, has no children.

'ROUND AND 'ROUND go the teenage dancers who gather each week in WPST-TV's big Biscayne Boulevard studio for 10's Bandstand which features their favorite recording tunes for the hop.

LOUISE GRIFFIN

. . . she's native Miamian

LOUISE GRIFFIN a triple threat on WFEC. She's one of its brightest on-the-air personalities. She's the station's receptionist and she's its traffic manager. Miss Griffin works before the mike from 10 to 11 a.m. Monday through Friday, and from sign-on to noon on Sundays. Her specialty is spinning platters of spirituals. "You might call me a spirituals disc jockey," says the talented Miss Griffin who broke into radio fresh out of the University of Michigan. Her soft, unusual voice made her an immediate hit with WFEC listeners, as has the enormous range of recorded spirituals that she specializes in presenting. Miss Griffin is a native Miamian which gives her something of a distinction among her radio confreres, most of whom had their beginnings elsewhere. She was graduated from Dorsey High School before going to Ann Arbor, Mich., for her college education. She is 22 and unmarried.

Too Risky

Stunt man Doyle Brooks spent a whole day ramming an automobile into the side of another for a recent sequence on ABC-TV's "Naked City." Then he took the subway home. "I never drive a car through downtown New York," he explained. "It's too risky."

Bill Wyler- TV's Pied Piper

Cool, Keen Ex-Actor Scores As Video Hop Impresario

By Jack E. Anderson

TEENAGE FAVORITE PAT BOONE IS TYPICAL OF VISITORS ON WYLER'S SHOW

IT MAY COME as a relief to venerables over 21 that in the pony-and-ducktail set, June and moon are in good repute again.

The sentimental ballad is on the way back to popularity after a long period in which romance has been musically equated — among the young — with fractured heart hotels, swaying jailhouses and suede shoes.

This encouraging information comes from Bill Wyler, the boyish mentor of a weekly teenage television ritual called 10's Bandstand on WPST-TV (Ch. 10). Wyler's information is authoritative. He's been the musical confidante of adolescents on TV in these parts for more than five years.

Wyler is one of that handful of youthful adults, the most famous of which is the ABC network's Dick Clark, who has managed to bring television to the teenager and vice versa throughout the country.

Charmers such as Wyler have been the only television entertainers to make an appreciable appeal to an audience lying roughly between the ages of 13 and 19. The reasons for it are on view every Saturday at one o'clock in the afternoon on Channel 10.

It's an hour and a half the teenagers can call their own. In their best bib and tucker, they swirl about the big WPST-TV studio in almost stately dances to music strictly of their own taste. Usually there's some favorite recording troubadour dropping by for a visit. That a couple of cameras are looking on is purely incidental.

Above the bobbing heads is the figure of Wyler, presiding from a dais festooned with the insignia of the show's sponsors.

A former actor, the handsome Wyler is a commanding master of ceremonies. His relationship with the kids is easy-going but never overfamiliar. At least once during the show he'll do a bunny-hop with one of the girls, but for the rest of it, he's strictly at the controls.

Only a little over 100 youngsters are admitted to the studio for each Saturday's dance. Contacts for the program are made through the schools. Only youngsters in grades from nine to 12 or between the ages of 13 and 19 can participate.

Each of the prospective participants has a card on file at the station and a clerical staff picks the names by rotation so as to give the greatest spread possible to the weekly attendance.

In the course of a typical 90-minute show, the control room will spin as many as 20 or 25 top tunes of the day. The selections pretty well follow a local as well as national concensus of popularity.

But Wyler and his partner and producer, Dave Kreuter, pick and choose the music with discrimination. No salacious or off-color platters get on their turntables no matter how urgent the promotional pressure from the recording companies.

The same caution goes into selecting the location and music for the non-television dances which Wyler and Kreuter stage here and in Fort Lauderdale.

"When you're entrusted with supervising children away from their homes," says Wyler, "you can't be too careful. Dave and I just simply Is Video Bad for Baseball?

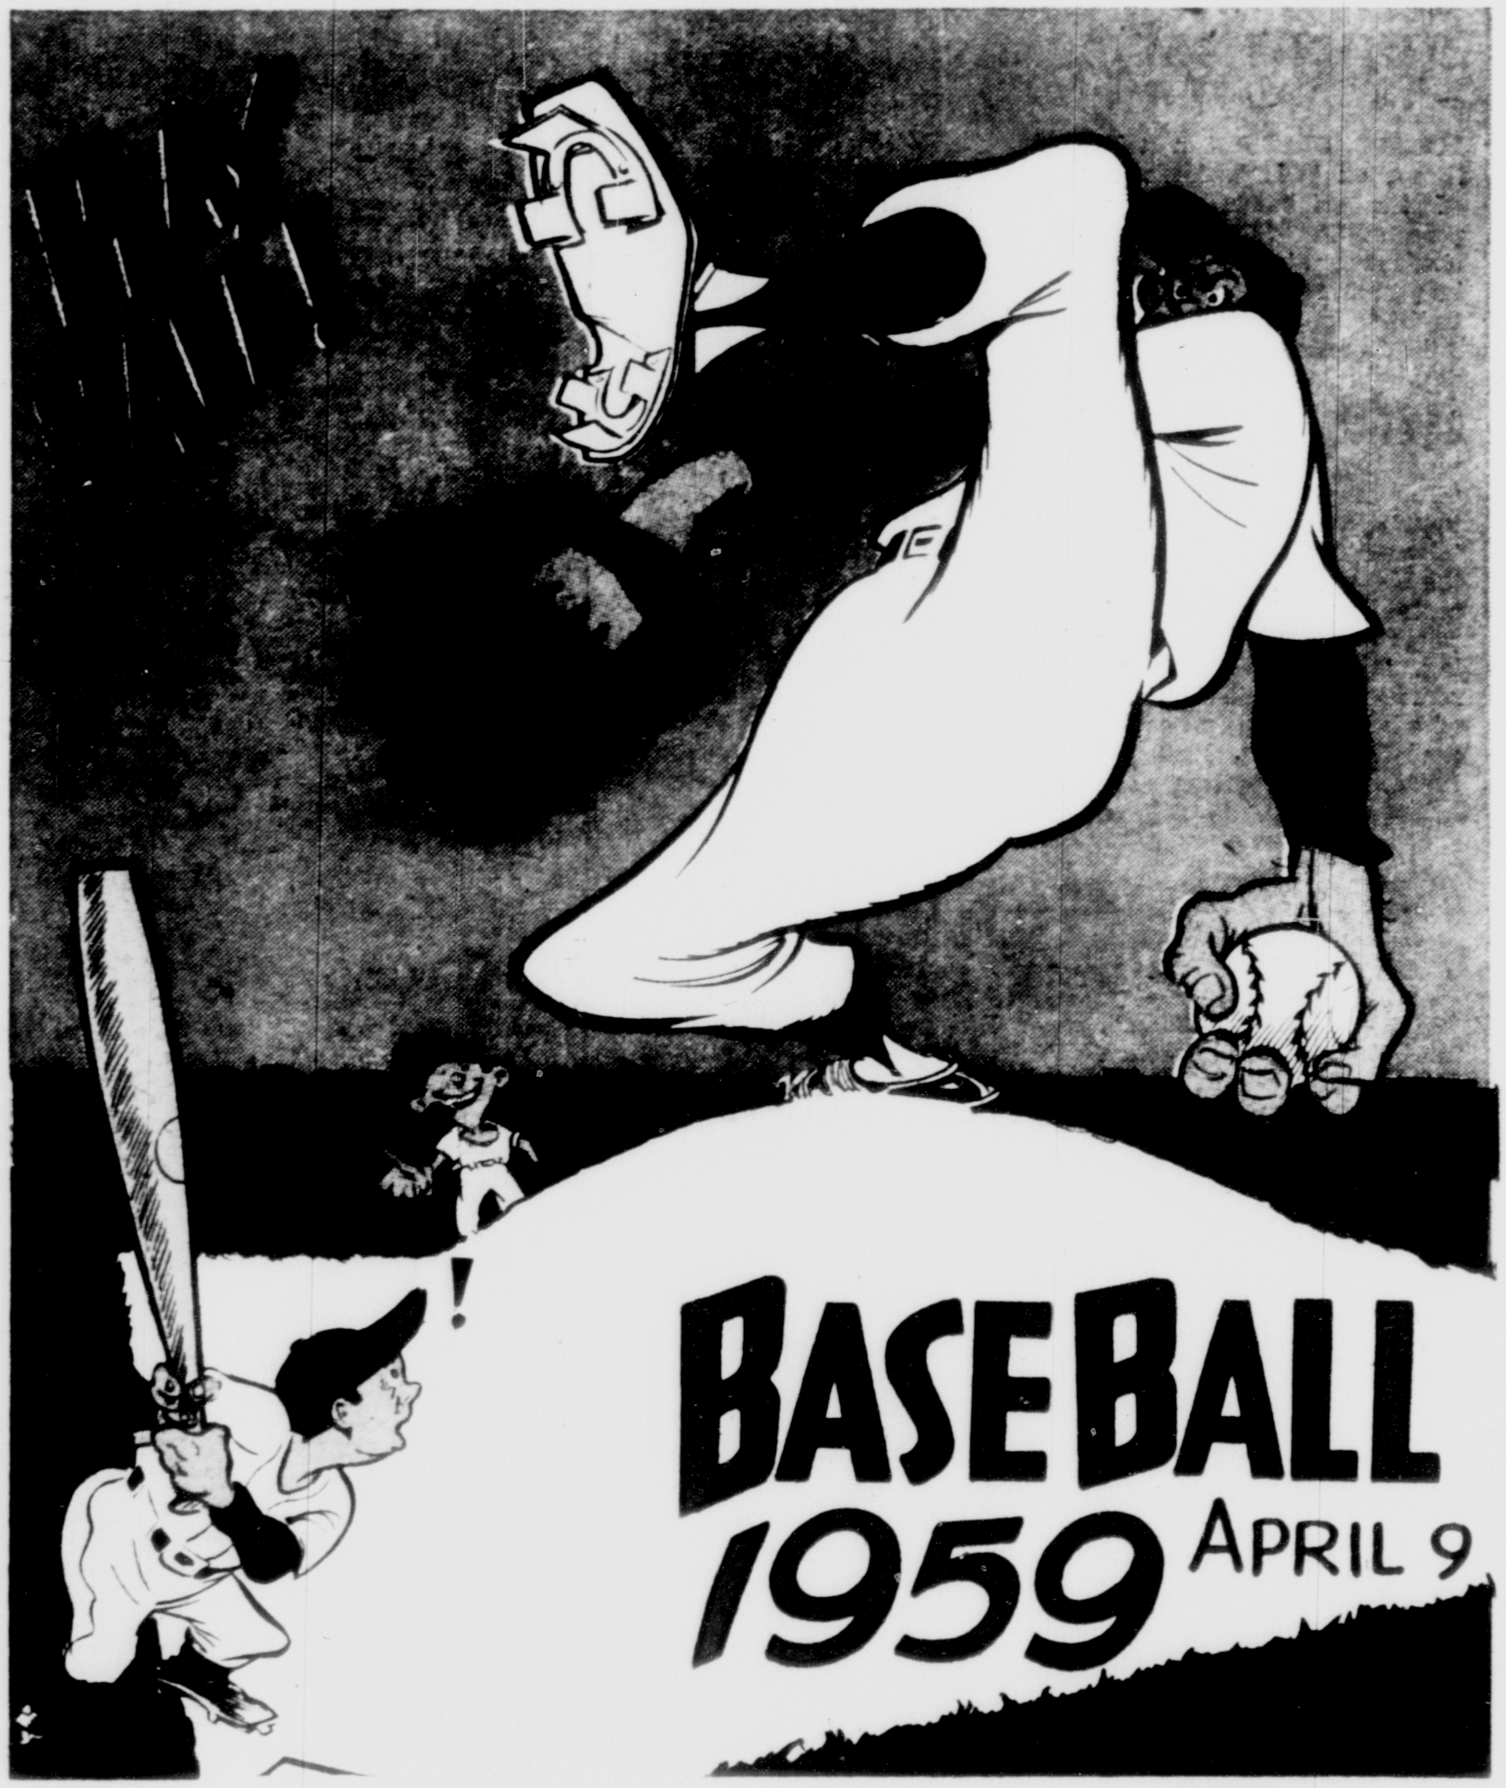
With Another Season Coming Up, the Debate Over Video's Value to Sport Rages Again



Some time during the afternoon of April 7, Warren Giles, president of the National League, will clear his throat and announce:

"This season will see a tremendous race in our league. I believe all eight clubs have a chance."

For the forecast of Joe Cronin, new president of the American League, just put down a string of ditto marks.

Well, that's all very fine and comforting testimony that the 1959 baseball season is getting off to a traditional start. But will the rest of the season follow any such routine pattern?

Baseball magnates and their stockholders, television network brass and THEIR stockholders will be casting anxious eyes on the effect of televised ball games on their respective enterprises. To say nothing of the thousands of persons whose economic well-being is affected by the ups and downs of baseball and the TV networks.

Television, right now, is what runs the sport. Whether that is good or bad is a question that many observers think makes 1959 a critical year in the baseball-TV hook-up.

There's no question that televising of big league games has done grievous harm to the minor leagues. Frank Lawrence, who once ran Class B baseball in Portsmouth, Va., sued the big leagues for $250,000 in damages. He claimed he was put out of business by telecasts of major league games in his area. The suit was thrown out of court, but it didn't settle the question.

Even Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick admits that baseball is eating its young by devouring the minor leagues with TV.

Once the minors were filled with teams on whose rosters were young, fast, hard-boiled kids who could hit the ball a mile and learned the game, day in and day out, under veteran managers.

But now the talent supply has thinned out. Minor league parks are devoid of cash customers. John Q. Customer is comfortable in his living room or favorite bar, being thrilled by big league contests. For free. Once John Q. Customer sees the big game for nothing, he won't settle for less.

Times change. And no one knows it better than the top men of baseball. When they first started televising their games it had a tonic effect on the box office. Many men who hadn't thought much about baseball since they had played stick ball in the streets as kids had their interest rekindled. They got into the habit of taking in a ball game now and then.

Perhaps the biggest change television effected was among the women. They started watching games on TV and whereas once they didn't know a slider from a Texas leaguer it wasn't long until they were arguing baseball with the Old Man on almost equal terms.

And by the same token, it wasn't long until they were giving the Old Man the "Take Me Out to the Ball Game" pitch. So the ball park box offices received an influx of femme fans who didn't exist in pre-TV days. It was found money.

But times change. Perhaps the novelty of actually being at the ball park wore off. Mama had too many household chores to take a whole afternoon off. Perhaps, for Mama and the Old Man both, it was just too darned comfortable to sit in the living room, with a case of their favorite sarsaparilla handy, and watch the game on TV. That kept regiments of them out of the ball parks.

Another factor that hurt the baseball box office was the extensive increase in participant sports. Many a former baseball addict decided he'd rather play golf or go boating than travel to the ball park.

In any event, the former happy situation where TV created new fans and reactivated old ones, has been reversing itself for the past several seasons. How deep the downspin will go is just one of the worries facing baseball management.

So, as the season opens, the dilemma thrusts its horns at our harassed hero in the ball club's front office. Should he continue to televise on a large scale in the hope of creating new fans? Should he cut down the number of broadcasts to the point where TV doesn't satisfy the fans' appetite and thus lures them out of their easy chairs? Or should he cut out television entirely — and thus lose that ever-flowing stream of nice, easy TV money that comes in so handy when you want to buy a ball player or pay the electric bill?

For the future, some baseball people insist toll television will straighten this all out. "You can subsidize a losing minor league franchise if you have toll television profits," says Walter O'Malley of Los Angeles.

Pay television is what originally lured him out of Brooklyn and sent Horace Stoneham from New York to San Francisco with the Giants. Both reportedly got seven-figure down payments from Skiatron for the moves.

There has been talk this season of having some of the San Francisco games on a pay-TV basis. But in general, this phenomenon is a couple of years away. In the meantime, free TV is bleeding the minor leagues to death. It is not a good thing. The quality of major league ball you watch these days is definitely below pre-TV par.

Thanks to TV, more people are likely to watch baseball this season than ever before. But only a small minority will be seeing the games from the ball park stands — also thanks to TV.

Both CBS and NBC have nationally televised games each Saturday and Sunday. These cannot be viewed in major league cities and their immediate areas. Only five big league clubs do not televise. Milwaukee, Pittsburgh, Kansas City; Los Angeles and San Francisco demand that you pay at the gate to see them.

Dizzy Dean and Buddy Blattner, the old second baseman, handle the CBS announcing chores. NBC has Lindsay Nelson and Leo Durocher. The latter is a surprise every time he is viewed. When he was manager of the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers — which seems, when you think about it, to be back in the nickel beer days — Leo rarely said a thing he did not take back or change later.

The biggest TV baseball splurge is in New York. The Yankees will beam 123 games to New Yorkers. Thanks to this, announcer Mel Allen is something of an institution, like the Brooklyn Bridge.

HUGH DOWNS IS VIDEO'S MOST SUCCESSFUL SALESMAN

Honest Pitchman

A Product Must Convince Him Personally Before He Can Sell It, Says Hugh Downs

By Olga Curtis
Women's News Service

Hugh Downs is the most successful salesman on TV, with 32 sponsors to prove it.

But he claims he really doesn't sell anything but Hugh Downs and "belief."

"It sounds corny, but I have to believe what I say in a commercial or nobody would believe me," explained the boyish New Yorker who last year was voted TV's outstanding announcer.

"That's why I had such a rough time at first with the dental plate adhesive ad. I have my own teeth and I didn't know if what I was saying was true until I went and asked my dentist."

As a result of his belief, Downs, who sells everything from transparent tape to automobiles, is his own best test market for products.

He once nearly asphyxiated himself right on camera to demonstrate how well a flea spray worked: he sprayed so hard it choked him.

"Can't help it," grinned Downs. "I'm not trying to perform. I'm just being me.

I'd be flattered if people thought I could act. I did try a few parts on TV in 1953, and everybody was complimentary but nobody offered me any more acting jobs."

Downs, who refers to himself as a "pitch-man," is lucky enough to be in a position to pick and choose the products he'll pitch.

"I've turned down sponsors occasionally when I didn't feel right about their products," he said. "I probably wouldn't act so noble if my children looked at me with pinched, hungry faces — but thank God we don't have to worry about money these days."

Judging from his fan mail, Downs and his wife and two children won't be worrying about lack of money for some time to come. NBC says he averages 1,000 letters a week, and the average keeps going up . . . which makes Downs happier than anybody.

"Two years ago," he admits, "I was getting maybe 35 letters a week."

At 38, with 20 years experience as an announcer behind him, nothing about radio and TV surprises Downs too much.

For instance, he's learned to sleep a little at night and nap a little by day to keep up with a schedule that has him on the air 12 hours apart daily. Downs hosts the morning quiz show "Concentration" and announces the nightly "Jack Paar Show" five days each week. He doesn't get weekends off either, because Saturday he's on the radio show Monitor.

Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "lightning."

Sometimes he reminsces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide.

Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

Legislators Agreed: No New Taxes, 1G
Federal Courts May Force Reapportionment 1B

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.

His Views
Will Affect
YOU

Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a selective basis to hold govern-

Where Collins Stands

Here are highlights of what Gov. Collins will be seeking from the Florida Legislature which convenes Tuesday:

RACE RELATIONS—"I shall never favor closing any public school."

REAPPORTIONMENT — ". . . carry on the battle for fair apportionment . . ."

ECONOMIES — "I will oppose indiscriminate reductions which will damage our state's progress."

HIGHWAYS —— ". . . based on need, not political favoritism and greed."

GOVERNMENTAL REORGANIZATION — ". . . long overdue."

Buenos Aires Rioters Cry, 'Yankees, No'

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina —(AP)— Anti-American slogans echoed through the streets during rioting against President Arthuro Frondizi's government in the heart of the capital.

About 50 persons were injured and 150 arrests made when police fired shots to break up two demonstrations in defiance of a government ban. The demonstrators fired back. Cars were set afire and store windows broken.

Supporters of exiled Dictator Juan D. Peron and Communists were blamed by semi-official sources for the three-hour melee in downtown Buenos Aires.

A mass meeting in protest against government labor policies was organized by Peronista and Communist-led unions. One of the complaints was that the government had forcibly dismissed elected union leaders and replaced them with Frondizi supporters.

During the fighting police sources said some of the demonstrators shouted: "Argentines yes, Yankees no . . . down with imperialism."

The demonstrators were beaten back before entering Plaza Mayo opposite Government House.

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Mutual Security Is Key

U. S. Rejects Red 'Ceiling' 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Vietnam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges, U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defendin America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By AL FINKELSTEIN

Greater Miami hotel and motel operators Saturday checked their calendars suspiciously.

Here it was April — and their sun-kissed winter tourist "season" was still on.

From downtown Miami to South Beach to Bal Harbor, hotelmen joyfully reported their customers this year were staying later than they had ever done in several years.

Reservations at the $25-a-day houses were non-existent; mid-Beach hotels were "doing nicely," and even the older South Beach quarters were pleased at the late stay of their regular elderly tenants.

North-bound air traffic was booked solid —yet tourists were still coming down at a fairly steady rate.

"They seem to be leaving later and later every year," said R. T. Jeffries, assistant general passenger agent of the Florida East Coast Railway.

Greyhound Bus Lines were running seven capacity-filled expresses daily to New York — and still returning with "good loads."

A Dupont Plaza spokesman said occupancy was dropping — "but just slowly."

At the small Calvert Hotel, 150 Ocean Dr., Miami Beach, owner Mrs. Frances Mitnick said "we are dropping off . . . but only since the first of the month."

Further up the Beach at the Carillon Hotel, 6801 Collins Ave., Sales Director Dan Shaw said business was in "very good shape."

And at the 650-room Americana Hotel in Bal Harbor, a spokesman said: "Reservations — what are they, sir?"

Auto Racer Amick Killed

DAYTONA BEACH — (AP) — George Amick, 34, of Rhinelander, Wis., was killed Saturday in a two-car crackup on the final lap of an automobile race here.

Jim Rathmann of Miami had just crossed the finish line of the USAC 100-mile race at the new Daytona International Speedway with a 170.26-mile-an-hour average when Amick, running third, crashed into the car of Bill Cheesbourg of Tucson, Ariz. Cheesbourg was not seriously hurt. Details in the sports section.

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

March Jobless Drop Of 300,000 Forecast

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Government economists predicted Saturday a report next week will show that unemployment in March declined by 300,000 or more.

They based their forecast on a recent sharp drop in the number of workers drawing jobless benefits and a pickup in steel industry hiring.

Mid-February unemployment was estimated at 4,749,000 by the Labor and Commerce Departments. They plan to report the March jobless figure Tuesday, a day before the AFL-CIO holds a mass conference on unemployment here.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell apparently will use the new data in his appearance before the labor rally to bolster his claim that unemployment will continue to decline in the months ahead.

AFL-CIO economists contend that a high rate of joblessness seems inevitable because improved productivity makes it possible for fewer workers to turn out more goods.

The current AFL-CIO News declared the unemployment situation was a "crisis" and deplored the administration's "hesitancy to stimulate economic growth."

Ah, Spring! Ah, Sunny's 400 Bucks

Spring is here, buds are blooming, business is booming, the fish are biting and Sunny Fortune is wearing a $400 smile.

SUNNY

That's what the winner of this week's prize will receive.

So don't let spring fever distract you from giving it a whirl.

That's the word from Sunny Fortune. Last week, unfortunately, no one had the word — or words—to take home the long green.

Remember, as a long-forgotten Miami poet once said:

> Keep trying your luck
> And you'll make a buck

That may not be very good poetry. But if you win $400 it will be music to your ears.

The sad truth is nobody came within a country mile of the correct solution last week.

Most frequently missed words were job for joy (seems nobody wanted to take the happy side of the question); power for poser; pride for prude and wonder for fonder.

It was no wonder we had no winners.

MADERA, Calif. —(AP)— The general's advice made good horse sense.

Philip Peatman, 11, wrote the "Chief of Cavalry" that his 19-year-old horse, Mr. Dillon, galloped back to the corral at the wrong time.

Brig. Gen. Frank S. Henry, a former cavalry officer now in the Pentagon, replied. He told Philip to rein Mr. Dillon into a circle any time he showed signs of hoofing back.

Philip tried it out.

"You know, it works," he exclaimed.

But General Henry's report that the modern army is horseless left Philip wiser but sadder.

"I thought," he lamented, "there was always a cavalry."

Bookie Wire Is Snipped

Apartment Raid Nabs Miamian

By TOM VINCIGUERRA
Herald Staff Writer

HALLANDALE — State law enforcement officers reported Saturday they snipped a bookie wire that had been providing 15 states with race results gleaned by telescope from the Gulfstream Track tote board.

Peter Ratenni, 33, of 1931 NW 30th St., Miami, was arrested in a room with a view of the track mutuel board a quarter of a mile away. He was in jail under $6,000 bond.

He was nabbed in the Turf Apartment, 60 N. Federal Hwy. Investigators confiscated a high-powered telescope, a hasty-hookup telephone and two lengthy lists of race wire subscribers in 15 states as far west as Iowa.

The service was providing win and place results, investigators said. The track stables obstructed view of the show payoffs.

Officers said Ratenni, taken by surprise, stashed the phone under a couch and put the telescope under a pillow before he answered investigators' knocks.

The telephone was connected to a concealed pay phone booth in the rear apartment of the nearby Turf Restaurant. Some 1,500 feet of wire was strung around the building and buried underground between the restaurant apartment and Ratenni's apartment.

Mel Waters, apartment manager, said he didn't see anybody rigging up the wiring. "They must have done it at night," he said.

Waters said he rented the apartment to a Tommy Sandergate of New York on March 16. Sandergate, Waters said, paid $100 and said he wanted the apartment for only one month.

The building, Waters said, is owned by Claire Atwood and Bill Crawford, who are in the real estate business in North Dade.

Investigators said the wire operators were "past posting," or bilking other bookies by placing bets with them after races were run.

The Turf Apartment was put under surveillance two weeks ago after the Attorney General's office received information that race results were leading out of the track well within the prohibited 30-minute period after each race.

Ratenni was charged with illegally disseminating race information and possessing gambling paraphernalia.

It was the first instance of counter-revolutionary activity in the Greater Havana area although there have been various incidents of terrorism and sabotage in four other provinces of the island recently.

Ike Sends Greetings

Southern Leaders Cite GOP Gains

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Southern Republican leaders meeting here Saturday were told by President Eisenhower that "to achieve our objectives, we must enlist a great body of like-minded citizens."

The President, from his Gettysburg, Pa., farm, wired "cordial greetings" to the Southern Association of Republican State Chairmen.

"It is good to be reminded that a dedicated group of leaders is advancing our party's ideals of public service in 12 Southern states," he added.

The GOP brass launched a closed session on "Operation Dixie" at a beachfront hotel.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

mental cost to the minimum necessary to do an adequate job for the people, but I will oppose indiscriminate reductions which will damage our state's progress.

I will favor effective recognition of the trend in Florida to urbanization and the needs of our people in the heavily populated areas.

I shal fight to continue progress we have made for the construction of highways based upon need, not political favoritism and greed.

In the broad area of governmental reorganization, I shall favor reforms such as the long-overdue program of central purchasing for all departments and institutions.

These are the areas, in my opinion, where the biggest fight for the people will come.

Progress we make will be important for our own time, but the greatest challenge is that, for better or worse, we are laying foundations for the future.

No Reward Is His; Only Heartbreak

FREEHOLD, N.J. —(AP)— If the tale of Garry Corliss and his car followed a storybook plot, he would be rewarded for his industry. Instead, he has seen a dream shattered.

Garry, 16, bought a sleek 1957 convertible last November with a $700 loan from a Freehold bank.

He kept it in his family's garage, washing it, polishing it and looking forward to Sept. 5. That's the day Garry turns 17 and will be eligible for a driver's license.

The youth went to work as a drugstore clerk so he could pay back the loan. He has repaid $300.

But Saturday the police came and impounded the car. They said it is a stolen vehicle.

Garry had bought the car from his uncle, Michael Lembo, 35, of Neptune Township, operator of an auto body shop on Huntington Ave.

But the FBI said a ring stole autos in Brooklyn, took them to the custom body shop and had the serial numbers changed there. Garry's convertible was one of them.

Lembo was arrested Thursday and now is being held in Neptune Township without bail. He is charged with receiving six stolen cars and altering serial numbers on five.

Dulles Day: Sun, Fun, Mysteries

stern patriarch, he teased. "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed, "oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once, only to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cooler and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the south Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the east.

War on Slums Taking Shape

See Related Story on Page 2G
By JUANITA GREENE And JOHN BOYLES
Herald Staff Writers

Supporters of more liberalized slum clearance laws for Florida were preparing Saturday to make a lot more noise in the Legislature when it convenes Tuesday.

But the opponents — two time winners — still had the ears of some powerful senators.

They include the Sen. President, Dewey Johnson of Quincy, and John Rawls of Marianna, who heads a committee that must pass on the bill before it gets to the Senate floor.

RAWLS

Pushing for the reform and working harder than ever to remove the barrier against reselling condemned slum land to private enterprise will be Gov. LeRoy Collins and the Florida League of Municipalities.

They'll be joined this time by civic groups and other organizations over the state, and by Metro.

"I have confidence the bill will pass," said Miami Commissioner George DuBreuil, the Florida league's top Urban Renewal booster.

Again this session the opposition will come from one quietly working group — the property owners in the blighted areas.

"You can be sure something will be done to oppose this plan for resale to private interests," said Abe Schonfeld, Miami attorney who owns property in the Central Negro District here.

But Schonfeld wasn't sure his now defunct Property Owners Development Association will be revived for the third battle. Legislators credit PODA's lobbyist, Attorney Edward Boardman, with killing the bill in committee last session.

BOARDMAN

If PODA doesn't lead the fight, some other statewide organization of property owners will, predicted Schonfeld.

The urban renewal bill prepared by the Florida League of Municipalities would make Florida cities eligible for federal aid, now being distributed in all but eight states.

Cities would be reimbursed for two thirds of the loss resulting from the condemnation, clearing and reselling of blighted areas.

"We are going to work very hard to get it through this time," reported Executive Secretary Gordon T. Butler from municipal league headquarters in Jacksonville. "It's of interest to all major cities."

BUTLER

The bill is expected to get an eager reception in the House.

Speaker Thomas D. Beasley of DeFuniak Springs is for it. So is Mallory Horne of Tallahassee, who heads the House committee which will consider it.

"We can't allow slums to choke our growing cities," said Beasley.

"Florida cities can't possibly afford to pay the cost of redeveloping blighted areas with local funds," added Horne.

But the leaders down the corridor in the Senate were saying something a little different.

Sen. President Johnson wants a provision added to allow the original owner to share any profit made by the developer who buys the cleared land from the city.

SCHONFELI

"I don't think," said Johnson, "a man should be forced to sell his property through condemnation so others can buy it later and make a profit."

Rawls had the same objection. "I'm going to have to give the proposal lengthy consideration," he said.

Miami Commissioner DuBreuil has been working for three years to get the federal purse open to Miami for slum clearance projects.

"It's the only way Miami can do the job," he said. A straw vote of legislators, he said, "indicates they are 95 per cent behind the change this time." But some of those who voted "no" are sitting in strategic positions.

DuBREUIL

The law change, to become finally effective, will require an amendment to the state Constitution. First the Legislature and then the people of Florida have to approve it.

"It's the only way Miami can do the job," he said.

A straw vote of legislators, he said, "indicates they are 95 per cent behind the change this time."

'Mom of Year' Reads to Granddaughters

Kissimmee's Mrs. Weaver, 67, Is Florida 'Mother of Year'

JACKSONVILLE — (AP) — Mrs. Joe Berta Bryan Weaver, 67, of Kissimmee Saturday was announced the Florida Mother of 1959.

The Florida mother is wife of Paul K. Weaver, for years a social security administrator in the Orlando area and now a Kissimmee realtor.

They have three daughters: Mrs. Donald Walker of Orlando and Mrs. Roger Cook of Raleigh, N.C., both housewives; and Mrs. Randolph Richardson, a Kissimmee school teacher.

Mrs. Weaver is a native of Kissimmee. She was graduated from Cox College in Atlanta and Florida State University.

She is a member of the welfare board of the State Department of Public Welfare; president of the Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church; and has been an officer in a wide variety of state and Kissimmee women's and civic organizations.

Mrs. Weaver will go to New York later this month with mothers from other states for selection of the American Mother of the Year.

The primary objective of the American Mothers committee is "to develop and strengthen the moral and spiritual foundation of the American home."

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker of nearby Orange Park made the announcement as head of the selection committee composed of Mrs. John G. Kellum of Tallahassee; Mrs. William Gautier of New Smyrna Beach; Mrs. J. Brown McCalla of Jacksonville; and Mrs. C. W. Williamson, Miami.

Mrs. Chalker said there were 13 nominations from various organizations over the state. She called this a good response.

Development Analized

Recession Was Drag, No Stopper to State

TALLAHASSEE — (AP) — Florida's industrial growth continued at a rapid clip in 1958 despite the drag of the national recession.

The Florida Development Commission reported Saturday that new plants or major expansions totaled 700, and when all are in full production will have a total employment of 23,000.

This was an 18 per cent drop from 1957 in number of plants, but only a 10 per cent sag in employees, the commission said.

In its annual report on manufacturing progress, the commission said the effects of the recession were felt principally in the first part of last year.

Later in 1958 there was a pickup in industrial expansion and the recovery continued on into 1959, the commission said.

Nearly 2,000 plants and expansions with total employment of 80,000 have been announced since the commission began keeping tabs on industrial expansion three years ago.

"No other southeastern state has equaled this record. Indeed, none of the highly industrialized northern states has yet published larger figures," the commission said.

The growth last year occurred in 52 of the state's 67 counties.

Dade County led the rest with 220 plants and an anticipated employment of 6,000. Orange was second with 60 new plants and 3,800 employes.

Broward was third in number of new plants or expansions, with 59, Hillsborough fourth with 51 and Duval fifth with 38.

Mansion Given Art Federation

LEESBURG — (AP) — The Florida Federation of Art Saturday accepted as a gift the DeBary mansion seven miles north of Sanford. The house, built 90 years ago by Count Frederick DeBary, will be used as a state headquarters.

Milford Leonard, president of Plantation Estates, a real estate development in the Sanford area, presented the mansion to the federation. It is a two-story, 17-room house on three acres of wooded and landscaped grounds.

Grocer Held In Tavern Slaying

TAMPA—(UPI)—A grocery store owner was held on an open charge Saturday in connection with a tavern shooting which killed the operator and wounded his wife.

August J. Anderson, 55, was held in connection with the shooting of Harold Scott, 54, and his wife, Gladys, 52. Scott was killed instantly, but Mrs. Scott was in fair condition with a bullet wound in the hip.

Detectives said Anderson admitted killing Scott because the bar operator owed him money.

The police report quoted Anderson as saying he entered the tavern with the intention of killing Scott.

Officers said Anderson told them that Scott owed him $6,400 and had "messed him up financially."

Anderson made no attempt to flee and surrendered peacefully.

Murder Car

Arrows point to bloodstains, indicating the back-seat of her automobile may have been the scene of the slaying of Mrs. Mary Meslener, Miami airlines employe, whose body was found near a Miami canal Feb. 25. The woman's car, which she had driven to work, was found on a Tampa parking lot Friday.

Dismissal 'Personal,' State Told

TALLAHASSEE — (UPI) — A Taylor County game warden, fired for using state gasoline in his personal car, asked for his job back Saturday.

Charles J. Hill claimed at a hearing before the State Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission that his dismissal resulted from "personal animosity" on the part of a superior officer.

The commission took the appeal under advisement. It also heard, but took no immediate action on the appeal for reinstatement of Mrs. Mildred Roberts, dismissed as secretary to regional game manager Ed Timmons at Lakeland on charges of insubordination.

At a four-hour hearing, Hill testified that Virgil Williams, area supervisor in a four-county section embracing Taylor, "has been riding my back" ever since he took the state job 17 months ago.

Williams made the complaint that led to Hill's dismissal Feb. 6.

But Regional Manager Charles Clymore at Perry, who recommended that Hill be fired, testified it had nothing to do with any personal ill will between Hill and Williams.

Clymore said he investigated and found on his own that Hill had been charging the state for gasoline pumped into his personal car.

Hill admitted he charged gasoline to the state for his personal car "two or three times," but said it was because his state jeep was broken down and he had to use his own car on state business.

Clymore said Hill was never authorized to use his personal car for law enforcement, and had not asked permission to do so.

Clymore also testified, in answer to questions from Hill's attorney, "I considered Hill a poor officer."

But a number of Taylor County citizens testified that Hill was largely responsible for ridding the county of much fire-hunting and other illegal game activities.

State Committee To Plan Program

TALLAHASSEE — (UPI) — North Florida Democrats kicked up their heels Saturday at a proposal to take selection of delegates to national party conventions out of the hands of the people.

But the party faithfuls voted overwhelmingly in favor of a motion recommending primary elections be switched from September back to May.

The vote on a motion to propose legislation to eliminate the president preference primary and place selection of delegates in the hands of a convention of county and state committeemen failed by an overwhelming chorus of "Nayes."

The vote came at an area hearing before the party's legislative committee, seeking grass roots views on a program to present to the 1959 Legislature.

The hearing ended a seies ida area leaders also caucaused with committee members to discuss other party matters.

Party Chairman James Milligan of Orlando, said the committee might be able to come up with a definite legislative program today. The program is expected to include sweeping changes in election laws.

The proposal to do away with the presidential preference primary generated heated opposition.

"We have too much centralization now," Helen Barr of Duval County said. "I'll never vote for anything that takes the vote away from the people."

The motion was offered by L. E. Merriam of Bay County, who said its purpose was to "set up a chain of command that will put ne life in the Democratic party."

Others said it would strengthen the party at the local level by giving county committees "more power and responsibility."

Merriam said Florida's delegates to the national convention had no "bargaining power" because they were pledged to a candidate when they got there.

Merriam proposed another amendment which would have recommended that county committees be permitted to elect members to the state committee. This also failed, with the opposition contending again the vote should be left in the hands of the people.

Milligan pointed out the motions would not be "binding" on the legislative committee, and would only be used as an aid in forming a program. "We want to hear from everybody," he said.

Democrats in similar hearings in other parts of the state were almost unanimously behind elimination of the preferential primary and shifting primary elections to May.

U.S. Court May Set Equal Area

TALLAHASSEE —(AP)— The Florida Legislature and Gov. LeRoy Collins were put on official notice Saturday the federal courts might step in to reapportion legislative districts if Legislatures don't iron out inequalities.

Attorney General Richard W. Ervin revised his biennial report to insert a recent ruling by a federal court panel in Minnesota, criticizing that state's legislative districting setup, and indicating it might reapportion if the current Legislature doesn't.

The attorney general is required by law to advise the governor and Legislature of court rulings which might have bearing on Florida laws, or activities.

The development came as the Florida Legislature prepared to grapple again with the reapportionment problem it has faced since 1955.

Ervin said he was advising the Legislature of the ruling as his official duty. He said he knew of no move to file such a suit in Florida.

He said no decision had yet been made whether a federal court has jurisdiction, but the courts retained jurisdiction, pending the end of current session.

The court said that, following adjournment, parties to the action could, within 60 days, petition the court for such action as they deemed appropriate.

A group of Minnesota citizens filed a federal court suit against state officials, asking the 1913 Minnesota reapportionment act be held invalid on grounds of "gross inequality" in population of the legislative districts.

They contended this deprived them of their rights under the 14th amendment (equal rights) to the Federal Constitution.

In its opinion the federal court said, from all evidence, there was substantial inequality. But it said no attempt should be made to decide the issues until after the Legislature had a chance to deal with the problem.

The Minnesota Legislature is due to adjourn at the end of this month.

Home Rule Has Foes in Plant City

PLANT CITY — (UPI) — Mayor Otis M. Andrews said Saturday he would lead "100 people, or half the town if necessary" to Tallahassee to block a proposed home rule bill for Hillsborough County.

Andrews said he was not against home rule, but only some provisions of the bill proposed by the Hillsborough legislative delegation.

As the leader of the East Hillsborough faction opposing the measure, Andrews said his main objection was to a provision under which the county commissioners could redraw the charter of a city.

The new charter would then be put to a vote of the whole county.

"This would mark an end to true representative government in Hillsborough County," he charged.

Andrews said the legislative delegation has refused to budge on the controversial proposal.

Volunteers Needed by Tuesday

Want To Teach Water Safety?

By AL FINKELSTEIN
Herald Staff Writer

The switchboard at Dade's Red Cross headquarters Saturday morning was "almost jammed" by callers volunteering to enroll in the newly-announced water safety instruction program.

Red Cross Safety Service Director Russell K. Townsend said he had 25 names "almost a few hours" after he put out a call through The Herald for 100 volunteer instructaor-trainees to join the countywide stop-drownings crash program.

The two-part program, offering certified courses in Senior Lifesaving and Water Safety Instruction, begins Tuesday at Shenandoah Park Pool, 1805 SW 22nd Ave., and West End Pool, 250 SW 60th Ave.

The Shenandoah Senior Lifesaving course will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday through April 23. The West End courses are scheduled from 9 to 11 a.m., Tuesdays and Fridays. Swimmers over 16 are eligible to enroll.

Water Safety Instruction classes — the advanced course — will follow at the Shenandoah pool on the same days and time schedules from April 28 to May 28 and will be open to Senior lifesavers over 18.

Senior lifesaving courses will also be offered at:

AN APPROVED private pool, 6721 SW 71st Ct., from 1 to 3 p.m., Saturday only, starting April 11.

SANS SOUCI HOTEL, 3101 Collins Ave., Miami Beach, from 5 to 7 p.m., daily beginning April 13.

The instruction program is being set up by the Red Cross and the Miami Recreation Department primarily to teach pre-school and school-aged youngsters how to handle themselves in water.

A rash of recent child drownings in canals, rock pits and pools sparked the water-safety drive.

Would You Help Save a Child's Life?

I will be on hand Tuesday night (with my bathing suit) to start the save-a-life course for swimming instructors, 7 p.m., Shenandoah Pool, 1805 S.W. 22nd Ave., and three other locations as indicated in story.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."

'Dry' Oklahoma Now Almost Bone Dry

A new kind of drought has hit Oklahoma as officials press a crackdown on bootlegging in the constitutionally-dry state.

Although prohibition has been in force since 1907, it has never been too difficult to get whisky in the state. But with the state's sixth vote on repeal coming up Tuesday, Gov. J. Howard Edmondson is putting pressure on police officials to enforce the laws.

Packages of Whisky Seized in New Crackdown

. . . Oklahomans will vote again Tuesday on repeal

OKLAHOMA CITY —(AP)— "I ain't no criminal," says Old Joe, an Oklahoma City bootlegger. But he is.

Thirty times a day he breaks the law in this constitutionally dry state.

Old Joe operates a walk-in whisky store in a rundown area of the city. The windows are painted. A couple of peekholes let in light. There are no signs or liquor displays.

When Old Joe makes a sale, he trudges to the rear of the ramshackle building to the secret whisky caches.

Two months ago Old Joe would have sold a bottle of bourbon to almost anyone. But now he only sells to people he knows. If a stranger enters his establishment and asks for a bottle, he becomes highly indignant.

The heat's on. And Old Joe knows that officers who virtually gave him a free rein for years may swoop down on him at any moment.

"It keeps me pretty nervous," he admits.

Like hundreds of other bootleggers and thousands of whisky-drinkers in Oklahoma, Old Joe is agonizing over a statewide stop-and-go drive on liquor.

State residents vote Tuesday on the repeal of prohibition, and this time there won't be any staggering to the polls.

A crackdown on illegal liquor was started at the same time that a repeal proposal was dropped into the legislative hoppers. Both were triggered by a red-haired, former Tulsa County prosecutor soon after he took office as governor Jan. 12.

"I think Oklahomans should be given a clearcut choice between repeal and prohibition," says Gov. J. Howard Edmondson. "They have never had this before."

Edmondson turned the highway patrol and state crime bureau loose on illicit liquor peddlers, and persuaded local officers to join the crusade.

Border to border blockades were thrown up by the patrol to slow down the importing of whisky. State agents began raiding both public and private clubs, hotels were forced to stop serving booze to convention groups and bootleggers were stalked relentlessly.

The crackdown has been amazingly successful. Veteran officials say Oklahoma is drier than it has ever been in 51 years of prohibition.

Many bootleggers have quit business. Private clubs have closed their bars, hotels are moaning over a sharp decrease in guests, and it's hard for anyone to find a drink of hard liquor.

Leading the liquor chase is 34-year-old Joe Cannon, longtime friend of the governor and former Muskogee County attorney.

Cannon says surprisingly both wets and drys are endorsing the drastic action. The drys want to keep Oklahoma sober and the wets believe it will help the prohibition cause.

"We're just enforcing the laws," he said, "and we'll keep on enforcing them as long as they are on the books.

"Prohibition laws have never been enforced before. The drys had their laws and the wets had their whisky."

While the general reaction of the public to the crackdown has been favorable, Cannon admits he has angered many persons. The legislature has jumped him periodically, and a Senate committee investigated his use of patrol troopers in liquor raids.

Sen. Everett Collins of Sapulpa declared the patrol should stick to traffic problems on state highways, and Rep. J. D. McCarty of Oklahoma City protested that the crime bureau has been turned "into a bunch of whisky sniffers."

Many Oklahomans are nostalgic for "the good old days" when prohibition was often interpreted to mean: "Keep your bottle out of sight."

A statehouse figure comments sadly: "I haven't had a drink in weeks. This repeal sure is interfering with my drinking."

But Cannon frankly says even his battalion of state officers can't shut off the flow of liquor. He says that given the time and money he could drive most of the whisky-sellers to bankruptcy. And some bootleggers will attest to this.

"I'd quit tomorrow if I could make a living doing something else," one says.

If you don't know your bootlegger personally, it takes a good reference to make a purchase in Oklahoma City. The bootlegger checks you out by telephone before deciding whether to do business.

"You just can't be too careful these days," says a bootlegger who met his client in the darkness behind a gasoline station after a series of telephone calls.

Hundreds of thousands of bottles have been confiscated by the widespread raids. A recent haul at Oklahoma City netted 100 cases and officers got even more than that in five raids at Lawton.

The added peril for bootleggers has brought a sharp boost in prices. Bourbon which sold at $5 a fifth a few months ago now is going at up to $9. Other liquors are up as much.

The crackdown is considered a factor in setting the repeal election for Tuesday. It took all the pressure Edmondson could bring to bear to push a repeal resolution through the legislature, and this helped ignite a public demand for action.

Edmondson's plan calls for private package stores only, possibly on a county option basis. Oklahomans will vote separately on county option at the repeal election and if both pass the counties individually will decide May 12 on whether to be wet or dry.

Wets and drys marshalled their forces quickly for the campaign, and both are holding statewide rallies. Both are predicting victory.

This will be the sixth time since statehood that Oklahoma has voted on repeal. All previous efforts to end prohibition have failed, the last going down by 56,000 votes in 1949.

These perodic failures caused the late Will Rogers to remark once that "Oklahoma will be dry as long as the voters can stagger to the polls."

But Rogers wasn't taking into account the regime of J. Howard Edmondson. The 33-year-old governor says he won't try to sway voters — but he doesn't want any staggering.

Airport Turnstile Takes Your Money
. . . F. R. McDonald with Isabel, three, and Jimmy, five, enter observation deck

It Costs a Dime To Wave Goodby

By JAMES BUCHANAN
Herald Staff Writer

The Port Authority has discovered a gold mine in the sky — built on your desire to wave hello or goodby to friends at the International Airport.

It costs a dime today to do what came naturally at the old 36th St. terminal.

No more leaning over a fence to watch Grandma or Uncle Joe get on or off an airplane.

Today you watch from a vantage point atop one of the concourse roofs with a good view, where you're out of the way of airport activity.

To get there each visitor feeds a dime into a turnstile guarding the entrance to the concourse roof or observation deck.

So far, 20,921 dimes have gone in. From one month's use of one turnstile and a week's use of two others the airport has netted $2,092.10.

"It's a legitimate revenue producer," a Port Authority spokesman said Saturday. "The money is needed to finance the observation decks for which there was no federal money available."

Cost for the fenced-in areas atop four concourses was approximately $286,000, according to Port Authority figures.

"The cost is being paid for by the people who use them," the spokesman said. "It's being done in New York, Washington and other cities."

Without the decks, officials point out, "people would be going directly to the planes with their relatives, no matter how many signs we put up. That's not only dangerous, it impedes operations."

Three of the observation levels now are in operation. A fourth, atop one of the two Eastern Air Line concourses, will go into service when EAL occupies its new terminal quarters around the first of next month.

LONDON — (AP) — George Glynshaw, a whelk seller, was fined 10 shillings ($1.40) for crying out loud.

Catches Sword Dancer at Wire

Derby to Easy Spur, But It Wasn't Easy

By RUSS HARRIS
Herald Turf Writer

Spring Hill Farm's Easy Spur remains undefeated at Gulfstream Park and heads toward Louisville with enhanced credentials for the Run for the Roses May 2.

The bay gelding wore down Brookmeade Stable's Sword Dancer in the stretch Saturday to give Bill Hartack his third straight Florida Derby victory before 24,246 fans at the Hallandale oval.

Easy Spur scored by three parts of a length over Sword Dancer. The race was marred by the last-place finish of Bayyard Sharp's Troilus. Chris Rogers pulled Troilus up shortly after passing the finish line and after dismounting said:

"When I asked him for speed, he did not respond and I thought he was going a little dinky, although probably we can't tell until we take the bandages off."

Troilus had "rapped" his left foreleg in his stall Friday morning but had responded to treatment and was pronounced sound and ready to run by a veterinarian after galloping Saturday morning.

Easy Spur paid $3.80, $2.90 and $2.80 in scoring his fifth straight triumph at Gulfstream. Sword Dancer refunded $4 and $3.70 and Master Palynch was $8.70 to show.

The winner's time for the mile and eighth was 1:47.1 — only two fifths of a second off Gen. Duke's track record.

Jimmy Donn's $116,400 "run for the orchids" had been billed as a three-horse race but it turned out to be a duel between Easy Spur and Sword Dancer with the other seven starters far up the track.

As expected, Bobby Stevenson put Master Palynch in the lead while Sammy Boulmetis held Sword Dancer off the pace. Behind them came The Chosen One, Rare Rice, Easy Spur and Troilus with Easy Spur much closer to the pace than usual. Rico Tesio, Revolutionist and McLellan brought up the rear.

At the far turn Boulmetis made his bid with Sword Dancer, passing Master Palynch with a rush. But Hartack had moved Easy Spur into third position down the back stretch and he went after Boulmetis.

Sword Dancer opened up a three length lead and saved ground on the rail turning for home while Hartack came powerfully in the middle of the track with Easy Spur.

At the eighth pole, Sword Dancer still was two lengths in front but Easy Spur was wearing him down despite Boulmetis' desperate urging.

Bill Hartack said after the race, "I'm sure glad he won. I was worried about overtaking that horse in front when we started the drive from the three eighths pole but he's game and he made it."

Boulmetis said, "We had no excuse. We just got beat in a tough one."

Easy Spur's triumph netted Jim Norris of Spring Hill Farm $75,300.

LOIS COOK sent Close Harmoney to the lead in the opening race and lasted to score by a nose in a furious stretch drive over Son O'Doge. The winner paid $21.20 after getting the six and one half furlongs in 1:18.

Larry Gilligan came from well off the pace with Getahead and ran down the front-running Nizami Gal to take the second heat and refund $47.60. Getahead required 1:11.2 for the six furlongs.

Those in the crowd who were 51 years of age or found some other reason to bet the 5-1 combination collected a $664.20 daily double.

* * *

HARTACK rode only one horse before the Derby. That was the 7-1 Dusty Tiger in the third.

The Tiger overhauled Killdee and Nectar on the stretch turn and appeared a good thing momentarily but the favored Cozy Ada had too much punch for him in the drive, winning by two and a half lengths.

Cozy Ada ran the six and a half furlongs in 1:17.3 under Bill Harmatz and returned $7.

Crowd Presses In for Better View of Bangtails on Derby Day
. . . Close Harmony nips Son O' Doge in photo finish as rest of field lags in first race

The Derby Scene

People, People, People

By MEL DERRICK
Herald Sports Writer

This was the way it was (sort of, anyway) at Gulfstream Park Saturday as an estimated 24,000 milled around Jimmy Donn's well-groomed track for the eighth running of the Florida Derby.

Sunshine and water skiers . . . Happy music and mournful bettors . . . Orchids and tomatoes . . . horses andpeople.

And people.

"The only way to fight this crowd," sighed one of the nicer tomatoes, a blond in a pink dress, "is just to go home and watch television."

Nobody did.

* * *

BANDS BEGAN blaring around Gulfstream at 10 a.m., a time when most horse players were rousing for coffee and a look at the form. The morning music-making, by Caesar La Monaca's orchestra and Wally Moran's Dixieland band — and later by U-Miami's Band of the Hour — drew approximately 8,000 early risers.

Over 3,000 were waiting outside when the Gulfstream gates opened at 9 a.m.

* * *

IN CONTRAST with Gulfstream's rain-wrinkled opening day, Saturday was straight from the Chamber of Commerce. The only clouds were in misguided bettors' eyes.

Thousands forsook the grandstands for a chance to improve the breed in the sunny paddock area. A large mutuels board there kept them well informed.

One young man forsook even that. He slipped his shirt off, his orange Florida Derby hat down, and stretched out on the grass. Pretty soon, a snore joined the band music.

* *

THAT TRADITIONAL symbol of well-being — a fur wrap — was non-existant. Folks who could afford them weren't.

Visitors included Walter Knebelcamp, the new president of Churchill Downs; Amory L. Haskell, president of Monmouth; Hialeah's Gene Mori and Tropical's Saul Silberman, and hopeful owners of the nine derby starters.

* * *

GULFSTREAM, striking to challenge the Kentucky Derby's "Run for the Roses" tradition pushed forward its "Run for the Orchids" motto in $1,000 fashion. That's what the horse-shaped orchid blanket presented to Saturday's winner cost.

It contained over 400 orchids.

* * *

PICTURE-TAKERS packed Memory Lane, a garden-like walk dedicated to famous horses in Gulfstream's past. They also got into the between-races water ski show presented by Dick Pope's Cypress Gardens crew.

While the horses paraded out for the fourth race, a male member of the show lined up six female members of the show and clicked away. The crowd applauded mightifully.

* * *

THE MUTUEL take for the track, as expected, was excellent. For the fans . . .

"There's nothing more disgusting," said one, stripping apart a handful of tickets, "than to see two horses fighting it out at the finish when you don't have either one."

Leonard's 215 Leading In Masters

BULLETIN

AUGUSTA, Ga. — (AP) — Defending Champion Arnold Palmer sank a 12-foot putt on the final green to tie Canada's Stan Leonard for the third round lead in the Masters Golf Tournament with a score of 212. The putt gave Palmer a 71.

Cary Middlecoff was still on the course, needing only a birdie on one of the final three holes to make it a three-way tie.

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Stan Leonard of Canada shot into the third round lead of the Masters Golf Tournament Saturday with a three-under-par 69 for 212. Defending Champion Arnold Palmer, the halfway pacesetter, needed two birdies on the last five holes to overtake him.

Leonard had a three-stroke advantage over Charlie Coe of Oklahoma City, the national amateur champion, who fashioned the tournament's hottest round, a five-under 67, for 125.

Billy Maxwell of Odessa, Tex., and Amateur Billy Joe Patton followed at 216. Then came Ed (Porky) Oliver and Bo Wininger at 217. A trio were at 218—Julius Boros, Art Wall, Jr., and veteran amateur Chuck Kocsis of Royal Oak, Mich.

Six were tied at 219. They were Sam Snead, Don January, Gene Littler Chandler Harper, National Open Champion Tommy Bolt and South Africa's Gary Player.

Coe's meticulous round was the best of the tourney so far and placed him one under par for the three trips over the massive 6,980 yard Augusta National layout where par is 36-36-72. He closed out his torrid pace with 10-foot birdie putt.

Snead, who played the third round in a head-to-head duel with Ben Hogan, shot a 72 for a total of 219.

Snead, still stirring the huge galleries with a display of scrambling skill, shot a round of even par 36-36 golf. Hogan uncertain of the putting greens and dispirited in appearance, had 41-35—76 for 223.

They had started the day six strokes behind Arnold Palmer, the defending champion and 36-hole leader and and been assigned to an early starting time to help scatter the huge crowd. They succeeded in that respect, but they didn't play the kind of golf expected from Snead and Hogan.

Snead had a struggle to stay even with par and Hogan, five over on the front nine, never recovered.

When they reached the finish, Palmer and Canada's Stan Leonard, one-two in the 36-hole standings, were just starting the second nine, fighting for the lead and to stave off the bids of a half dozen more serious challengers.

Palmer, the muscular young Pennsylvanian who is bidding to become the first golfer ever to win the Masters two years in succession, reached the turn in par 36. At that stage he had lost half the two-stroke advantage he held over Leonard at the start of the day. Leonard was out in 35. Coe was seven strokes back Saturday morning.

The crowd that swarmed over Augusta National this bright, sunny day was almost as much the story as the golf played. The most reliable estimates put the number of spectators as somewhere between 40,000 and 50,000 — probably the largest American golf gallery ever.

At one time at least 10,000 were ringed around the second fairway and green watching Snead and Hogan. They scattered later when the low scorers started out, but the veterans still drew a huge, hopeful gallery which erupted in applause when Hogan finally got a couple of birdies on the back nine.

Coe, with 148 for the first 36 holes, wasn't rated as a contender, but Saturday's brilliant 35-32—67 put him in a position where he easily could become one.

The lean Oklahoman, who won his second National Amateur title last September, had no real trouble Saturday. He had one birdie going out, on the long uphill eighth hole, then caught fire rounding the bend on the back nine.

CASEY'S BONNET: Casey Stengel, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, sits in a Sarasota dugout wearing a new spring creation—a straw hat decked out with a rah-rah pennant, crossed bats and a small figure of a baseball player swinging a bat on its brim. Stengel showed up at the park Saturday in his bonnet and said it was given him when the team was playing in Miami last week.

Amick Dies in 170 MPH Crash At Daytona; Rathmann Wins

By Herald Wire Services

DAYTONA BEACH — George Amick, 34, of Rhinelander, Wis., was killed Saturday in a two-car crackup on the final lap of the fastest automobile race ever run.

Jim Rathmann of Miami had just crossed the finish line of the USAC 100-mile championship race at the new Daytona International Speedway with a fantastic 170.26 miles-an-hour average when Amick, running third, crashed into the car of Bill Cheesbourg, Tucson.

Amick, a close second last year in his first Indianapolis 500 mile race, was killed instantly as his car flipped end over end at more than 170 miles an hour — a half lap from race's end.

Cheesbourg's car remained upright and skidded into the infield. He was taken to the track hospital but apparently was not seriously hurt.

Dr. A. A. Monaco, physician in charge of the Daytona International speedway, said Amick died of a crushed left chest, damage to the heart, and multiple fractures to the entire spinal column.

Amick, had recently set a world record of 176.887 miles per hour over the new asphalt track and was a favorite in Saturday's featured race.

Witnesses said he and Cheesborough were fighting it out for third place when they rounded the west turn and came down the straightaway on the far side of the oval. Before anyone could realize what had happened, the two powerful cars went out of control.

Amick's car began rolling over and over, smashing up the front end of the vehicle and causing heavy damage to the rest of the body.

Although he was a comparative newcomer to speedway racing, Amick had been racing other type cars for 13 years.

The little 5-5, 144-pounder won his first race at Portland, Ore., in 1946. And he passed his driver's test at Indianapolis 11 years later.

Rathmann was winner of the Monza, Italy 500-mile race last year in the previous world record closed course performance at 166.72 miles an hour. He led all but four laps of Saturday's first race for Indianapolis-type cars over the two and one-half mile high-banked track.

Rodger Ward, racing veteran from Los Angeles, fought a tremendous battle with Rathmann in the early laps and led from the seventh through the tenth circuits.

Rathmann grabbed the lead again on the 11th lap and won going away. Ward was nearly a half mile behind when Rathmann took the checkered flag.

Bobby Christy, Grant's Pass, Ore., and Jim Rathmann's brother, Dick Rathman were the only other drivers who finished the full distance before the wreck caused officials to close the track.

Amick was awarded fifth place in death. He had traveled the farthest of the 16 cars which failed to finish the race.

Other positions awarded were Elmer George, Indianapolis, 6th; Johnny Thomson, Boyertown, Pa., 7th; Pat Flaherty, Chicago, 8th; Jim Packard, Indianapolis, 9th, and A. J. Foyt, Houston, Tex., 10th.

In Jail Cell

Saxton Tries To Hang Self

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — (AP) — Johnny Saxton, washed up as a prizefighter after holding the world welterweight championship twice, was ordered committed to a state hospital Saturday after he tried to hang himself in a jail cell.

The 28-year-old Negro boxer, who earned a quarter of a million dollars in the ring, landed in the police lockup early Saturday on a burglary charge.

Several hours later a patrolman found Saxton hanging in his cell, with his socks as a rope. He was cut down and taken to a hospital where doctors said there was no sign that asphyxiation had set in.

Saxton was returned to his cell and examined by two psychiatrists, Drs. Carl A. Surran and Frank B. Doggett. Dr. Doggett quoted Saxton as saying.

"If you keep me in this cell, I'll try to kill myself again."

The physicians said Saxton was depressed because he was not working and suffered from dementia praecox. The dictionary defines dementia praecox as a form of insanity "characterized by loss of interest in people and things and incoherence of thought and action."

The doctors recommended his commitment to a state hospital. Police signed the commitment papers.

Saxton was picked up in a five and ten cent store early Saturday morning where he hid after the store closed at 5 p.m. Friday. He told the psychiatrists he knew he would get caught and wished he had run so the police could have shot him down.

Chisox Pick Sarasota For Training Camp

TAMPA — (AP) — The Chicago White Sox Saturday announced plans to move their spring training baseball headquarters to Sarasota, effective in 1960.

A statement on the move from Tampa came from Charles A. Comiskey, vice president of the White Sox.

He said through Ed Short, the club's publicity director, that public apathy necessitated the move.

Comiskey said no contract had been signed with Sarasota officials but that an agreement had been reached on a five-year basis.

"We are not mad at anybody," Comiskey said. "If we could have drawn just a few more people, I don't think the move ever would have come about."

Palmer Playing 18 Holes Of Golf By The Time He Was 5 Years Old

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Few golfers had an earlier introduction to the game than Arnold Palmer, who led the Masters at the halfway mark with 141, three under par.

Palmer, defending champion, is the son of M F. (Deacon) Palmer, professional at the Latrobe, Pa. Country Club since 1921.

PALMER

"I was brought up on a golf course," Arnold explained. "My dad gave me a set of junior clubs when I was three years old and by the time I was five, I was playing 18 holes regularly."

This early training was helpful to Palmer, who became a pro in 1954. He started making the PGA tour a year later and has found it rewarding. Last year Arnold topped the money winners with $42,607.50.

Palmer, a frequent visitor to Miami where he enjoys playing golf with Jim MacLaughlin at the Miami Shores course, thinks the biggest improvement in his game is driving. He hits tremendous shots from the tee and Friday on most holes he was in front of Sammy Snead, who is noted as being a long hitter. Palmer uses only two wood clubs, a driver and No. 3 wood.

A fairly deliberate player, Palmer says that he must get set before hitting the ball. He said, "some rush too much, but I've always had to wait until I felt set before swinging."

Palmer went into this tournament, confident — but not boastful like Ken Venturi. Arnold is not superstitious enough to accept the theory that defending champions are jinxed in this tournament. No one has ever won it twice in succession.

Venturi, choice of the sports writers as tournament favorite, accepted their judgement by predicting he would win. Venturi failed to survive the halfway cut, which found golfers scoring over 149 re-cast in the role of spectators.

Sponsors Liberal With Dough

THEY HAD another beautiful day, blue skies and nippy temperatures for the round. The admission cost rose to five bucks, but this did not discourage the fans. The charge for the final round today will be $7.50.

The opening crowd was estimated at 15,000. It must have been 20,000 Friday and Saturday it looked like 25,000 spectators were swarming over the course. An equally large turnout is expected for the last round.

They do not give out figures on the Masters, but a man in the know estimated that the gate last year was around $385,000. Palmer collected $11,250 for his victory in 1958. The winner this year may get even more, the sponsors being liberal in dishing out the dough. Last year they doubled the purse money right down the line.

ALL HANDS were happy over Ed (Porky) Oliver firing a 69, three under par, Friday. Before he went to the practice area, Porky confided to Jock Hutchinson, "I'm going out there today and shoot a 68."

Everyone thought Porky was only kidding, but he came close. At the practice grounds Oliver inquired, "Where's my caddy?" The latter rushed up and informed Porky that he was due on the tee. Oliver had confused his starting time.

Porky shanked his only practice shot and hurried to the tee. A couple of years back, while watching the National Baseball Players Golf tournament at Miami Oliver saw this duffer in action. He volunteered, "You should lay off golf for 30 days and then quit for good." (I've often wished I'd followed that advice.)

15th Green Best for Fans

THE FANS started coming early Saturday and they did not tarry at the first tee. They scattered over the course, many favoring the 15th green as the most strategic point to see thrills.

From this hole you also can watch what is happening on the tricky par-three sixth and occasionally you can venture a few yards to the 13th, where birdie-hungry players take chances by trying to reach the creek encircled green of the par five hole in two.

Another favorite spot is the seventh hole, which is close to the 17th green. About half of the fans are satisfied to wait at the 18th, where they've witnessed some spectacular finishes.

Shoemaker, Isendu Win At Jamaica

NEW YORK —(AP)— Willie Shoemaker made it five winners out of six mounts when he booted home Isendu ($5.50), in the $25,000-added Paumonok Handicap Saturday before a crowd of 37,738 at Jamaica Race Track.

Kentucky Pride finished second. Viscount was third in the six-furlong sprint.

Isendu, owned by the Brookfield Farms, had beaten Calumet Farm's Kentucky Pride March 25 at Jamaica on opening day, and the two speedsters each carried 123 pounds this time.

Dave Erb rode Kentucky Pride. Isendu won by a half length, and was timed in 1:10 4-5 on a fast track.

The Texas-born Shoemaker started the afternoon by winning the daily double, which paid $33.20. Manuel Ycaza rode winners of the next two races.

Some Drop In 3 Years

ST. LOUIS —(AP)— What a difference three years make.

George Wade won the 1956 American Bowling Congress singles championship at Rochester, N.Y., with a whopping 744 series, the 14th highest in the history of the tournament.

Friday the Steubenville, O., southpaw eked out a feeble 171-162-164 — 497 series in the ABC singles, a difference of nearly 250 pins from the score that won him acclaim thirty-six months ago.

Wade's other outings in the current edition of the ABC were slightly more respectable — 566 in the team event and 538 in the doubles.

'Shug' Admits '59 Plainsmen Likely to Roll

By JIMMY BURNS
Herald Sports Editor

AUGUSTA, Ga.—You meet leaders in other sports at the Masters Golf Tournament—like Ralph (Shug) Jordan, Auburn football coach, who candidly admitted his Plainsmen should be good again next fall.

Jordan, who spoke to Auburn Alumni here Friday night, says the Plainsmen have tremendous pride, which should inspire them in trying to match their past season, marred only by the 7-7 tie with Georgia Tech.

The Plainsmen invade Miami Oct. 23 for a game with Coach Andy Gustafson's Hurricanes and Jordan figures it will be a tough test.

"Gustafson will have an improved team," Jordan allowed. "I'm confident his new assistants will be of help and the University of Miami doesn't figure to have another bad season like 1958."

Last year when Jordan spoke here, his arch rival, Bear Bryant of Alabama, showed up at the Masters. The theory was Bear was checking on Jordan, who no doubt tried to line up some high school football players of the area. "I wouldn't be surprised if Bear scouts me again," said Jordan. "Bryant has done a good job of bringing Alabama back. Opponents again have respect for the Crimson tide, so it won't be able to sneak up on its foes."

Jordan is sympathetic to Coach Gustafson, who sends his Hurricanes against LSU at Baton Rouge in October.

"Coach Paul Dietzel has been saying he'll have another fine team," Jordan mused. "I saw his star halfback, Billy Cannon, in a track meet this spring and after one stride, he was going full speed. "I'm just happy we don't play the Tigers."

Auburn's spring practice, recently concluded, was highly satisfactory, Jordan conceded. He lost six regulars from his starting team. They were ends Jerry Wilson and Mike Simmons; Tackle Cleve Wester, Guard Frank Laruss; Quarterback Lloyd Nix and Left Halfback Tommy Lorino.

"I hope we'll be as good as we were last year," said Jordan. "Pride, as I mentioned, will play an important role. Our biggest concern is depth, and kicking is our number one weakness. I mean kicking in every phase — punting, extra points and kickoffs."

A step towards another great line is Jackie Burkett, who last year was chosen by the Football Coaches Association as All-America center. Burkett, a native of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., won numerous honors. Burkett calls defensive signals for the Plainsmen and will be a tough man for the Hurricanes to handle.

FSU to Have 'Toughest' Spring Drills

TALLAHASSEE —(AP)— Head Coach Perry Moss starts building his first football team at Florida State University with the opening of spring practice Tuesday.

"This probably will be the toughest spring practice our players have known at Florida State," Moss said.

Moss will greet 77 prospects, including 26 lettermen. He plans to install a ball-control type offense from the T formation.

Three of the lettermen will begin spring drills at new positions. Fred Pickard, 160, fullback last year under Coach Tom Nugent, and Jack Espenship, 190, right halfback last season, will switch positions. Bill Brown will move from tackle to center.

Schedule calls for four sessions a week and five intrasquad games, with the main one, the Garnet and Gold game, scheduled for May 9.

Marlins Get McDermott, Leo Burke

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

The Miami Marlins made their first major acquisitions of the spring Saturday when they added Outfielder Leo Burke, Pitchers Mickey McDermott and John Anderson and Catcher Steve Korcheck to their roster.

Joe Ryan, Marlin general manager, completed the four separate deals after days of negotiations.

Burke, who is expected to fill Miami's big need for a right-handed power hitter, comes to the Marlins on option from the Baltimore Orioles.

Left-hander McDermott, the ex-major leaguer who posted a 1.86 earned run average in 92 innings with Miami a year ago, was purchased from the Detroit Tigers.

Anderson, a right-handed knuckleballer who spent part of last season with the Marlins, was sold to Miami by the Philadelphia Phillies.

And Korcheck, former football star at George Washington University, comes on option from the Washington Senators.

"We feel we've filled several important holes," said Ryan, "but we're not finished yet. There are still more deals in the works and we plan to field the best team we've ever had on opening night (April 14)."

The 24-year-old Burke, an ex-VPI halfback, has been tabbed by most observers as a future Oriole star. He had a .307 season at Knoxville in the South Atlantic League and was so outstanding in early spring drills that Paul Richards thought of keeping him on the Orioles' roster.

Burke, who led the Sally League in total bases, has a good throwing arm and possesses speed and power. He can play third base as well as the outfield.

The feats of McDermott are well known to Miami fans. After 10 years in the majors, he came to the Marlins last summer and pitched consistently good baseball.

McDermott, a Miamian, asked Ryan to do everything he could to acquire him when he learned the Tigers did not intend to recall him this spring. Ryan conferred with Rick Ferrell, Detroit general manager, and the deal was completed.

Sleeper of the four newcomers could be Anderson. The 26-year-old won only four of nine decisions here last year, but three of his losses were by one run and he had a 3.23 earned run average.

Korcheck spent the last two seasons in the service. He hit .283 at Chattanooga (Southern Association) in 1955.

Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "Lightning."

Sometimes he reminisces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide.

Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

Legislators Agreed: No New Taxes . . 1G
Courts May Force Reapportionment 1B

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.

His Views
Will Affect
YOU

Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

LeRoy Collins
. . . spells out program

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a se-

Here are highlights of what Gov. Collins will be seeking from the Florida Legislature which convenes Tuesday:

REAPPORTIONMENT — ". . . carry on the battle for fair apportionment . . ."

ECONOMIES — "I will oppose indiscriminate reductions which will damage our state's progress."

Ford Tests Gas Turbine Auto Engine

DETROIT —(AP)— Ford Motor Co.'s research staff reported Saturday development of a 300-horsepower supercharged gas turbine engine described as superior to conventional gasoline engines under most operating conditions.

It is called "the 704" and is to be tested in vehicles before the end of this year. Its weight is one-fourth that of a truck diesel engine of the same horsepower and it has the fuel economy of a diesel.

B. T. Howes, associate director of engineering research said, "the Ford 704 represents an important break-through in gas turbine design technology."

Experimental gas turbines for trucks and passenger cars so far have used one stage of air compression but the Ford 704 has in addition a supercharging stage, the company said.

It said this enables the engine to deliver more horsepower from a smaller size. The 704 has dual burners instead of one combustion chamber such as used in early designs.

Howes said "the 704 would fit easily into the engine compartment of a 1959 Ford with room to spare. It can use unleaded gasoline, kerosene, jet engine fuel or light diesel fuel and requires no warm-up."

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow: 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Oops, Mamie Has Mortar Board Trouble at Gettysburg College

Mutual Security Is Key

Red 'Ceiling' Rejected 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Viet Nam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges, U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defendin America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By AL FINKELSTEIN
Herald Staff Writer

Greater Miami hotel and motel operators Saturday checked their calendars suspiciously.

Here it was April — and their sun-kissed winter tourist "season" was still on.

From downtown Miami to South Beach to Bal Harbor, hotelmen joyfully reported their customers this year were staying later than they had in several years.

Reservations at the $25-a-day hotels were non-existent; mid-Beach hotels were "doing nicely," and even the older South Beach quarters were pleased at the late stay of their regular elderly tenants.

North-bound air traffic was booked solid —yet tourists were still coming down at a fairly steady rate.

"They seem to be leaving later and later every year," said R. T. Jeffries, assistant general passenger agent of the Florida East Coast Railway.

Greyhound Bus Lines were running seven capacity-filled expresses daily to New York — and still returning with "good loads."

A Dupont Plaza spokesman said occupancy was dropping — "but just slowly."

At the small Calvert Hotel, 150 Ocean Dr., Miami Beach, owner Mrs. Frances Mitnick said "we are dropping off . . . but only since the first of the month."

Further up the Beach at the Carillon Hotel, 6801 Collins Ave., Sales Director Dan Shaw said business was in "very good shape."

And at the 650-room Americana Hotel in Bal Harbor, a spokesman said: "Reservations — what are they, sir?"

Scratch One Cold Front

You can stop worrying about that new cold front and look for sunny, warm weather over just about all of Florida today, forecasters advised Saturday.

Francis Drybala of the Miami Weather Bureau said the cold air mass sweeping eastward from Texas on Friday and threatening a rainy weekend dissipated when it got to Florida.

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

March Jobless Drop Of 300,000 Forecast

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Government economists predicted Saturday a report next week will show that unemployment in March declined by 300,000 or more.

They based their forecast on a recent sharp drop in the number of workers drawing jobless benefits and a pickup in steel industry hiring.

Mid-February unemployment was estimated at 4,749,000 by the Labor and Commerce Departments. They plan to report the March jobless figure Tuesday, a day before the AFL-CIO holds a mass conference on unemployment here.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell apparently will use the new data in his appearance before the labor rally to bolster his claim that unemployment will continue to decline in the months ahead.

AFL-CIO economists contend that a high rate of joblessness seems inevitable because improved productivity makes it possible for fewer workers to turn out more goods.

The current AFL-CIO News declared the unemployment situation was a "crisis" and deplored the administration's "hesitancy to stimulate economic growth."

Ah, Spring! Ah, Sunny's 400 Bucks

By SUNNY FORTUNE
Herald Puzzle Editor

Spring is here, buds are blooming, business is booming, the fish are biting and Sunny Fortune is wearing a $400 smile.

SUNNY

That's what the winner of this week's prize will receive.

So don't let spring fever distract you from giving it a whirl.

That's the word from Sunny Fortune. Last week, unfortunately, no one had the word — or words—to take home the long green.

Remember, as a long-forgotten Miami poet once said:

Keep trying your luck
And you'll make a buck

That may not be very good poetry. But if you win $400 it will be music to your ears.

The sad truth is nobody came within a country mile of the correct solution last week.

Most frequently missed words were job for joy (seems nobody wanted to take the happy side of the question); power for poser; pride for prude and wonder for fonder.

It was no wonder we had no winners.

lective basis to hold governmental cost to the minimum necessary to do an adequate job for the people, but I will oppose indiscriminate reductions which will damage our state's progress.

I will favor effective recognition of the trend in Florida to urbanization and the needs of our people in the heavily populated areas.

I shal fight to continue progress we have made for the construction of highways based upon need, not political favoritism and greed.

In the broad area of governmental reorganization, I shall favor reforms such as the long-overdue program of central purchasing for all departments and institutions.

These are the areas, in my opinion, where the biggest fight for the people will come.

Progress we make will be important for our own time, but the greatest challenge is that, for better or worse, we are laying foundations for the future.

Air-Fired Missile In Works

AF to Order Output Soon

WASHINGTON —(UPI)— The Air Force soon will order production of a new ballistic missile to be launched from bombers. It also is weighing the possibility of doubling orders for Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Informed sources who disclosed this Saturday said the Air Force was ready to name one of about two dozen competing contractors to produce the Air-Launched Ballistic Missile.

The missile, on which experiments have been under way for months at Cape Canaveral, Fla., is expected to have a 1,000-mile range. Its development would extend the usefulness of the Strategic Air Command's big bomber fleet. The first bombers may receive the missiles in about 18 months.

Armed with them, bombers will be able to destroy targets without coming near enemy defenses, in much the same way as Polaris missile submarines can operate at sea.

Whether the Air Force doubles its arsenal of Atlas Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles depends on what Congress does about increasing missiles appropriations.

The House Appropriations Committee and defense leaders have had many secret conferences on the cost of providing greater numbers of the Atlas, protected in underground sites, to increase this country's deterrent to war.

The Air Force has now ordered nine squadrons of Atlas missiles. The squadrons, with 650 to 700 men each, will be stationed at nine bases and will have a total of 80 missile launchers. The first squadron will have three launchers, the next three squadrons will have nine launchers each, and the last five will have 10 each, according to well-informed authorities.

This Horsin' Around Is 'Reined' Out

MADERA, Calif. —(AP)— The general's advice made good horse sense.

Philip Peatman, 11, wrote the "Chief of Cavalry" that his 19-year-old horse, Mr. Dillon, galloped back to the corral at the wrong time.

Brig. Gen. Frank S. Henry, a former cavalry officer now in the Pentagon, replied. He told Philip to rein Mr. Dillon into a circle any time he showed signs of hoofing back.

Philip tried it out.

"You know, it works," he exclaimed.

But General Henry's report that the modern army is horseless left Philip wiser but sadder.

"I thought," he lamented, "there was always a cavalry."

Tibet Revolt Splits Red Curtain--Nixon

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Vice President Richard Nixon said here Saturday that the revolt in Tibet has created a solid crack in the Communist Bamboo Curtain in Asia.

"The Communist Chinese action in Tibet has done irreparable harm to plans of Communist domination in Asia.

"It unmasked their true tactics toward India and the other neutral countries," he declared.

Nixon, who had just conferred with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles who is convalescing at Hobe Sound, made the comments while stopping to talk with Republican state chairmen from 12 southern states meeting here.

"We discussed Tibet, Berlin and general world conditions. Mr. Dulles is in good spirits and looks good."

Nixon said Berlin is still the most crucial spot in the Cold War and a summit meeting on the issue "is not a sure thing."

He said the responsibility of whether a summit meeting is held rests with Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

"The blockade incidents are not as important as what happens at the Western and Soviet foreign ministers' meeting set for May. Progress must be made then if we are to go to the summit."

He declined comment on the possibility of war if a summit meeting falls through, but made this remark on Khrushchev's deadlines: "The record speaks for itself. He made one deadline and has moved it back. But it's not wise to try to guess about Khrushchev's deadlines."

Nixon said the West would have to stay in Berlin until Soviet leaders make an argeement which will result in a "lasting settlement of the German problem."

On foreign aid, he said, "it will be needed as long as there's a Russian economic threat."

The vice president flew to Hobe Sound. After an hour's talk with Dulles, he returned by car to Miami where he is vacationing with his family.

He agreed to stop over for an "informal chat" with the state chairmen who were huddling at Galt Ocean Mile Hotel to plan strategy for the 1960 presidential campaign in the south.

The Republican state leaders voted to arrange a caucus of southern delegates on the platform and resolutions committees prior to the national GOP convention.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas, and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

stern patriarch, he teased. "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed, "Oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once only, to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cooler and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the south Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the East.

CAPE CANAVERAL — The tourist's car pulled up to the gate and settled to a stop.

"I'm sorry, you can't go through," said a guard.

"Isn't there any way we can see a missile?" asked the tourist. "We thought that as long as we were so close we might as well see one."

BROWN

Little scenes like this one are staged here every day because the "birds" of Cape Canaveral are famous and people want to see them.

Unfortunately, the "birds" are also secret so the Air Force can't let just anybody look at them . . . and, aside from that, it would never get its work done if the Cape were mobbed with tourists.

But the missiles are a big tourist puller.

"Ringside at Cape Canaveral" . . . "Best view of missile launchings," say some of the hotel and motel advertising signs.

Officially, the Air Force is taking no note of this tourist pulling, but unofficially some of its officers think the service is missing a bet.

They point out the service ought to start a museum of missilery and space flight—a place where the tourists could see what they want and where records of Cape Canaveral history could be enshrined.

The same officers point out the Air Force and other services already maintain a few museums and that the name Cape Canaveral is certain to be important in history because here man started reaching for the stars.

"This is the Kittyhawk of space flight," Roy Johnson, head of the advanced research projects agency, once said.

From this corner, the museum idea looks like a good one.

Maybe one of the local chambers of commerce ought to help the Air Force get one started . . . The chamber would benefit as much as the service if a museum became an attraction.

Ever Wonder . . .

Ever wondered what the mile of desolate land between the Cape lighthouse and the ocean is for?

It's been set aside for space freighter launchings of the future.

Space freighters? Well, if you're not sure what they are turn to The Herald's comic pages, they're already flying there.

Pay Hike Due

Look for some increase in building costs throughout Brevard.

Carpenters, ironworkers and millwrights probably will win wage increases in negotiations with the construction contractors of Cape Canaveral.

If they do, off-base contractors will have to meet the increases or their men will drift off.

The biggest increase will probably go to the carpenters. They get $2.85 per hour now, but they're annoyed because they've only come up 35 cents in six years. Other trades — which used to get less than carpenters — have gone by them in the six years.

Off-base contractors aren't the only ones interested in the Cape negotiations. The Army Corps of Engineers, which lets most Cape contracts, has been eyeing the negotiations closely so it'll know how to revise cost estimates on new contracts.

Two Spelling Bee Champions Repeat

By Herald Services

Champions repeated in DeSoto and Martin Counties this week in the annual Miami Herald spelling bees, and a new champion was named for St. Lucie County. County champions and runners-up will compete in the South Florida bee at Miami in May.

Imogene Purvis chalked up her third consecutive win in the DeSoto contest, held at Arcadia. And for the third consecutive year Marilyn Stone was runner-up.

At Stuart Arden Brannan took her second consecutive title for Martin County. Lynn Sirota was the runner-up.

Robert Welch won the St. Lucie County event at Fort Pierce, with Timothy Thomas finishing second.

Imogene, 13, is an eighth grade pupil at Arcadia West Elementary school and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Purvis of Arcadia. Marilyn, also 13 and a seventh grade pupil at West, was school champion, and Imogene was runner-up.

But these positions were reversed in the county finals. Six contestants took part in the DeSoto finals.

The two-time Martin winner is 13 and an seventh grade pupil. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brannan of Stuart. She spelled 60 words correctly on the written test and all 10 words given her in the bee.

The Martin runner-up is 13, an eighth grade student, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merton M. Sirota of Hobe Sound.

The St. Lucie champion is 12, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Welch of Fort Pierce, and a seventh grade student at St. Anastia's Parochial school.

Timothy Thomas, the runner-up, is 11 and a sixth grade student at Fort Pierce Elementary school. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas of Fort Pierce.

Pay Raises Bill Splits Delegation

By DOUG SILVER
Herald Correspondent

FORT PIERCE — A split between the two members of the St. Lucie County legislative delegation over the controversial local bill to raise the pay of the county school superintendent and the five school board members became evident Saturday.

The bill, urged by the school board and Superintendent Ben L. Bryan, raises pay of the board from $50 to $150 a month — and provides that Bryan, now getting $7,500 per year, would be paid at least 10 per cent more than any other school official.

Fort Pierce High School Principal Max King now gets nearly as much as Bryan, hence the school board's desire to give the top man in the school setup substantially more.

The proposed bill struck a snag a few days ago at a public hearing. Many persons spoke against it.

Saturday, State Sen. Harry J. Kicliter told The Herald Rep. Rupert Smith, as he left for Tallahassee, had said "his present thinking" was to introduce the pay raise bill in the House without a referendum clause.

Kicliter said that, although he felt there was "some justification" for the school board and the superintendent to get more money, "in view of the good job they were doing and the hours involved in their work," he would only introduce the bill in the Senate with the provision the people have a chance to vote on it.

Club Pledges $1,500 for Stuart Pool

Herald Service

STUART—A pledge of $1,500 this year for the proposed two swimming pools in Stuart has been reached by the Soroptimist club, said Mrs. Zola Swarthout, president.

Other clubs have contributed toward the two-year project, which is estimated to cost about $150,000.

Four members will attend the Southern Region of Soroptimist Federation conference to be held April 10-12 at Montgomery, Ala. Members are Mrs. Thomas Schreckengost, Mrs. Thomas Leasher, Mrs. John W. Stokes, and Miss Lillian Armstrong.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. Leasher, Miss Armstrong, and Mrs. Arthur Brannen was named Thursday to select a slate of officers and directors for the May 7 election.

The Stuart Soroptimist Club adopted the simming pools as a two-year project and organized the Martin County Swimming Pools Association.

Kissimmee's Mrs. Weaver, 67, Is Florida 'Mother of Year'

JACKSONVILLE — (AP) — Mrs. Joe Berta Bryan Weaver, 67, of Kissimmee Saturday was announced the Florida Mother of 1959.

The Florida mother is wife of Paul K. Weaver, for years a social security administrator in the Orlando area and now a Kissimmee realtor.

They have three daughters: Mrs. Donald Walker of Orlando and Mrs. Roger Cook of Raleigh, N.C., both housewives; and Mrs. Randolph Richardson, a Kissimmee school teacher.

Mrs. Weaver is a native of Kissimmee. She was graduated from Cox College in Atlanta and Florida State University.

She is a member of the welfare board of the State Department of Public Welfare; president of the Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church; and has been an officer in a wide variety of state and Kissimmee women's and civic organizations.

Mrs. Weaver will go to New York later this month with mothers from other states for selection of the American Mother of the Year.

The primary objective of the American Mothers committee is "to develop and strengthen the moral and spiritual foundation of the American home."

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker of nearby Orange Park made the announcement as head of the selection committee composed of Mrs. John G. Kellum of Tallahassee; Mrs. William Gautier of New Smyrna Beach; Mrs. J. Brown McCalla of Jacksonville; and Mrs. C. W. Williamson, Miami.

Mrs. Chalker said there were 13 nominations from various organizations over the state. She called this a good response.

City Worker Suspended

FORT PIERCE — The Civil Service Board of Appeals Friday, after a day long hearing, reinstated city employee Jesse D. Kendall, but ordered a 30-day suspension without pay and a demotion.

Kendall, who was mechanical maintenance supervisor, was dismissed on charges of failure to obey orders and insubordination. His suspension without pay is effective starting March 13. He will return to city employ as a mechanic, with corresponding decrease in salary.

Development Analized

Recession Was Drag, No Stopper to State

TALLAHASSEE — (AP) — Florida's industrial growth continued at a rapid clip in 1958 despite the drag of the national recession.

The Florida Development Commission reported Saturday that new plants or major expansions totaled 700, and when all are in full production will have a total employment of 23,000.

This was an 18 per cent drop from 1957 in number of plants, but only a 10 per cent sag in employes, the commission said.

In its annual report on manufacturing progress, the commission said the effects of the recession were felt principally in the first part of last year.

Later in 1958 there was a pickup in industrial expansion and the recovery continued on into 1959, the commission said.

Nearly 2,000 plants and expansions with total employment of 80,000 have been announced since the commission began keeping tabs on industrial expansion three years ago.

"No other southeastern state has equaled this record. Indeed, none of the highly industrialized northern states has yet published larger figures," the commission said.

The growth last year occurred in 52 of the state's 67 counties.

Dade County led the rest with 220 plants and an anticipated employment of 6,000. Orange was second with 60 new plants and 3,800 employes.

Broward was third in number of new plants or expansions, with 59, Hillsborough fourth with 51 and Duval fifth with 38.

Mansion Given Art Federation

LEESBURG — (AP) — The Florida Federation of Art Saturday accepted as a gift the DeBary mansion seven miles north of Sanford. The house, built 90 years ago by Count Frederick DeBary, will be used as a state headquarters.

Milford Leonard, president of Plantation Estates, a real estate development in the Sanford area, presented the mansion to the federation. It is a two-story, 17-room house on three acres of wooded and landscaped grounds.

Orlando Man Is Charged In Car Death

ORLANDO — (UPI) — Officers traced a hit-and-run driver through an auto license number Saturday and arrested a 55-year-old Orlando man on a charge of manslaughter.

But the man, Clifford Waters Jr., Rt. 2, Orlando, denied any part in the death Friday night of Mrs. Susan DeSylvia 26, a rural Orlando resident.

Mrs. DeSylvia was walking along Edgewater Dr. about 6 p.m. Friday when she was struck by a car which did not stop. Several witnesses saw the incident and reported the car's tag number to the state patrol.

Highway Patrolmen arrested Waters at his home Saturday. Patrolmen W. R. Mc Intire said the hood of Waters' car was smashed.

Mrs. DeSylvia was walking to a service station to get help in changing a flat tire when she was struck. She died later at Orange Memorial Hospital.

Benefits Debated By Pros and Cons

By BILL BUNGE
Melbourne Bureau Chief

MELBOURNE — Strong words are flying between Mayor J. J. Spitznogle and Cecil E. Platt, anti-annexation committee head, as the battle over Melbourne's expansion proposal turned to the topic of dollars and cents.

Platt declared "the city now admits there will be higher taxes" if areas to the west are annexed, and Spitznogle charged the leader of the anti-consolidationists was making a desperate effort to mislead people."

The anti-annexationist said, "Do the citizens realize that, if the city of Melbourne annexes two times its present area, the improvements needed in Melbourne will be two times as long being realized than if the city now attends to its present boundaries and makes the necessary improvements?"

In speaking of conditions in Melbourne, Platt also said "Indian River Bluff still does not have adequate sewers drainage, curbs, and gutters.

"Tradewinds Homes and Magnolia Manor sub-divisions are in deplorable condition. Every time it rains, these resemble the great flood of the Mississippi.

"South Melbourne," Platt said, "has little or no benefits from the city, and some areas do not even have water mains or paved streets. Golf Clubs Estates and University Park need many improvements normally furnished by the city.

"Golf Park had to plead to get streets. The abutting property owners had to pay costs of street improvements. They could have done this without being a part of the city."

And from the pro-annexation camp, Mayor Spitznogle said:

"Residents of West Melbourne may well question the leadership of men who attempt to mislead and inflame them.

"They may well ask what are the motives of a willful little group of very rich men, who apparently are far more concerned about their vast holdings than with the growth, development and welfare of this area."

Spitznogle also said, "The West Melbourne group also knows — because they interpret everything in life in terms of dollars — that a person with a home of $8,000 in real value (which would be an assessed value of $5,950) pays only $9.50 in city taxes under homestead exemption. County taxes would be $63,65.

"Why doesn't Mr. Platt tell West Melbourne residents these facts? And that the $9.50 in city taxes, aside from the other many benefits the home owner would receive, are far more than made up in a minimum $6 saving on water bills and savings of from 50 per cent upward on fire insurance premiums?

"Finally," Mayor Spitznogle said, "not a single member of the Citizens' Committee on Consolidation or the Melbourne City Commission will make a personal gain, or acquire a personal benefit, by consolidation.

"They seek consolidation for the benefit of every resident in both areas, because they firmly believe consolidation holds the answer to our mutual problem. Can Mr. Platt say the same?"

U.S. Court May Set Equal Area

TALLAHASSEE —(AP)— The Florida Legislature and Gov. LeRoy Collins were put on official notice Saturday the federal courts might step in to reapportion legislative districts if Legislatures don't iron out inequalities.

Attorney General Richard W. Ervin revised his biennial report to insert a recent ruling by a federal court panel in Minnesota, criticizing that state's legislative districting setup, and indicating it might reapportion if the current Legislature doesn't.

The attorney general is required by law to advise the governor and Legislature of court rulings which might have bearing on Florida laws, or activities.

The development came as the Florida Legislature prepared to grapple again with the reapportionment problem it has faced since 1955.

Ervin said he was advising the Legislature of the ruling as his official duty. He said he knew of no move to file such a suit in Florida.

He said no decision had yet been made whether a federal court has jurisdiction, but the courts retained jurisdiction, pending the end of current session.

The court said that, following adjournment, parties to the action could, within 60 days, petition the court for such action as they deemed appropriate.

A group of Minnesota citizens filed a federal court suit against state officials, asking the 1913 Minnesota reapportionment act be held invalid on grounds of "gross inequality" in population of the legislative districts.

They contended this deprived them of their rights under the 14th amendment (equal rights) to the Federal Constitution.

In its opinion the federal court said, from all evidence, there was substantial inequality. But it said no attempt should be made to decide the issues until after the Legislature had a chance to deal with the problem.

The Minnesota Legislature is due to adjourn at the end of this month.

Minimum Law For Barbers Hit

GAINESVILLE — (AP) — An official of the Florida Barbers Association said Saturday his organization would oppose any move in the 1959 Legislature to write a minimum price and hours law for barbering.

A. L. Patterson of Gainesville, said the association felt that a minimum price law would be detrimental.

Tallahassee barbers reported last week that an effort would be made at the 1959 session for such a law. At one time Florida had such a law but it was knocked out by the Supreme Court.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."

War on Slums Taking Shape

See Related Story on Page 2G

By JUANITA GREENE And JOHN BOYLES
Herald Staff Writers

Supporters of more liberalized slum clearance laws for Florida were preparing Saturday to make a lot more noise in the Legislature when it convenes Tuesday.

But the opponents — two time winners — still had the ears of some powerful senators.

They include the Sen. President, Dewey Johnson of Quincy, and John Rawls of Marianna, who heads a committee that must pass on the bill before it gets to the Senate floor.

RAWLS

Pushing for the reform and working harder than ever to remove the barrier against reselling condemned slum land to private enterprise will be Gov. LeRoy Collins and the Florida League of Municipalities.

They'll be joined this time by civic groups and other organizations over the state and by Metro.

"I have confidence the bill will pass," said Miami Commissioner George DuBreuil, the Florida league's top Urban Renewal booster.

Again this session the opposition will come from one quietly working group — the property owners in the blighted areas.

"You can be sure something will be done to oppose this plan for resale to private interests," said Abe Schonfeld, Miami attorney who owns property in the Central Negro District here.

But Schonfeld wasn't sure his now defunct Property Owners Development Association will be revived for the third battle. Legislators credit PODA's lobbyist, Attorney Edward Boardman, with killing the bill in committee last session.

BOARDMAN

If PODA doesn't lead the fight, some other statewide organization of property owners will, predicted Schonfeld.

The urban renewal bill prepared by the Florida League of Municipalities would make Florida cities eligible for federal aid, now being distributed in all but eight states.

Cities would be reimbursed for two thirds of the loss resulting from the condemnation, clearing and reselling of blighted areas.

"We are going to work very hard to get it through this time," reported Executive Secretary Gordon T. Butler from municipal league headquarters in Jacksonville. "It's of interest to all major cities."

BUTLER

The bill is expected to get an eager reception in the House.

Speaker Thomas D. Beasley of DeFuniak Springs is for it. So is Mallory Horne of Tallahassee, who heads the House committee which will consider it.

"We can't allow slums to choke our growing cities," said Beasley.

"Florida cities can't possibly afford to pay the cost of redeveloping blighted areas with local funds," added Horne.

But the leaders down the corridor in the Senate were saying something a little different.

Sen. President Johnson wants a provision added to allow the original owner to share any profit made by the developer who buys the cleared land from the city.

"I don't think," said Johnson, "a man should be forced to sell his property through condemnation so others can buy it later and make a profit."

Schonfeld

Rawls had the same objection. "I'm going to have to give the proposal lengthy consideration," he said.

Miami Commissioner DuBreuil has been working for three years to get the federal purse open to Miami for slum clearance projects.

"It's the only way Miami can do the job," he said.

DuBREUIL

A straw vote of legislators, he said, "indicates they are 95 per cent behind the change this time." But some of those who voted "no" are sitting in strategic positions.

The law change, to become finally effective, will require an amendment to the state Constitution. First the Legislature and then the people of Florida have to approve it.

Citrus Bills Delay Asked By Florida Canners

WINTER HAVEN — (UPI) — The Florida Canners Association has asked for additional time to make changes in a legislative recommendation to replace the powerful concentrators advisory committee.

The canners asked the Florida citrus industry Friday to postpone introduction of the bill until a substitute proposal can be offered.

The canners also asked the industry to hold up introducing a bill that would give the Citrus Commission power to regulate freeze-damaged fruit and to establish processed product standards.

Both measures were included in the 17-point legislative program endorsed by most citrus groups after months of discussion.

President Frank J. Poitras said his Canners Association's proposed revisions would not be disclosed before April 15, when the Florida Citrus Mutual board meets. The Citrus Commission meets the following day.

Under the present proposal, the citrus industry would ask the legislature to give the commission more power to control concentrate manufacture.

The controversial Concentrators Advisory Committee, created by the 1957 Legislature, has held virtual veto power over regulatory measures affecting the making of concentrate.

Home Rule Has Foes in Plant City

PLANT CITY — (UPI) — Mayor Otis M. Andrews said Saturday he would lead "100 people, or half the town if necessary" to Tallahassee to block a proposed home rule bill for Hillsborough County.

Andrews said he was not against home rule, but only some provisions of the bill proposed by the Hillsborough legislative delegation.

As the leader of the East Hillsborough faction opposing the measure, Andrews said his main objection was to a provision under which the county commissioners could redraw the charter of a city.

The new charter would then be put to a vote of the whole county.

Prince Works Hard to Rub Off 'Playboy' Label

Aly Khan Turns Into a Different Man

Aly Khan is a new man. He is trying to rub off that early label of "playboy." He is working diligently as Pakistan's ambassador to the U.N. And is doing a good job, too.

The prince is a man of great charm, liked by both sexes. One of his success secrets is that he shows the same kindness and consideration to the least important of his guests as he shows to the loftiest of them.

UNITED NATIONS — (UPI) — Prince Aly Khan at age 47 is striving hard to establish himself as a serious diplomat. He is eager to remove the playboy label pinned on him many years ago.

He has been Pakistan's ambassador to the U.N. for a little more than a year and to the surprise of many is doing a serious job.

He admits he still suffers from a form of stage fright that used to bedevil him in his racing days. He tells a story that sheds light on his many-sided personality.

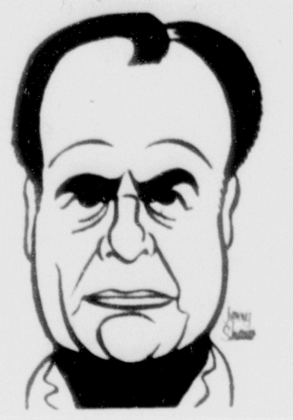
"I get terribly tense just before I'm to make a speech," he says. "The feeling stays with me almost to the moment I start speaking. Then it leaves me and I become completely calm and self-possessed.

"The same thing used to happen to me when I was getting ready to ride in a race. My face would get as white as a tablecloth. Then, at the starting gate, I would become cool as ice.

"I don't suppose I'll ever get over being a bundle of nerves before an important event."

Close friends regard Prince Aly as a shy man. Certainly he's no extrovert.

He has not as yet made any big splash in U.N. circles. But he has been making friends and winning respect. Most of his speeches have been statements of Pakistani policy.



Prince Aly Khan

. . . both sexes like him

However, at a recent General Assembly meeting devoted to the Cameroons independence plans, he suggested a compromise on the controversial issue of the timing of elections in the French Cameroons.

Prince Aly's compromise was not adopted. But the fact that he offered a conciliatory idea during warm debate drew favorable comment from other delegates. And it contained a promise that the Pakistani envoy will play a bigger role in U.N. diplomacy in the future.

Aly is a believer in the concept of quiet diplomacy.

"When two or three people meet informally they have a better chance of success," he explains. "But when you call a formal conference and bring in staff members, things get complicated."

He cites the recent Greco-Turkish agreement on Cyprus as a triumph of personal and informal diplomacy.

As a diplomat, Aly compromises a little with his past. He has given a few big parties in New York, most of them diplomatic receptions at Pakistan House.

There is almost universal agreement at U.N. that Aly is a man of great charm. The secret of his appeal to both sexes is his personal warmth. He seems just as attentive to the lowliest of his guests as to the loftiest and he says the right things to all.

If he has any romantic attachment at present, sharp-eyed New York gossip columnists haven't been able to discover her.

West Berlin Blamed

Rowdies a Problem For German Reds

By DAVID M. NICHOL
Miami Herald-Chicago News Wire

BERLIN — Communist society is having its problems with youthful rowdies in East Germany.

NICHOL

For the third time in recent months a gang has been accused of roughing up pedestrians, of creating a disturbance in a state-owned cafe, and of theft. The scene was the East German city of Dessau.

The court was equally rough. It sentenced the gang leader to two years and six months in jail, and sent six others to prison for terms varying between four months and two years.

Officials made the hearing the occasion for a bitter new attack on West Berlin which is blamed by the Communists for these disturbances.

They are attributed always to the influence of "rock 'n roll" music and to Western literature and radio broadcasts.

The youngsters involved should have known better, the Communists say. Some were workers in state-owned factories and others were members of the official Communist youth organization.

Among other items, the Communists intend to check more carefully the serving of alcoholic drinks to youthful customers.

Police in Dessau also are experimenting with a plan for enrolling some of the youthful troublemakers as "voluntary helpers" of the police.

Blank Shot Proves Fatal

RAMONA, Okla. — (AP) — A 17-year-old student was struck in the eye by the wadding from a blank cartridge at a dress rehearsal for the Ramona High School senior class play. He died en route to the hospital.

He was Arthur Justice Jr., cast in the leading role of "Desperate Ambrose." The three-act comedy was to have been presented at the school auditorium Friday night.

The gun was fired by Joe Cox, 17, as the two boys and other cast members waited on stage for the start of rehearsal.

Wigs Next?

LONDON —(UPI)— J. McLaren Thomson, president of the National Hairdressers Federation, predicted that both men and women will have their hair short by 1999 so they can wear space helmets. He said women will have a collection of wigs to wear with special dresses for gala occasions.

Woman's Club Salutes PB On County's 50th Anniversary

Herald Bureau

WEST PALM BEACH — Citizenship department of the Woman's Club turned back the clock 50 years on Friday in observation of the 50th anniversary of Palm Beach County and to further the Jaycees in the Seminole Sun Dance celebration.

Honor guests at the luncheon meeting were County Commissioner Lake Lytal, Jaycee President Gleason Stambaugh, and Quinton Vrooman, Jaycee publicity chairman.

Paul Crabtree and Will Irwin, who are writing "The Twenty-Seventh Star," operatta-pageant to highlight the Sun Dance celebration were also present. They told of the pageant and played and sang excerpts from this stirring offering.

A group from the Citizenship Committee has been holding "Betsy Ross," parties, mak ing a flag with 27 stars. This was presented to the bearded, Seminole-coated Gleason Stambaugh, who presented it to Lake Lytal.

Lytal will hang the flag in the county commissioners room as a reminder that Florida represents the 27th star in Old Glory.

Mrs. A. T. Langford, who represents the Woman's Club on the Sun Dance committee, also presented the Jaycees with a "college" of Florida which will be displayed in Belk's window.

Members of the executive board and the club president, Mrs. Vincent Welp, were in costume for Friday's meeting. The dresses of yesteryear evoked laughter, tears and admiration.

So did the piano numbers which Mrs. J. R. Vrooman played as the guests gathered. These old chestnuts "rendered" con expressione included "Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage," "Bicycle Built for Two," and "My Merry Oldsmobile."

The speakers' table was decorated with a replica of the Woman's Club's prize-winning float in the first Seminole Sun Dance in 1916.

Mrs. Joe P. Jones, program chairman, told of how Mrs. Austin E. Allen (present and wearing an eye filling costume) had to have two licenses for her wedding 50 years ago. The first license was issued by Dade County. Palm Beach County was formed in a day or so, and the couple got another license. "And the bridegroom didn't even get a refund on the first license."

"Just like Dade County," said Lake Lytal.

Answers to Last Week's Puzzle

Across

1—It's usually evident when PRUDE is hurt (Pride). — Not Pride; it's more in keeping with a proud person's nature that he conceals it when his pride is hurt. PRUDE, a person who is overly proper, fits better.

4—After being lonely for years it's often a JOY to mix freely with one's fellows (Job). — It's at least usually difficult, or a Job, to do so. It might not be such a JOY, however. One might have been out of touch too long.

5—A proud husband usually likes his wife's clothes to be of RECENT design (Decent). — Usually understates with Decent. For that matter, even husbands who are not so proud might well like their wives' clothes to be decently designed. RECENT is better with usually, which allows for cases in which he prefers to see her in a favorite costume, whether RECENT or not.

6—We're apt to feel sorry for children who are APED by their parents (Awed). — Surely we definitely do feel sorry for children who are Awed by their parents. When the parents themselves act like children, it might not have such a harmful and lasting effect on the youngsters.

11—People who are known to SAVE a lot of money often attract many borrowers (Have). — The restraint in often is better with SAVE because such persons are careful with their money. People who have a lot of money might not be so careful with it, and they more frequently than often attract borrowers.

12—A conceited woman is apt to disdain a proposal of marriage from a man she regards as BOOR (Poor). — Poor is weak, because a man might be poor and yet have appearance, social qualities, breeding and prospects. A man who is a BOOR might have none, or few, of those qualities.

13—A cynic might well say that the more a man seems to HEED her, the more a woman tends to exploit him (Need). — Need goes too far, even cynically. When a man Needs her it arouses a woman's protective instincts. HEED is more reasonable; she might have little or no regard for him.

14—How hard it often is to correct a child's tendency to be MEAN! (Lean). — Correct implies that the tendency is undesirable or wrong. There maybe nothing wrong in his tendency to be Lean, thin. That a child's tendency to be MEAN is a fault cannot be denied.

Down

1—Young women are often strongly attracted to a bachelor they regard as a POSER (Power). — They tend to regard a POSER, a person with affectations, as a challenge. As for Power, too much depends on the type of power he holds and on how he uses it.

2—We're apt to resent being told that a DREAM we feel strongly about is fantastic (Dread). — Apt to resent doesn't go far enough with Dread; we might have good grounds for such fears. Our DREAM might well be based on less substantial ground.

3—A flirtatious wife is apt to make a doting husband FONDER (Wonder). — Wonder is weak because it is so vague. Wonder about what? His good fortune — or his bad luck? FONDER is more explicit and more true to life.

4—We usually admire a man who when a victim of a mean JAPE keeps quiet about it (Jade). — At first sight, Jade, a worthless woman, seems a good answer, but reflection shows that this keeping quiet might mean that she could go on to victimize others. There's less likelihood that the perpetrators of a mean JAPE, joke or trick, will go on to harm others.

7—A person who is instinctively LOVED by children usually has a kind nature (Moved). — Instinctively has little point with Moved, which means only that the person's feelings are touched. It has more point with LOVED. This concerns the reaction of children, who often rely largely on instinct in their reactions toward people.

8—Life must be somewhat dull for those who never have occasion to LEARN (Yearn). — Life would be more than somewhat dull for those who never have occasion to Yearn. To Yearn after something might well be the essence of living. Learn is better with the restraint here.

9—Broadly speaking, those who GIVE cheerfully set us all a good example (Live). — Not Live. Scoundrels might well Live cheerfully, and give nothing but bad example. GIVE is better because, broadly speaking, such persons give ungrudgingly and with good grace.

10—We often have reason to regret sympathizing with a man about his FOE (Woe). — FOE is more to the point; we might be drawn into taking sides against that FOE, thus making him our enemy, too. Woe is somewhat vague; it covers all manner of woes. His troubles might be genuine and worthy of our sympathy.

Soviets Have Bonn Uneasy

Miami Herald-Chicago News Wire

BONN — The Germans are uneasy about Soviet efforts to make West Germany appear as the only barrier to a settlement of all outstanding East-West problems.

What worries the Germans most is the fear that the Soviets will succeed.

The tone of Moscow's notes and statements suggests that Bonn will be blamed for any subsequent failure should the foreign ministers' and summit conferences reach no useful agreements.

In some of these comments, Chancellor Konrad Adenauer already has been accused of trying to "sabotage" any peaceful settlement.

At the same time, the Soviets appear to want to avoid any direct clash with other Western countries for which the Germans couldn't be made the goats. The Soviet embassy in East Berlin is speaking in much more subdued tones about air corridors than it did earlier last week.

Threatened "complications," it is now explained, referred to the alleged dangers of accidental collision rather than to any deliberate interference with high-flying American aircraft as occurred last week when an Air Force transport was buzzed repeatedly by three Soviet fighters.

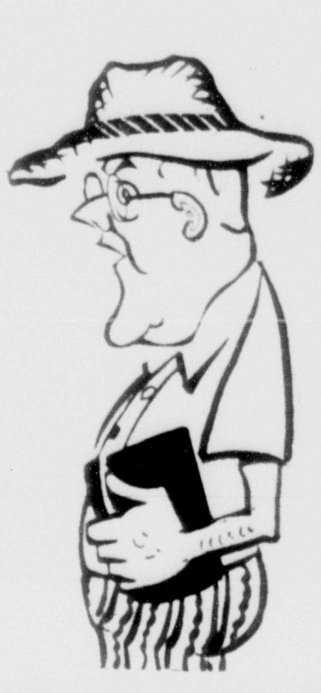
Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries



Dulles

. . . the 'native' look

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "Lightning."

Sometimes he reminisces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide.

Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.

His Views
Will Affect
YOU

Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a se-

Ford Tests Gas Turbine Auto Engine

DETROIT —(AP)— Ford Motor Co.'s research staff reported Saturday development of a 300-horsepower supercharged gas turbine engine described as superior to conventional gasoline engines under most operating conditions.

It is called "the 704" and is to be tested in vehicles before the end of this year. Its weight is one-fourth that of a truck diesel engine of the same horsepower and it has the fuel economy of a diesel.

B. T. Howes, associate director of engineering research said, "the Ford 704 represents an important break-through in gas turbine design technology."

Experimental gas turbines for trucks and passenger cars so far have used one stage of air compression but the Ford 704 has in addition a supercharging stage, the company said.

It said this enables the engine to deliver more horsepower from a smaller size. The 704 has dual burners instead of one combustion chamber such as used in early designs.

Howes said "the 704 would fit easily into the engine compartment of a 1959 Ford with room to spare. It can use unleaded gasoline, kerosene, jet engine fuel or light diesel fuel and requires no warm-up."

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow: 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Mutual Security Is Key

Red 'Ceiling' Rejected 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Viet Nam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges. U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defending America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By AL FINKELSTEIN

Greater Miami hotel and motel operators Saturday checked their calendars suspiciously.

Here it was April — and their sun-kissed winter tourist "season" was still on.

From downtown Miami to South Beach to Bal Harbor, hotelmen joyfully reported their customers this year were staying later than they had in several years.

Reservations at the $25-a-day hotels were non-existent; mid-Beach hotels were "doing nicely," and even the older South Beach quarters were pleased at the late stay of their regular elderly tenants.

North-bound air traffic was booked solid —yet tourists were still coming down at a fairly steady rate.

"They seem to be leaving later and later every year," said R. T. Jeffries, assistant general passenger agent of the Florida East Coast Railway.

Greyhound Bus Lines were running seven capacity-filled expresses daily to New York — and still returning with "good loads."

A Dupont Plaza spokesman said occupancy was dropping — "but just slowly."

At the small Calvert Hotel, 150 Ocean Dr., Miami Beach, owner Mrs. Frances Mitnick said "we are dropping off . . . but only since the first of the month."

Further up the Beach at the Carillon Hotel, 6801 Collins Ave., Sales Director Dan Shaw said business was in "very good shape."

And at the 650-room Americana Hotel in Bal Harbor, a spokesman said: "Reservations — what are they, sir?"

Scratch One Cold Front

You can stop worrying about that new cold front and look for sunny, warm weather over just about all of Florida today, forecasters advised Saturday.

Francis Drybala of the Miami Weather Bureau said the cold air mass sweeping eastward from Texas on Friday and threatening a rainy weekend dissipated when it got to Florida.

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

March Jobless Drop Of 300,000 Forecast

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Government economists predicted Saturday a report next week will show that unemployment in March declined by 300,000 or more.

They based their forecast on a recent sharp drop in the number of workers drawing jobless benefits and a pickup in steel industry hiring.

Mid-February unemployment was estimated at 4,749,000 by the Labor and Commerce Departments. They plan to report the March jobless figure Tuesday, a day before the AFL-CIO holds a mass conference on unemployment here.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell apparently will use the new data in his appearance before the labor rally to bolster his claim that unemployment will continue to decline in the months ahead.

AFL-CIO economists contend that a high rate of joblessness seems inevitable because improved productivity makes it possible for fewer workers to turn out more goods.

The current AFL-CIO News declared the unemployment situation was a "crisis" and deplored the administration's "hesitancy to stimulate economic growth."

Air-Fired Missile In Works

AF to Order Output Soon

WASHINGTON —(UPI)— The Air Force soon will order production of a new ballistic missile to be launched from bombers. It also is weighing the possibility of doubling orders for Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Informed sources who disclosed this Saturday said the Air Force was ready to name one of about two dozen competing contractors to produce the Air-Launched Ballistic Missile.

The missile, on which experiments have been under way for months at Cape Canaveral, Fla., is expected to have a 1,000-mile range. Its development would extend the usefulness of the Strategic Air Command's big bomber fleet. The first bombers may receive the missiles in about 18 months.

Armed with them, bombers will be able to destroy targets without coming near enemy defenses, in much the same way as Polaris missile submarines can operate at sea.

Whether the Air Force doubles its arsenal of Atlas Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles depends on what Congress does about increasing missiles appropriations.

The House Appropriations Committee and defense leaders have had many secret conferences on the cost of providing greater numbers of the Atlas, protected in underground sites, to increase this country's deterrent to war.

The Air Force has now ordered nine squadrons of Atlas missiles. The squadrons, with 650 to 700 men each, will be stationed at nine bases and will have a total of 80 missile launchers. The first squadron will have three launchers, the next three squadrons will have nine launchers each, and the last five will have 10 each, according to well-informed authorities.

Tibet Revolt Splits Red Curtain--Nixon

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Vice President Richard Nixon said here Saturday that the revolt in Tibet has created a solid crack in the Communist Bamboo Curtain in Asia.

"The Communist Chinese action in Tibet has done irreparable harm to plans of Communist domination in Asia.

"It unmasked their true tactics toward India and the other neutral countries," he declared.

Nixon, who had just conferred with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles who is convalescing at Hobe Sound, made the comments while stopping to talk with Republican state chairmen from 12 southern states meeting here.

"We discussed Tibet, Berlin and general world conditions. Mr. Dulles is in good spirits and looks good."

Nixon said Berlin is still the most crucial spot in the Cold War and a summit meeting on the issue "is not a sure thing."

He said the responsibility of whether a summit meeting is held rests with Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

"The blockade incidents are not as important as what happens at the Western and Soviet foreign ministers' meeting set for May. Progress must be made then if we are to go to the summit."

He declined comment on the possibility of war if a summit meeting falls through, but made this remark on Khrushchev's deadlines: "The record speaks for itself. He made one deadline and has moved it back. But it's not wise to try to guess about Khrushchev's deadlines."

Nixon said the West would have to stay in Berlin until Soviet leaders make an argeement which will result in a "lasting settlement of the German problem."

On foreign aid, he said, "it will be needed as long as there's a Russian economic threat."

The vice president flew to Hobe Sound. After an hour's talk with Dulles, he returned by car to Miami where he is vacationing with his family.

He agreed to stop over for an "informal chat" with the state chairmen who were huddling at Galt Ocean Mile Hotel to plan strategy for the 1960 presidential campaign in the south.

The Republican state leaders voted to arrange a caucus of southern delegates on the platform and resolutions committees prior to the national GOP convention.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas, and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

stern patriarch, he teased. "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed, "Oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once only, to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cooler and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the south Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the East.

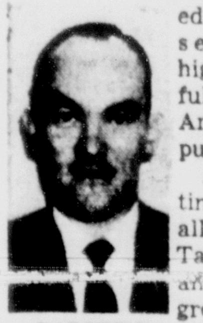
Mustin Headed 'Argus'

By HARRY CAICEDO
Key West Bureau Chief

REAR ADM. Lloyd M. Mustin, who will take over as Key West base commander this summer, is the man who headed the highly-secret and highly-successful Project Argus, made public recently.



CAICEDO

Admiral Mustin was in overall command of Task Force 88, an eight-ship group which penetrated deep into the South Atlantic last August and September for some critical scientific tests.

Project Argus basically was the launching of three nuclear-armed rockets 300 miles into space. Its purpose was to answer vital questions about nuclear explosions in the near-vacuum above the earth's atmosphere.

Although much of the information concerning the mission is still a closely guarded secret, the project has been described as one of "the greatest scientific experiments ever conducted."

Despite handicaps from high winds, rough seas and firing complications, Admiral Mustin and his men did a spectacular job of putting the three rockets where they were intended to go.

For his part in the experiment, the future Navy Base skipper was decorated with the Legion of Merit.

Overwhelming

A FEW DAYS ago, a young woman carrying her first child ran into unexpected complications.

A severe hemmorrhage snuffed out the infant's life and seriously endangered the mother's existence. An emergency call went out for the rare type of blood which she desperately needed.

The response was overwhelming. Over 17 volunteers turned up to donate blood—including townsfolk, sailors and even tourists.

As a result, Mrs. Eleanor Almyda, 20, is now alive and quietly recovering from her ordeal.

Her husband, Roy, and her father, Orlando Hernandez, have spoken up for the entire family, to thank the dozens of persons — from physicians to strangers — who helped her pull through.

Big Secret

MEMBERS OF the Key West Golf Course have a secret.

They're not admitting or denying anything, but from the knowing smiles that adorn some of those local links lover's faces, something is brewing which must be pretty good.

Whatever the plan is, it seems safe to speculate that its end result will be an improved golf course with a full 18 holes instead of the present nine.

If such is the case, then Key West may happily scratch another project off that "needed improvements" list.

Grocer Held In Tavern Slaying

TAMPA—(UPI)—A grocery store owner was held on an open charge Saturday in connection with a tavern shooting which killed the operator and wounded his wife.

August J. Anderson, 55, was held in connection with the shooting of Harold Scott, 54, and his wife, Gladys, 52. Scott was killed instantly, but Mrs. Scott was in fair condition with a bullet wound in the hip.

Detectives said Anderson admitted killing Scott because the bar operator owed him money.

The police report quoted Anderson as saying he entered the tavern with the intention of killing Scott.

Officers said Anderson told them that Scott owed him $6,400 and had "messed him up financially."

Anderson made no attempt to flee and surrendered peacefully.

Two Spelling Bee Champions Repeat

By Herald Services

Champions repeated in DeSoto and Martin Counties this week in the annual Miami Herald spelling bees, and a new champion was named for St. Lucie County. County champions and runners-up will compete in the South Florida bee at Miami in May.

Arden Brannan
. . . wins No. two

Robert Welch
. . . St. Lucie best

Imogene Purvis chalked up her third consecutive win in the DeSoto contest, held at Arcadia. And for the third consecutive year Marilyn Stone was runner-up.

At Stuart Arden Brannan took her second consecutive title for Martin County. Lynn Sirota was the runner-up.

Robert Welch won the St. Lucie County event at Fort Pierce, with Timothy Thomas finishing second.

Imogene, 13, is an eighth grade pupil at Arcadia West Elementary school and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Purvis of Arcadia. Marilyn, also 13 and a seventh grade pupil at West, was school champion, and Imogene was runner-up.

But these positions were reversed in the county finals. Six contestants took part in the DeSoto finals.

The two-time Martin winner is 13 and an seventh grade pupil. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Brannan of Stuart. She spelled 60 words correctly on the written test and all 10 words given her in the bee.

The Martin runner-up is 13, an eighth grade student, and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Merton M. Sirota of Hobe Sound.

The St. Lucie champion is 12, the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Welch of Fort Pierce, and a seventh grade student at St. Anastia's Parochial school.

Timothy Thomas, the runner-up, is 11 and a sixth grade student at Fort Pierce Elementary school. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Thomas of Fort Pierce.

Pay Raises Bill Splits Delegation

By DOUG SILVER
Herald Correspondent

FORT PIERCE — A split between the two members of the St. Lucie County legislative delegation over the controversial local bill to raise the pay of the county school superintendent and the five school board members became evident Saturday.

The bill, urged by the school board and Superintendent Ben L. Bryan, raises pay of the board from $50 to $150 a month — and provides that Bryan, now getting $7,500 per year, would be paid at least 10 per cent more than any other school official.

Fort Pierce High School Principal Max King now gets nearly as much as Bryan, hence the school board's desire to give the top man in the school setup substantially more.

The proposed bill struck a snag a few days ago at a public hearing. Many persons spoke against it.

Saturday, State Sen. Harry J. Kicliter told The Herald Rep. Rupert Smith, as he left for Tallahassee, had said "his present thinking" was to introduce the pay raise bill in the House without a referendum clause.

Kicliter said that, although he felt there was "some justification" for the school board and the superintendent to get more money, "in view of the good job they were doing and the hours involved in their work," he would only introduce the bill in the Senate with the provision the people have a chance to vote on it.

Club Pledges $1,500 for Stuart Pool

Herald Service

STUART—A pledge of $1,500 this year for the proposed two swimming pools in Stuart has been reached by the Soroptimist club, said Mrs. Zola Swarthout, president.

Other clubs have contributed toward the two-year project, which is estimated to cost about $150,000.

Four members will attend the Southern Region of Soroptimist Federation conference to be held April 10-12 at Montgomery, Ala. Members are Mrs. Thomas Schreckengost, Mrs. Thomas Leasher, Mrs. John W. Stokes, and Miss Lillian Armstrong.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. Leasher, Miss Armstrong, and Mrs. Arthur Brannen was named Thursday to select a slate of officers and directors for the May 7 election.

The Stuart Soroptimist Club adopted the simming pools as a two-year project and organized the Martin County Swimming Pools Association.

Temperatures On Rise In Annexation Battle

Benefits Debated By Pros and Cons

By BILL BUNGE
Melbourne Bureau Chief

MELBOURNE — Strong words are flying between Mayor J. J. Spitznogle and Cecil E. Platt, anti-annexation committee head, as the battle over Melbourne's expansion proposal turned to the topic of dollars and cents.

Platt declared "the city now admits there will be higher taxes" if areas to the west are annexed, and Spitznogle charged the leader of the anti-consolidationists was making a desperate effort to mislead people."

The anti-annexationist said, "Do the citizens realize that, if the city of Melbourne annexes two times its present area, the improvements needed in Melbourne will be two times as long being realized than if the city now attends to its present boundaries and makes the necessary improvements?"

In speaking of conditions in Melbourne, Platt also said "Indian River Bluff still does not have adequate sewers drainage, curbs, and gutters.

"Tradewinds Homes and Magnolia Manor sub-divisions are in deplorable condition. Every time it rains, these resemble the great flood of the Mississippi.

"South Melbourne," Platt said, "has little or no benefits from the city, and some areas do not even have water mains or paved streets. Golf Clubs Estates and University Park need many improvements normally furnished by the city.

"Golf Park had to plead to get streets. The abutting property owners had to pay costs of street improvements. They could have done this without being a part of the city."

And from the pro-annexation camp, Mayor Spitznogle said:

"Residents of West Melbourne may well question the leadership of men who attempt to mislead and inflame them.

"They may well ask what are the motives of a willful little group of very rich men, who apparently are far more concerned about their vast holdings than with the growth, development and welfare of this area."

Spitznogle also said, "The West Melbourne group also knows — because they interpret everything in life in terms of dollars — that a person with a home of $8,000 in real value (which would be an assessed value of $5,950) pays only $9.50 in city taxes under homestead exemption. County taxes would be $63,65.

"Why doesn't Mr. Platt tell West Melbourne residents these facts? And that the $9.50 in city taxes, aside from the other many benefits the home owner would receive, are far more than made up in a minimum $6 saving on water bills and savings of from 50 per cent upward on fire insurance premiums?

"Finally," Mayor Spitznogle said, "not a single member of the Citizens' Committee on Consolidation or the Melbourne City Commission will make a personal gain, or a [illegible] a personal benefit, by [illegible]dation.

"They seek consolidation for the benefit of every resident in both areas, because they firmly believe consolidation holds the answer to our mutual problem. Can Mr. Platt say the same?"

'Mom of Year' Reads to Granddaughters

Kissimmee's Mrs. Weaver, 67, Is Florida 'Mother of Year'

JACKSONVILLE — (AP) — Mrs. Joe Berta Bryan Weaver, 67, of Kissimmee Saturday was announced the Florida Mother of 1959.

The Florida mother is wife of Paul K. Weaver, for years a social security administrator in the Orlando area and now a Kissimmee realtor.

They have three daughters: Mrs. Donald Walker of Orlando and Mrs. Roger Cook of Raleigh, N.C., both housewives; and Mrs. Randolph Richardson, a Kissimmee school teacher.

Mrs. Weaver is a native of Kissimmee. She was graduated from Cox College in Atlanta and Florida State University.

She is a member of the welfare board of the State Department of Public Welfare; president of the Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist Church; and has been an officer in a wide variety of state and Kissimmee women's and civic organizations.

Mrs. Weaver will go to New York later this month with mothers from other states for selection of the American Mother of the Year.

The primary objective of the American Mothers committee is "to develop and strengthen the moral and spiritual foundation of the American home."

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker of nearby Orange Park made the announcement as head of the selection committee composed of Mrs. John G. Kellum of Tallahassee; Mrs. William Gautier of New Smyrna Beach; Mrs. J. Brown McCalla of Jacksonville; and Mrs. C. W. Williamson, Miami.

Mrs. Chalker said there were 13 nominations from various organizations over the state. She called this a good response.

City Worker Suspended

FORT PIERCE — The Civil Service Board of Appeals Friday, after a day long hearing, reinstated city employee Jesse D. Kendall, but ordered a 30-day suspension without pay and a demotion.

Kendall, who was mechanical maintenance supervisor, was dismissed on charges of failure to obey orders and insubordination. His suspension without pay is effective starting March 13. He will return to city employ as a mechanic, with corresponding decrease in salary.

Development Analized

Recession Was Drag, No Stopper to State

TALLAHASSEE — (AP) — Florida's industrial growth continued at a rapid clip in 1958 despite the drag of the national recession.

The Florida Development Commission reported Saturday that new plants or major expansions totaled 700, and when all are in full production will have a total employment of 23,000.

This was an 18 per cent drop from 1957 in number of plants, but only a 10 per cent sag in employes, the commission said.

In its annual report on manufacturing progress, the commission said the effects of the recession were felt principally in the first part of last year.

Later in 1958 there was a pickup in industrial expansion and the recovery continued on into 1959, the commission said.

Nearly 2,000 plants and expansions with total employment of 80,000 have been announced since the commission began keeping tabs on industrial expansion three years ago.

"No other southeastern state has equaled this record. Indeed, none of the highly industrialized northern states has yet published larger figures," the commission said.

The growth last year occurred in 52 of the state's 67 counties.

Dade County led the rest with 220 plants and an anticipated employment of 6,000. Orange was second with 60 new plants and 3,800 employes.

Broward was third in number of new plants or expansions, with 59, Hillsborough fourth with 51 and Duval fifth with 38.

Mansion Given Art Federation

LEESBURG — (AP) — The Florida Federation of Art Saturday accepted as a gift the DeBary mansion seven miles north of Sanford. The house, built 90 years ago by Count Frederick DeBary, will be used as a state headquarters.

Milford Leonard, president of Plantation Estates, a real estate development in the Sanford area, presented the mansion to the federation. It is a two-story, 17-room house on three acres of wooded and landscaped grounds.

Orlando Man Is Charged In Car Death

ORLANDO — (UPI) — Officers traced a hit-and-run driver through an auto license number Saturday and arrested a 55-year-old Orlando man on a charge of manslaughter.

But the man, Clifford Waters Jr., Rt. 2, Orlando, denied any part in the death Friday night of Mrs. Susan DeSylvia 26, a rural Orlando resident.

Mrs. DeSylvia was walking along Edgewater Dr. about 6 p.m. Friday when she was struck by a car which did not stop. Several witnesses saw the incident and reported the car's tag number to the state patrol.

Highway Patrolmen arrested Waters at his home Saturday. Patrolmen W. R. Mc Intire said the hood of Waters' car was smashed.

Mrs. DeSylvia was walking to a service station to get help in changing a flat tire when she was struck. She died later at Orange Memorial Hospital.

TALLAHASSEE —(AP)— The Florida Legislature and Gov. LeRoy Collins were put on official notice Saturday the federal courts might step in to reapportion legislative districts if Legislatures don't iron out inequalities.

Attorney General Richard W. Ervin revised his biennial report to insert a recent ruling by a federal court panel in Minnesota, criticizing that state's legislative districting setup, and indicating it might reapportion if the current Legislature doesn't.

The attorney general is required by law to advise the governor and Legislature of court rulings which might have bearing on Florida laws, or activities.

The development came as the Florida Legislature prepared to grapple again with the reapportionment problem it has faced since 1955.

Ervin said he was advising the Legislature of the ruling as his official duty. He said he knew of no move to file such a suit in Florida.

He said no decision had yet been made whether a federal court has jurisdiction, but the courts retained jurisdiction, pending the end of current session.

The court said that, following adjournment, parties to the action could, within 60 days, petition the court for such action as they deemed appropriate.

A group of Minnesota citizens filed a federal court suit against state officials, asking the 1913 Minnesota reapportionment act be held invalid on grounds of "gross inequality" in population of the legislative districts.

They contended this deprived them of their rights under the 14th amendment (equal rights) to the Federal Constitution.

In its opinion the federal court said, from all evidence, there was substantial inequality. But it said no attempt should be made to decide the issues until after the Legislature had a chance to deal with the problem.

The Minnesota Legislature is due to adjourn at the end of this month.

Minimum Law For Barbers Hit

GAINESVILLE — (AP) — An official of the Florida Barbers Association said Saturday his organization would oppose any move in the 1959 Legislature to write a minimum price and hours law for barbering.

A. L. Patterson of Gainesville, said the association felt that a minimum price law would be detrimental.

Tallahassee barbers reported last week that an effort would be made at the 1959 session for such a law. At one time Florida had such a law but it was knocked out by the Supreme Court.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."

Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "Lightning."

Sometimes he reminisces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide. Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

Legislators Agreed: No New Taxes . . 1G

Courts May Force Reapportionment 1B

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.

His Views
Will Affect
YOU

Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a se-

Ford Tests Gas Turbine Auto Engine

DETROIT —(AP)— Ford Motor Co.'s research staff reported Saturday development of a 300-horsepower supercharged gas turbine engine described as superior to conventional gasoline engines under most operating conditions.

It is called "the 704" and is to be tested in vehicles before the end of this year. Its weight is one-fourth that of a truck diesel engine of the same horsepower and it has the fuel economy of a diesel.

B. T. Howes, associate director of engineering research said, "the Ford 704 represents an important break-through in gas turbine design technology."

Experimental gas turbines for trucks and passenger cars so far have used one stage of air compression but the Ford 704 has in addition a supercharging stage, the company said.

It said this enables the engine to deliver more horsepower from a smaller size. The 704 has dual burners instead of one combustion chamber such as used in early designs.

Howes said "the 704 would fit easily into the engine compartment of a 1959 Ford with room to spare. It can use unleaded gasoline, kerosene, jet engine fuel or light diesel fuel and requires no warm-up."

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow: 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Scratch One Cold Front

You can stop worrying about that new cold front and look for sunny, warm weather over just about all of Florida today, forecasters advised Saturday.

Francis Drybala of the Miami Weather Bureau said the cold air mass sweeping eastward from Texas on Friday and threatening a rainy weekend dissipated when it got to Florida.

Mutual Security Is Key

Red 'Ceiling' Rejected 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Viet Nam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges, U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defendin America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By AL FINKELSTEIN
Herald Staff Writer

Greater Miami hotel and motel operators Saturday checked their calendars suspiciously.

Here it was April — and their sun-kissed winter tourist "season" was still on.

From downtown Miami to South Beach to Bal Harbor, hotelmen joyfully reported their customers this year were staying later than they had in several years.

Reservations at the $25-a-day hotels were non-existent; mid-Beach hotels were "doing nicely," and even the older South Beach quarters were pleased at the late stay of their regular elderly tenants.

North-bound air traffic was booked solid —yet tourists were still coming down at a fairly steady rate.

"They seem to be leaving later and later every year," said R. T. Jeffries, assistant general passenger agent of the Florida East Coast Railway.

Greyhound Bus Lines were running seven capacity-filled expresses daily to New York — and still returning with "good loads."

A Dupont Plaza spokesman said occupancy was dropping — "but just slowly."

At the small Calvert Hotel, 150 Ocean Dr., Miami Beach, owner Mrs. Frances Mitnick said "we are dropping off . . . but only since the first of the month."

Further up the Beach at the Carillon Hotel, 6801 Collins Ave., Sales Director Dan Shaw said business was in "very good shape."

And at the 650-room Americana Hotel in Bal Harbor, a spokesman said: "Reservations — what are they, sir?"

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

I will favor effective recognition of the trend in Florida to urbanization and the needs of our people in the heavily populated areas.

I shal fight to continue progress we have made for the construction of highways based upon need, not political favoritism and greed.

In the broad area of governmental reorganization, I shall favor reforms such as the long-overdue program of central purchasing for all departments and institutions.

These are the areas, in my opinion, where the biggest fight for the people will come.

Ah, Spring! Ah, Sunny's 400 Bucks

By SUNNY FORTUNE
Herald Puzzle Editor

Spring is here, buds are blooming, business is booming, the fish are biting and Sunny Fortune is wearing a $400 smile.

That's what the winner of this week's prize will receive.

So don't let spring fever distract you from giving it a whirl.

That's the word from Sunny Fortune. Last week, unfortunately, no one had the word — or words—to take home the long green.

SUNNY

Remember, as a long-forgotten Miami poet once said:

Keep trying your luck
And you'll make a buck

That may not be very good poetry. But if you win $400 it will be music to your ears.

The sad truth is nobody came within a country mile of the correct solution last week.

Most frequently missed words were job for joy (seems nobody wanted to take the happy side of the question); power for poser; pride for prude and wonder for fonder.

It was no wonder we had no winners.

Air-Fired Missile In Works

AF to Order Output Soon

WASHINGTON —(UPI)— The Air Force soon will order production of a new ballistic missile to be launched from bombers. It also is weighing the possibility of doubling orders for Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Informed sources who disclosed this Saturday said the Air Force was ready to name one of about two dozen competing contractors to produce the Air - Launched Ballistic Missile.

The missile, on which experiments have been under way for months at Cape Canaveral, Fla., is expected to have a 1,000-mile range. Its development would extend the usefulness of the Strategic Air Command's big bomber fleet. The first bombers may receive the missiles in about 18 months.

Armed with them, bombers will be able to destroy targets without coming near enemy defenses, in much the same way as Polaris missile submarines can operate at sea.

Whether the Air Force doubles its arsenal of Atlas Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles depends on what Congress does about increasing missiles appropriations.

The House Appropriations Committee and defense leaders have had many secret conferences on the cost of providing greater numbers of the Atlas, protected in underground sites, to increase this country's deterrent to war.

The Air Force has now ordered nine squadrons of Atlas missiles. The squadrons, with 650 to 700 men each, will be stationed at nine bases and will have a total of 80 missile launchers. The first squadron will have three launchers, the next three squadrons will have nine launchers each, and the last five will have 10 each, according to well-informed authorities.

Tibet Revolt Splits Red Curtain--Nixon

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Vice President Richard Nixon said here Saturday that the revolt in Tibet has created a solid crack in the Communist Bamboo Curtain in Asia.

"The Communist Chinese action in Tibet has done irreparable harm to plans of Communist domination in Asia.

"It unmasked their true tactics toward India and the other neutral countries," he declared.

Nixon, who had just conferred with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles who is convalescing at Hobe Sound, made the comments while stopping to talk with Republican state chairmen from 12 southern states meeting here.

"We discussed Tibet, Berlin and general world conditions. Mr. Dulles is in good spirits and looks good."

Nixon said Berlin is still the most crucial spot in the Cold War and a summit meeting on the issue "is not a sure thing."

He said the responsibility of whether a summit meeting is held rests with Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

"The blockade incidents are not as important as what happens at the Western and Soviet foreign ministers' meeting set for May. Progress must be made then if we are to go to the summit."

He declined comment on the possibility of war if a summit meeting falls through, but made this remark on Khrushchev's deadlines: "The record speaks for itself. He made one deadline and has moved it back. But it's not wise to try to guess about Khrushchev's deadlines."

Nixon said the West would have to stay in Berlin until Soviet leaders make an argeement which will result in a "lasting settlement of the German problem."

On foreign aid, he said, "it will be needed as long as there's a Russian economic threat."

The vice president flew to Hobe Sound. After an hour's talk with Dulles, he returned by car to Miami where he is vacationing with his family.

He agreed to stop over for an "informal chat" with the state chairmen who were huddling at Galt Ocean Mile Hotel to plan strategy for the 1960 presidential campaign in the south.

The Republican state leaders voted to arrange a caucus of southern delegates on the platform and resolutions committees prior to the national GOP convention.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas, and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

stern patriarch, he teased. "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed. "Oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once only, to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cool and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the South Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the East.

'America Watching You,' Youth Rally Told

By GREG TAYLOR
Herald Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Secretary to the U.S. Cabinet told some 1,200 Broward high schoolers Saturday, that a successful democracy depends on their staunch support.

Robert K. Gray, speaking at the second annual Broward County Youth Rally, also said:

"How I wish the front pages of America's newspapers will carry the story of this rally. We read so much of juvenile delinquency.

"We know we read about the minority. But still, America would sleep much better tonight if this fine example were duplicated a thousand times across the land."

The Herald, the Fort Lauderdale High Key Club and the Downtown Kiwanis Club sponsor the rally in recognition of county youths' good record. The juvenile delinquency rate in Broward is about half as low as the national average.

Gray said the rally could accomplish nothing greater that "to let you know that American is watching you, is sympathetic with your problem and is interested in your future."

In return, he charged the youths to take an interest in the government by "budgeting some time for government service."

"You may decide you don't want to be the president," Gray said, outlining the heavy schedule and responsibility placed on the nation's chief executive.

Marciano

The rally was also addressed by U.S. Rep. Paul Rogers and Rocky Marciano, former world heavyweight boxing champ, who said his toughest fight was against Jersey Joe Walcott in 1952.

"Joe knocked me down for the first time in my life but I got up because I wanted to win that title.

"The so-called tough criminals aren't really tough guys. They run in gangs and always have to carry weapons to protect themselves," Marciano said.

The teenagers were entertained by locally-appearing artists and showmen with selections from light classics to rock and roll.

Jerry Wichner, radio disc jockey, was master of ceremonies.

The Stranahan High singers provided choral entertainment. Other students on the program were George Bonham, Charles Kirkland, Joanne Kroll, Mackey Motley, Dave Henry, Bob Lewis, Dick Brock and Dawn Tuggle.

CENTRAL AND SOUTHERN FLORIDA FLOOD CONTROL PROJECT
PLAN OF IMPROVEMENT FOR CONSERVATION AREA NO. 2

Interior Levee Plan OKd to Aid Wildlife

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Construction of an interior levee across Conservation Area No. 2 has been approved by Army Engineers to enhance fish and wildlife resources of southeast Broward County.

The proposal by the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District was approved after detailed studies by the Corps of Engineers, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, said Col. Paul D. Troxler, district engineer.

Hydraulic studies showed that water levels in the 110,000 acre Conservation Area could not be maintained at adequate depths to maintain a large fish population during dry years unless the interior levee was constructed across the lower end of the pool, Troxler said. More water would also be available during dry periods to maintain desirable levels and prevent salt water intrustion in developed areas along the coast, he added.

Engineering studies indicated that the proposed interior levee could be constructed for much less than the cost of raising the existing levees around the southern end of the pool to the elevation required to withstand the wind tides and wave action that could occur during a hurricane when floodwaters would rise above the vegetation in the lower end of the area.

"At the present time, Levee 39, the spillways between Conservation Areas Nos. 1 and 2, and the section of Levee 38 east from Pumping Station 7 to Spillway 11C are under construction. When Levee 35B, the sections of Levee 38 between Structure 34 and Spillway 11A are completed and the highway between Spillways 11A and 11C is raised to a safe elevation, the control structures can be regulated to conserve water and enhance the fish and wildlife resources in Conservation Area No. 2," Troxler concluded.

Tri-County Plan Revived for Ports

'Matter of Survival' Prompts Study of Air, Sea Facilities

By JOHN MORTON and ART ROBINSON
Herald Staff Writers

Top officers of the three Gold Coast counties are scheduled to meet in Miami this week to begin talks aimed at tri-county control of air fields and water ports in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach.

The time and place of the commissioners' meeting will be set Monday by the Metro Port Authority Committee, according to Metro Commissioner Ben C. McGahey. "It probably will be Thursday or Friday," McGahey said.

The purpose was outlined by Broward Commissioner J. Herbert Burke:

"The establishment of a commission to govern all air and seaport development in the counties."

Burke said, "It's a simple matter of economic survival."

"I think our county ought to start planning immediately with Dade County about acquiring land for an adequate airport," he said.

"A joint committee representing the Dade Port Authority and the Broward County Commission should decide on a central location for a big airport and on a joint operation of Dade airports.

"I think the Broward airport should be between State Rd. 7 and U. S. 27, about as far west as Miami International. It would be accessible from the Turnpike, U.S. 27, State Rds. 7 and 9 as well as the projected extension of 27th Ave., he said.

Industrial areas should be planned in the vicinity of such an airport, Burke added.

The study committee could determine how Port Everglades could fit into the same development program and how to finance expansion of it, he continued.

"Dade County ought to recognize the value of Port Everglades and realize that it can serve the entire area," he said. "There is plenty of room for expansion of the port in undeveloped land. It could be one of the finest seaports on the Atlantic coast."

* * *

THE THREE counties tried to get together on a master aviation plan several years ago but never got off the ground.

This time, they have the cold statistics of a report prepared for Metro last year by the Cincinnati consulting engineer firm of Landrum and Brown.

The report stated Dade and Broward alone would need vastly expanded airport facilities within the next 10 years.

The report pin-pointed the need for a major air terminal in Broward and seven other large airports throughout the entire area by 1970.

* * *

POLITICAL boundaries of the three counties will pose the biggest problem facing the commissioners.

Dade and Broward spokesmen are on record as favoring retaining the control of the port authority by the county commissions.

And Broward Commission Chairman George Petersen said the final port authority "will have to be on a basis of equal representation, regardless of the size of the counties involved."

McGahey said he would invite a representative of the Federal Aviation Agency to sit in on the meeting. Ralph A. Fossey, chairman of the Metro Port Authority Committee, said he would seek close contact between the group and the FAA.

* * *

THE COMMISSIONERS' initial sessions should deal exclusively with air port problems, McGahey said. Later they will study a proposal by Burke that Port Everglades — Broward's big shipping port — be a part of the program.

Another problem facing the commissioners is "who will sit on this authority," McGahey said. Earlier suggestions have ranged from the appointment of an independent board to formation of a "master committee" of commissioners from the three counties.

McGahey said the committee should be drawn from the three commissions because "we are the men who are answerable to the people."

DeBan Says He Won't Run

Hallandale GOP Plans Two Sessions on Slate

By TOM VINCIGUERRA
Herald Staff Writer

HALLANDALE — The local Republican Club will meet twice this week to fashion a state for the May 12 primary for two city commission seats.

DeBAN

Nelson DeBan, club president, named several possible candidates for the May 26 runoff.

DeBan, former port board chairman, and Chamber of Commerce president, said he will not run. "I'm the most talked about possibility," he admitted, "but I neglected my private business while while with the port, and I want to devote more time to my own affairs now."

DeBan said a three-plank platform concerning beach acquisition, a ban on trailer part transfers and the sewer system—will be presented for endorsement when the GOP meets Monday and Friday at the Woman's Club, 134 NE First Ave.

DeBan said none of the Republican candidates has committed himself, and he added "If we can't get a registered Republican to run, we'll all align ourselves with the candidates who are most in sympathy with our platform."

He listed the prospects as:

Orville Wright, Earle Peterson, Fred Wolf, Russell McLaughlin, Ray Sandel and Harlow Burt. Wright, Peterson, Wolf and McLaughlin are former commissioners and outspoken critics of the present administration.

Meanwhile, Arthur August, president of the Eastern Hallandale Improvement Association said his group will put up a candidate. August said he definitely will not run, but declined to identify the candidate.

"Sewers will be the major issue. The commission has been marking time on our demands for a sewer system," August declared.

City Commissioners Russell Wilson and Clifford Julian have filed for reelection.

City Clerk Robert Williams announced that registration books will be open until April 11 at City Hall from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Night registration will be held at City Hall Thursday and Friday from 5:30 to 9, and at 621 2nd Ave., from 6 to 9, Monday through Wednesday.

Raid Snips Bookies' Spy-Wire

To Tote Board
. . . glass didn't 'show'

By TOM VINCIGUERRA
Herald Staff Writer

HALLANDALE — State law enforcement officers reported Saturday they snipped a bookie wire that had been providing 15 states with race results gleaned by telescope from the Gulfstream Track tote board.

Peter Ratenni, 33, of 1931 NW 30th St., Miami, was arrested in a room with a view of the track mutuel board a quarter of a mile away. He was in jail under $6,000 bond.

He was nabbed in the Turf Apartment, 60 N. Federal Hwy. Investigators confiscated a high-powered telescope, a hasty-hookup telephone and two lengthy lists of race wire subscribers in 15 states as far west as Iowa.

The service was providing win and place results, investigators said. The track stables obstructed view of the show payoffs.

Officers said Ratenni, taken by surprise, stashed the phone under a couch and put the telescope under a pillow before he answered investigators' knocks.

The telephone was connected to a concealed pay phone booth in the rear apartment of the nearby Turf Restaurant. Some 1,500 feet of wire was strung around the building and buried underground between the restaurant apartment and Ratenni's apartment.

Mel Waters, apartment manager, said he didn't see anybody rigging up the wiring. "They must have done it at night," he said.

Waters said he rented the apartment to a Tommy Sandergate of New York on March 16. Sandergate, Waters said, paid $100 and said he wanted the apartment for only one month.

The building, Waters said, is owned by Claire Atwood and Bill Crawford, who are in the real estate business in North Dade.

Ratenni was charged with illegally disseminating race information and possessing gambling paraphernalia.

Conked-Out Pilot Lands In 'Rough'

By PETER LAINE
Herald Staff Writer

DANIA — A Miami pilot crash landed his light plane on the Stirling Rd. golf course Saturday after its engine quit on takeoff.

Paul Wood, 34, 79 NE 91st St., escaped from the total wreck of his Waco plane with cuts and bruises.

His condition late Saturday at the Hollywood Memorial Hospital was described as "satisfactory."

Ben Grigsby, sheriff's spokesman, said Wood took off heading north about noon from the bush airport west of the city.

The motor quit as the plane got off the ground, Grigsby said, but Wood made it over the high-tension wires along the road to the golf course on the north side.

It appeared to witnesses that Wood crashed the plane rather than risk a glide landing into a group of golfers, Grigsby said.

Wood, a professional pilot, was reportedly testing the plane after a $5,000 overhaul for a Tampa show this week.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. —(UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."

War on Slums Taking Shape

By JUANITA GREENE And JOHN BOYLES
Herald Staff Writers

Supporters of more liberalized slum clearance laws for Florida were preparing Saturday to make a lot more noise in the Legislature when it convenes Tuesday.

But the opponents — two time winners — still had the ears of some powerful senators.

They include the Sen. President, Dewey Johnson of Quincy, and John Rawls of Marianna, who heads a committee that must pass on the bill before it gets to the Senate floor.

RAWLS

Pushing for the reform and working harder than ever to remove the barrier against reselling condemned slum land to private enterprise will be Gov. LeRoy Collins and the Florida League of Municipalities.

They'll be joined this time by civic groups and other organizations over the state and by Metro.

"I have confidence the bill will pass," said Miami Commissioner George DuBreuil, the Florida league's top Urban Renewal booster.

Again this session the opposition will come from one quietly working group — the property owners in the blighted areas.

"You can be sure something will be done to oppose this plan for resale to private interests," said Abe Schonfeld, Miami attorney who owns property in the Central Negro District here.

But Schonfeld wasn't sure his now defunct Property Owners Development Association will be revived for the third battle. Legislators credit PODA's lobbyist, Attorney Edward Boardman, with killing the bill in committee last session.

BOARDMAN

If PODA doesn't lead the fight, some other statewide organization of property owners will, predicted Schonfeld.

The urban renewal bill prepared by the Florida League of Municipalities would make Florida cities eligible for federal aid, now being distributed in all but eight states.

Cities would be reimbursed for two thirds of the loss resulting from the condemnation, clearing and reselling of blighted areas.

"We are going to work very hard to get it through this time," reported Executive Secretary Gordon T. Butler from municipal league headquarters in Jacksonville. "It's of interest to all major cities."

BUTLER

The bill is expected to get an eager reception in the House.

Speaker Thomas D. Beasley of DeFuniak Springs is for it. So is Mallory Horne of Tallahassee, who heads the House committee which will consider it.

"We can't allow slums to choke our growing cities," said Beasley.

"Florida cities can't possibly afford to pay the cost of redeveloping blighted areas with local funds," added Horne.

But the leaders down the corridor in the Senate were saying something a little different.

Sen. President Johnson wants a provision added to allow the original owner to share any profit made by the developer who buys the cleared land from the city.

Schonfeld

"I don't think," said Johnson, "a man should be forced to sell his property through condemnation so others can buy it later and make a profit."

Rawls had the same objection. "I'm going to have to give the proposal lengthy consideration," he said.

Miami Commissioner DuBreuil has been working for three years to get the federal purse open to Miami for slum clearance projects.

DuBREUIL

"It's the only way Miami can do the job," he said.

A straw vote of legislators, he said, "indicates they are 95 per cent behind the change this time." But some of those who voted "no" are sitting in strategic positions.

The law change, to become finally effective, will require an amendment to the state Constitution. First the Legislature and then the people of Florida have to approve it.

Citrus Bills Delay Asked By Florida Canners

WINTER HAVEN — (UPI) — The Florida Canners Association has asked for additional time to make changes in a legislative recommendation to replace the powerful concentrators advisory committee.

The canners asked the Florida citrus industry Friday to postpone introduction of the bill until a substitute proposal can be offered.

The canners also asked the industry to hold up introducing a bill that would give the Citrus Commission power to regulate freeze-damaged fruit and to establish processed product standards.

Both measures were included in the 17-point legislative program endorsed by most citrus groups after months of discussion.

President Frank J. Poitras said his Canners Association's proposed revisions would not be disclosed before April 15, when the Florida Citrus Mutual board meets. The Citrus Commission meets the following day.

Under the present proposal, the citrus industry would ask the legislature to give the commission more power to control concentrate manufacture.

The controversial Concentrators Advisory Committee, created by the 1957 Legislature, has held virtual veto power over regulatory measures affecting the making of concentrate.

Home Rule Has Foes in Plant City

PLANT CITY — (UPI) — Mayor Otis M. Andrews said Saturday he would lead "100 people, or half the town if necessary" to Tallahassee to block a proposed home rule bill for Hillsborough County.

Andrews said he was not against home rule, but only some provisions of the bill proposed by the Hillsborough legislative delegation.

As the leader of the East Hillsborough faction opposing the measure, Andrews said his main objection was to a provision under which the county commissioners could redraw the charter of a city.

The new charter would then be put to a vote of the whole county.

Prince Works Hard to Rub Off 'Playboy' Label

Aly Khan Turns Into a Different Man

Aly Khan is a new man. He is trying to rub off that early label of "playboy." He is working diligently as Pakistan's ambassador to the U.N. And is doing a good job, too.

The prince is a man of great charm, liked by both sexes. One of his success secrets is that he shows the same kindness and consideration to the least important of his guests as he shows to the loftiest of them.

UNITED NATIONS —(UPI)— Prince Aly Khan at age 47 is striving hard to establish himself as a serious diplomat. He is eager to remove the playboy label pinned on him many years ago.

He has been Pakistan's ambassador to the U.N. for a little more than a year and to the surprise of many is doing a serious job.

He admits he still suffers from a form of stage fright that used to bedevil him in his racing days. He tells a story that sheds light on his many-sided personality.

"I get terribly tense just before I'm to make a speech," he says. "The feeling stays with me almost to the moment I start speaking. Then it leaves me and I become completely calm and self-possessed.

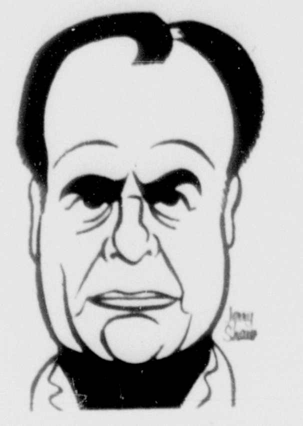
"The same thing used to happen to me when I was getting ready to ride in a race. My face would get as white as a tablecloth. Then, at the starting gate, I would become cool as ice.

"I don't suppose I'll ever get over being a bundle of nerves before an important event."

Close friends regard Prince Aly as a shy man. Certainly he's no extrovert.

He has not as yet made any big splash in U.N. circles. But he has been making friends and winning respect. Most of his speeches have been statements of Pakistani policy.

However, at a recent General Assembly meeting devoted to the Cameroons independence plans, he suggested a compromise on the controversial issue of the timing of elections in the French Cameroons.



Prince Aly Khan
. . . both sexes like him

Prince Aly's compromise was not adopted. But the fact that he offered a conciliatory idea during warm debate drew favorable comment from other delegates. And it contained a promise that the Pakistani envoy will play a bigger role in U.N. diplomacy in the future.

Aly is a believer in the concept of quiet diplomacy.

"When two or three people meet informally they have a better chance of success," he explains. "But when you call a formal conference and bring in staff members, things get complicated."

He cites the recent Greco-Turkish agreement on Cyprus as a triumph of personal and informal diplomacy.

As a diplomat, Aly compromises a little with his past. He has given a few big parties in New York, most of them diplomatic receptions at Pakistan House.

There is almost universal agreement at U.N. that Aly is a man of great charm. The secret of his appeal to both sexes is his personal warmth. He seems just as attentive to the lowliest of his guests as to the loftiest and he says the right things to all.

If he has any romantic attachment at present, sharp-eyed New York gossip columnists haven't been able to discover her.

West Berlin Blamed

Rowdies a Problem For German Reds

By DAVID M. NICHOL
Miami Herald-Chicago News Wire

BERLIN — Communist society is having its problems with youthful rowdies in East Germany.

NICHOL

For the third time in recent months a gang has been accused of roughing up pedestrians, of creating a disturbance in a state-owned cafe, and of theft. The scene was the East German city of Dessau.

The court was equally rough. It sentenced the gang leader to two years and six months in jail, and sent six others to prison for terms varying between four months and two years.

Officials made the hearing the occasion for a bitter new attack on West Berlin which is blamed by the Communists for these disturbances.

They are attributed always to the influence of "rock 'n roll" music and to Western literature and radio broadcasts.

The youngsters involved should have known better, the Communists say. Some were workers in state-owned factories and others were members of the official Communist youth organization.

Among other items, the Communists intend to check more carefully the serving of alcoholic drinks to youthful customers.

Police in Dessau also are experimenting with a plan for enrolling some of the youthful troublemakers as "voluntary helpers" of the police.

Blank Shot Proves Fatal

RAMONA, Okla. —(AP)— A 17-year-old student was struck in the eye by the wadding from a blank cartridge at a dress rehearsal for the Ramona High School senior class play. He died en route to the hospital.

He was Arthur Justice Jr., cast in the leading role of "Desperate Ambrose." The three-act comedy was to have been presented at the school auditorium Friday night.

The gun was fired by Joe Cox, 17, as the two boys and other cast members waited on stage for the start of rehearsal.

Wigs Next?

LONDON —(UPI)— J. McLaren Thomson, president of the National Hairdressers Federation, predicted that both men and women will have their hair short by 1999 so they can wear space helmets. He said women will have a collection of wigs to wear with special dresses for gala occasions.

Easy Spur Wind Bag (And Hartack's Glad)

By EDWIN POPE
Assistant Sports Editor

Bill Hartack, who owns a passing fair set of lungs himself, has a colt's "second wind" to thank for his third straight Florida Derby victory.

The stormy little Miami Springs rider spurred Easy Spur to a three-quarters-of-a-length triumph over Sword Dancer in Saturday's $116,400 classic at Gulfstream Park when the Spring Hill Farm racer kicked out with two late drives

The first failed. The second was worth $75,300 — of which Hartack collects 10 per cent.

"Generally I'm too busy with my own horse to worry about the others," Hartack explained half-breathlessly all but drowned out by the University of Miami's blarring Band of The Hour. "But I can tell you I had some deep-down doubts when Easy Spur made his first move toward Sword Dancer on the stretch turn . . .and couldn't catch him."

Hartack paused, gathering his own second wind.

[illegible] er and came again.

"That time we made it."

Someone asked Hartack if he had to whip Easy Spur much.

You don't win derbies without using the whip," Hartack laughed. "I didn't have time out there to count the strokes but I sure had to get into him."

Hartack said he kept his mount on the outside after the first turn on the advice of Trainer Paul Kelley. "Mister Kelley told me it was a little deep by the rail, and to stay out some. He was right. It was good running where I was."

What did the joekcy think about Troilus' well-concealed Friday injury?

"I didn't think anything," he said. "I heard some rumors today (Saturday) but you hear a lot of those. I wasn't going to figure on Troilus running anything but his best. I'll tell you this, though: I never feared Troilus like I did Sword Dancer. We beat Troilus eight lengths in the Fountain of Youth last week, and I didn't think he's pick up that much ground today."

Hartack's third consecutive Florida Derby romp practically gave him permanent possession of The Run for [illegible] He balked, though, at comparing Easy Spur with his last two Derby winners — Gen. Duke and Tim Tam.

"Ask me after the Kentucky Derby," he grinned.

Leonard, Palmer Tie With 212s

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. — Canada's Stan Leonard slammed back with a three-under-par 69 Saturday and tied defending champion Arnold Palmer for the lead after 54 holes of the 23rd Masters Golf Tournament.

coff, moving in with a four-under-par 68, was only a stroke off the pace as Leonard and the muscular Palmer, of Ligonier, Pa., forged a deadlock with 212 totals.

So the game is on for today—the defending titleholder, the ex-champion and the relatively unknown — in the three-man showdown of this classic at massive Augusta National.

That's the way Leonard, a calm, 44-year-old veteran from Vancouver, expressed it after the third round had eliminated virtually all the other contenders.

Leonard, posting his second 69 of the tournament, set the target. Palmer, needing a birdie on the 18th hole to tie for the lead, made it on a 12-foot putt and scored a 71 for the day.

Middlecoff, also needing one birdie on the last three holes to make it a three-way deadlock, parred his way in and failed by a stroke to catch the others. But his 68 gained him the position he likes — where he can win with a strong finish.

It was a finish that provided every kind of thrill for a crowd estimated at 40,000 to 50,000—probably the largest in the history of American golf.

National Amateur Champion Charlie Coe was only three strokes behind at 215 after a superb 67, the best score of the tournament.

The three top contenders all are players who have been tested by competition. Leonard, the oldest, was a club pro in Canada for 17 years before he tried his skill on the U.S. tour. He has won two tournaments and has a calm, unworried attitude.

Middlecoff, 38, has won two U.S. Open championships and was Masters champion in 1955. He didn't play the circuit this winter but won the first tournament he entered at St. Petersburg last month.

Palmer, 29, was U.S. amateur champion five years ago and reached a peak in his successful pro career last spring when he became the youngest Masters winner in 21 years.

Nearly two dozen players appeared to have some sort of chance when the third round began with 42 survivors of the original field of 87. Two of the greatest, Ben Hogan and Sam

'Injured' Troilus Last in Florida Derby

Easy Spur Wins in Final 40 Yards

By RUSS HARRIS
Herald Turf Writer

Easy Spur remains undefeated at Gulfstream Park and undisputed champion of the three-year-olds which raced in Florida this season.

The Spring Hill Farm gelding wore down Brookmeade Stable's Sword Dancer in the last 40 yards Saturday to give Jockey Bill Hartack his third straight Florida Derby victory.

Bayard Sharp's Troilus, who suffered an injury Friday morning which was not revealed to the press in time for Saturday editions, was second choice of the 24,246 fans but finished last in the nine-horse field.

Easy Spur was three parts of a length the best while Master Palynch, third to cross the wire, was nine lengths behind Sword Dancer.

The winner's time of 1:47.1 for the mile and an eighth was only two-fifths of a second off the track record set by Calumet's Gen. Duke in 1957. The latter's time equalled the world mark for the distance.

Jockey Chris Rogers pulled Troilus up shortly after passing the finish line and, after dismounting, said: "When I asked him for speed, he did not respond and I thought he was going a little dinky, although we can't tell until we take the bandages off."

Troilus kicked himself on the tendon of his left foreleg in his stall. Swelling and soreness developed but the colt responded to treatment. Dr. Joseph Burch, a veterinarian, examined Troilus Saturday and found him "perfectly sound" and fit to race.

The colt ran with bandages on both front legs.

Easy Spur's triumph netted $75,300 for Jim Norris of Coral Gables, proprietor of Spring Hill Farm.

It was the bay gelding's fifth straight success at Gulfstream, three of the victories coming this season and two last year. He refunded $3.80, $2.90 and $2.80. Sword Dancer, third choice at 7-2, paid $4 and $3.70 while the 8-1 Master Palynch was $8.70 to show.

Behind Master Palynch came The Chosen One, Rico Tesio, Rare Rice, McLellan, Revolutionist and Troilus.

Amick Killed on Final Lap: Rathmann Wins at Daytona

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Associated Press Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH — Jim Rathmann smashed his own world auto racing record Saturday, winning two fantastically fast races on the new high-banked Daytona International Speedway, the first of which took the life of veteran George Amick.

Three wrecks marred the program. Rodger Ward cracked up while leading the second event, for unlimited engines, but he was not hurt.

The 34-year-old Amick, from Rhinelander, Wis., was killed instantly on the last lap of the 100-mile U. S. Automobile Club championship race that opened the program.

Rathmann set a closed course world record of 170.26 miles an hour in the 100 miler, rubbing out his own record of 166.72 he made in winning the Monza, Italy, 500-mile race last year.

Amick, No. 2 ranking speedway car driver in America last year, smacked the outer guard rail. He died instantly as his car flipped end over end and disintegrated. He had been a close second to Jimmy Bryan in the 1958 Indianapolis 500-mile race.

Bill Cheesbourg of Tucson, Ariz., skidded and spun into the infield to miss the 170-mile an hour wreck but escaped injury.

Amick had set a qualifying record of 176.887 miles an hour for the high-banked Daytona track.

Rathmann and veteran Rodger Ward of Los Angeles were the major contenders from the start. Rathmann passed his brother Dick, who started in the No. 1 spot, on the first lap. Ward screamed past Jim on the seventh lap but could hold the lead only four four laps. Rathmann won going away.

Bob Christy, Grant's Pass, Ore., finished third and Dick Rathman fourth. Then Amick's wreck stopped the race. He was awarded fifth place in death.

Other positions awarded were Elmer George, Indianapolis, 6th; Johnny Thomson, Boyertown, Pa., 7th; Pat Flaherty, Chicago, 8th; Jim Packard, Indianapolis, 9th, and A. J. Foyt, Houston, 10th.

Dick Rathman said Amick "lost it" coming out of the west turn, hit the guard rail and overturned.

Dick Rathman called the wreck the worst he ever saw in speedway competition. The front end of the Amick car was crumpled like a paper wad and both front wheels were torn off.

Eight guard rail posts were broken by the impact of Amick's car. The delay during repairs led USAC officials to shorten the second event to 50 miles.

Christie said he thought the accident was due to fatigue. He rated the Daytona track much more tiring than the flatter Indianapolis Speedway.

Tension Mounts at Augusta— It's No Place for Faint Hearts

AUGUSTA, Ga.—In rapid succession, three golfers who Saturday built up tension in the 23rd Masters tournament came into the club house to be grilled by reporters.

First there was Canadian Stan Leonard, who had repeated his opening 69 for a 212 total and the temporary 54-hole lead. Reporters vainly tried to persuade him to estimate what he would have to shoot today to hold his lead.

SARAZEN

"Arnold Palmer needs a birdie on the last three holes to tie you," someone broke in.

"Well, I guess the game is on," Leonard remarked, and pretty soon defending champion Palmer joined the group. [illegible] sary birdie, a three on the 18th hole. Palmer, who had replaced Leonard as the second day leader, had scrambled to a 71 to match his rival's 212.

Leonard and Palmer had no more completed answering questions when Cary Middlecoff of the Diplomat Club joined the group. Middlecoff had done himself proud with a 34-34—68, four under par, for a 213 total.

Thus you can see that Gene Sarazen was correct with his earlier comment, "There seems to be more tension than ever in this Masters."

The Augusta National Course today will be no place for faint-hearted contestants, or spectators.

* * *

Even The Amateurs Are Contending

IT COULD BE the greatest finish in the history of this traditional tournament. It stands to reason the winner will be one of the top trio, but there is no guarantee. Charles Coe, the brilliant amateur from Oklahoma City, is only three strokes behind with his 215.

PATTON

Four pros and Billy Joe Patton, the popular Georgia amateur, are only four shots behind with their 212s. There could have been a bit of prophecy in Clifford Roberts posting a note reading, "In the event of a tie, there will be an 18-hole playoff Monday."

One problem could be in finding enough room for the players to make their shots. A crowd estimated between forty and fifty thousand roamed the hills and dales Saturday. They sold out the supply of 25,000 daily tickets at $5 each and had to drag out some unused ones from 1955.

Leonard Wants 'Wearing of Green'

LEONARD THOUGHT his 69 (35-34) was better than the one he produced Thursday. Certainly it was a more timely one.

"I hit 14 greens," he said, missing only the fifth, 16th and 18th. Stan's putter was his best friend. He required only 30 putts. "I'm tired," he said, "but I'd sure like to wear one of those green coats (symbolic of the Masters championship)."

LEONARD

Leonard thinks that winning the Greensboro Tournament two years ago changed the trend of his career. He'd blown that title six or seven times.

"I owe a lot to my wife for persuading me to keep on trying at Greensboro," said Leonard. "That tournament was important to me. When you blow one, it's hard to take."

Leonard was conservative only once Saturday, playing his tee shot to the 190-yard 16th, fronted by a pond, to the far right side of the green. "I'm afraid of the water," he said.

* * *

And Palmer Keeps On Scrambling

PALMER, WHO has had to scramble like mad for two days, made no secret of being displeased with his game. Once again he went to the practice area, explaining, "Before I teed off, I hit perfect iron shots. I couldn't do it on the course."

Your reporter saw several examples of Palmer's uncanny knack of getting out of trouble. On the third hole, he pushed his drive into the woody rough. He lined a five iron to the green and got a par.

"I wish someone would tell Arnold to be more careful, he's driving me crazy," a galleryite was overheard remarking. Palmer's putter, which he used only 29 times, helped offset his poor iron shots.

* * *

Middlecoff's Deuces Weren't Wild

MIDDLECOFF OPENED his comeback with birdies on the first and second holes. "I'd sure like to start the final round three-four," Cary said. "I wouldn't want to play that round over and I'd sure be willing to take my chances with another 68."

Middlecoff said he anticipated some low scoring Saturday because the elements were calmer and the boys had reached the stage where they had to make their moves.

Middlecoff

Deuces were helpful, not wild, for Cary Saturday. He scored three birdies on the par three holes. He played a four iron 35 feet past the pin on the fourth, dropped a six iron shot within 12 feet of the cup on the sixth and landed a six iron shot 12 feet from the pin on the 12th, one of the toughest of par threes. It is 155 yards and fronted by a brook.

Middlecoff suffered a bogey five on the seventh when he wedged his approach over the green. He escaped with a par five on the eighth after knocking his drive against a tree. He chipped it out with a seven and then played a two iron in front of the green.

Cary seemed confident Friday night when he told friends he felt he was going to have a good round.

Saxton Cries For Man Who Was . . .

. . . ex-champ heads for state hospital

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. —(AP)— Johnny Saxton, washed up as a prizefighter after holding the world welterweight championship twice, was ordered committed to a state hospital Saturday after he tried to hang himself in a jail cell.

The 28-year-old Negro boxer, who earned a quarter of a million dollars in the ring, landed in the police lockup early Saturday on a burglary charge.

Several hours later a patrolman found Saxton hanging in his cell, with his socks as a rope. He was cut down and taken to a hospital where doctors said there was no sign that asphyxiation had set in.

Saxton was returned to his cell and examined by two psychiatrists, Drs. Carl A. Surran and Frank B. Doggett. Dr. Doggett quoted Saxton as saying:

"If you keep me in this cell, I'll try to kill myself again."

The physicians said Saxton was depressed because he was not working and suffered from dementia praecox. The dictionary defines dementia praecox as a form of insanity "characterized by loss of interest in people and things and incoherence of thought and action."

The doctors recommended his commitment to a state hospital.

Saxton was picked up in a five and ten cent store early Saturday morning where he hid after the store closed at 5 p.m. Friday. He told the psychiatrists he knew he would get caught and wished he had run so the police could have shot him down.

The boxer was in tears during the interview with the doctors.

"He used the be a champ," Dr. Doggett said. "This life was just too much for him to get used to."

The boxer, a Newark native raised as an orphan in Brooklyn, N.Y., came to this resort to visit his mother-in-law, Mrs. Mary Earle.

Police said Saxton entered the store at 5 p.m. Friday. Around midnight, someone saw a light inside and notified police. They surrounded the store.

Officers said Saxton broke through the tin roof of the store, climbed out, and was captured. He was taken to headquarters in tears.

Baltimore Chops Down Cards, 5-2

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

Veterans Jack Harshman and Hoyt Wilhelm spaced eight St. Louis hits Saturday night as the Baltimore Orioles clipped the Cardinals, 5-2, before 1,978 at Miami Stadium.

The Orioles conclude their spring exhibition schedule here this afternoon at 2 against the Cardinals. Rookie Bob Gibson will pitch for St. Louis against Baltimore's Connie Johnson.

Bobby Avila gave the Cardinals a run in the first inning when he played Don Blasingame's routine drive to right field into a triple. Two outs later Stan Musial singled to center for the run.

Harshman's triple and Avila's liner to right which Joe Cunningham dropped gave the Orioles a 1-1 standoff in the third inning.

Baltimore slipped ahead in the fifth when Bobby Boyd doubled, went to third on Starter Ernie Broglio's wild pitch and scored as Bob Nieman flied to deep right.

Rookie Bill Clark replaced Broglio on the mound for St. Louis in the seventh and the O's promptly ripped into him for three runs. Two walks preceded successive singles by Gus Triandos, Billy Gardner and Brooks Robinson.

Also Get Anderson, Korchek

Marlins Plan Best Club, Get Burke, McDermott

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

The Miami Marlins made their first major acquisitions of the spring Saturday when they added Outfielder Leo Burke, Pitchers Mickey McDermott and John Anderson and Catcher Steve Korcheck to their roster.

Joe Ryan, Marlin general manager, completed the four separate deals after days of negotiations.

Burke, who is expected to fill Miami's big need for a right-handed power hitter, comes to the Marlins on option from the Baltimore Orioles.

Left-hander McDermott, the ex-major leaguer who posted a 1.86 earned run average in 92 innings with Miami a year ago, was purchased from the Detroit Tigers.

Anderson, a right-handed knuckleballer who spent part of last season with the Marlins, was sold to Miami by the Philadelphia Phillies.

And Korcheck, former football star at George Washington University, comes on option from the Washington Senators.

"We feel we've filled several important holes," said Ryan, "but we're not finished yet. There are still more deals in the works and we plan to field the best team we've ever had on opening night (April 14)."

The 24-year-old Burke, an ex-VPI halfback, has been tabbed by most observers as a future Oriole star. He had a .307 season at Knoxville in the South Atlantic League and was so outstanding in early spring drills that Paul Richards thought of keeping him on the Orioles' roster.

Burke, who led the Sally League in total bases, has a good throwing arm and possesses speed and power. He can play third base as well as the outfield.

The feats of McDermott are well known to Miami fans. After 10 years in the majors, he came to the Marlins last summer and pitched consistently good baseball.

McDermott, a Miamian, asked Ryan to do everything he could to acquire him when he learned the Tigers did not intend to recall him this spring. Ryan conferred with Rick Ferrell, Detroit general manager, and the deal was completed.

Sleeper of the four newcomers could be Anderson. The 26-year-old won only four of nine decisions here last year, but three of his losses were by one run and he had a 3.23 earned run average.

Korcheck spent the last two seasons in the service. He hit .283 at Chattanooga (Southern Association) in 1955.

'Shug' Admits '59 Plainsmen Likely to Roll

By JIMMY BURNS
Herald Sports Editor

AUGUSTA, Ga.—You meet leaders in other sports at the Masters Golf Tournament—like Ralph (Shug) Jordan, Auburn football coach, who candidly admitted his Plainsmen should be good again next fall.

Jordan, who spoke to Auburn Alumni here Friday night, says the Plainsmen have tremendous pride, which should inspire them in trying to match their past season, marred only by the 7-7 tie with Georgia Tech.

The Plainsmen invade Miami Oct. 23 for a game with Coach Andy Gustafson's Hurricanes and Jordan figures it will be a tough test.

"Gustafson will have an improved team," Jordan allowed. "I'm confident his new assistants will be of help and the University of Miami doesn't figure to have another bad season like 1958."

Last year when Jordan spoke here, his arch rival, Bear Bryant of Alabama, showed up at the Masters. The theory was Bear was checking on Jordan, who no doubt tried to line up some high school football players of the area. "I wouldn't be surprised if Bear scouts me again," said Jordan. "Bryant has done a good job of bringing Alabama back. Opponents again have respect for the Crimson tide, so it won't be able to sneak up on its foes."

Jordan is sympathetic to Coach Gustafson, who sends his Hurricanes against LSU at Baton Rouge in October.

"Coach Paul Dietzel has been saying he'll have another fine team," Jordan mused. "I saw his star halfback, Billy Cannon, in a track meet this spring and after one stride, he was going full speed. "I'm just happy we don't play the Tigers."

Auburn's spring practice, recently concluded, was highly satisfactory, Jordan conceded. He lost six regulars from his starting team. They were ends Jerry Wilson and Mike Simmons; Tackle Cleve Wester, Guard Frank Laruss; Quarterback Lloyd Nix and Left Halfback Tommy Lorino.

"I hope we'll be as good as we were last year," said Jordan. "Pride, as I mentioned, will play an important role. Our biggest concern is depth, and kicking is our number one weakness. I mean kicking in every phase — punting, extra points and kickoffs."

A step towards another great line is Jackie Burkett, who last year was chosen by the Football Coaches Association as All-America center. Burkett, a native of Fort Walton Beach, Fla., won numerous honors. Burkett calls defensive signals for the Plainsmen and will be a tough man for the Hurricanes to handle.

Alley 'Oops' Javelin To Record 270 Feet

AUSTIN, Tex. —(AP)— Giant Bill Alley of Kansas threw the javelin 270-feet, 1½-inches to better the American [illegible] Saturday in headlining the Texas relays that produced six records and two record ties.

Alley's great toss, which brought him the vote as outstanding athlete of the meet, smashed 13-feet, ½-inch and was 1½-inches better than the American record.

Kansas and Texas tied for the championship of the university class with 58 points apiece. Lamar Tech won the college division with 42 points to 39 for favored East Texas State.

University class records included a pole vault of 14-feet, 8½-inches by Jim Graham of Oklahoma State and a mile relay of 3:10.3 by Texas.

In the College division, Texas A&I set a 3:13.5 standard in the mile relay. East Texas State did 41.0 in the 440-yard relay in the preliminaries, only to lose in the finals to a 42.0 by Texas A&I when John West pulled a muscle.

At The Derby: Orchids, Music, Fun and PEOPLE

By MEL DERRICK
Herald Sports Writer

This was the way it was (sort of, anyway) at Gulfstream Park Saturday as 24-246 improvers of the breed milled around Jimmy Donn's well-groomed track for the Florida Derly.

Sunshine and water skiers . . . Happy music and mournful bettors . . . Orchids and tomatoes lively hats and contended snores . . horses and people.

And people.

"The only way to fight this crowd," sighed one of the nicer tomatoes, a blond in a pink dress, "is just to go home and watch the race on TV."

Nobody did.

★ ★ ★

BANDS BEGAN blaring around Gulfstream at 10 a.m., a time when most horse players were rousing for coffee and a look at the form. The morning music-making, by Caesar La Monaca's orchestra and Wally Moran's Dixieland band — and later by U-Miami's Band of the Hour — drew approximately 8,000 early risers.

Over 3,000 of them were waiting outside when the Gulfstream gates opened at 9 a.m.

★ ★ ★

IN CONTRAST with Gulfstream's rain-wrinkled opening day, Saturday was straight from the Chamber of Commerce. The only clouds were in misguided bettors' eyes.

Thousands forsook the grandstands for a chance to improve the breed in the sunny paddock area. A large mutuels board there kept them well informed.

One young man forsook even that. He slipped his shirt off, his orange Florida Derby hat down, and stretched out on the grass. Shortly, a snore joined the band music.

GULFSTREAM, striking to challenge the Kentucky Derby's "Run for the Roses" tradition, pushed forward its "Run for the Orchids" motto in $1,000 fashion. That was the going price on the horseshoe-shaped orchid neckpirce presented to winner Easy Spur.

Saturday, but one member of Dick Pope's Cypress Gardens water ski troupe did. Hanging under a tremendous kite and towed by a motorboat, he soared above the infield lake as things warmed up for the big race.

He attracted less attention than visitor Lily St. Cyr did just by walking about the club house area.

THE MUTUEL take for the [illegible] stream's best ever for an April date. For the fans . . .

"There's nothing more disgusting," said one, stripping apart a handful of tickets after Easy Spur beat Sword Dancer in that driving finish "than to see two horses fighting it out at the end when you don't have either one."

Wesleyan Snaps Rollins' Streak

WINTER PARK — (AP) — Wesleyan of Connecticut broke Rollins' seven-game baseball winning streak Saturday, beating the Tars, 4-2.

Carl Syrilia gave Rollins only four hits, two of them coming in the second inning when the Tars got both their runs on a homer by Mike Cortese, a single by Winkie Williams, a walk and a fielder's choice by Ron Brown.

Hartack Had Bag of Wind In Easy Spur

Chris Rogers was crestfallen after his last-place trip aboard Troilus, the $2.40-to-$1 second choice.

"I didn't even know until this morning that he had hurt himself in his stall Friday," Rogers said. "They put bandages on him today, and he felt okay when we warmed up. I was hoping and praying he'd be all right but he was running dinky as early as a half-mile and just didnt respond."

Kelley, Easy Spur's trainer, declined comment on any effect the Friday injury might have had on Troilus' performance. He had plenty to occupy him — all of it happy.

"I figured we had it made when they came through the stretch," said Kelley.

Asked if his confidence in the colt ever wavered during an erratic early-winter period, Kelley shook his head. "You don't quit on a horse with this much speed," he said.

Kelley had to do most of the hand-shaking for Spring Holl Farm. James D. Norris, the Coral Gables resident who owns Easy Spur, wasn't there to see his stable's first $100,000 success,

Norris was in Chicago for his Chicago Black Hawks' do-or-die Saturday night Stanley Cup hockey stand against Montreal.

Troilus 'Injured'

for the Orchids" had been billed as a three-horse battle, but it turned out to be a duel between Easy Spur and Sword Dancer with the other seven starters far up the track.

As expected, Jockey Bobby Stevenson set the early pace with Master Palynch. But Sammy Boulmetis had Sword Dancer right behind and he appeared set to take command at Sammy's will.

The Chosen One was third, followed by Rare Rice, Easy Spur, Troilus, Rico Tesio, Revolutionist and McLellan.

Troilus stumbled at the start but recovered quickly and moved into fourth position as the field went down the backstretch. However, at the far turn, he began dropping back and was not persevered with when obviously a beaten horse.

Easy Spur broke alertly and was much closer to the pace than usual, going smoothly into third position down the backstretch.

At the far turn Sword Dancer put Master Palynch away with authority and darted into a three-length lead. Hartack, regarding Sword Dancer as strictly the horse to beat, moved quickly with Easy Spur.

Boulmetis saved ground on the rail turning for home while Hartack took Easy Spur out toward the middle of the track for the drive. Spring Hill Trainer Paul Kelley had ordered Hartack to avoid the inner rail, believing the going was better on the outside.

Sword Dancer reached the eighth pole still two lenghts on top. However, Easy Spur began to gain slowly but steadily at the sixteenth pole and passed the game but tiring Sword Dancer 40 yards from the wire to triumph going away.

Some observers have expressed the view that Easy Spur is not bred for the classic distances, but he gave every evidence Saturday that he can handle at least a mile and a quarter.

Saturday's crowd bet $1,856,-557, largest April handle in Gulfstream's history. Last year Derby Day was on March 29 and 25,449 fans wagered $1,881,-609.

Races Paced By Ferrari

PENSACOLA — (AP) — A Columbus, Ga., driver averaged 80.6 miles-per-hour on a three-mile, twisting course in one of four sprint races in the first Fiesta of Five Flags sports car competition Saturday.

E. D. Martin, driving a Ferrari, managed to hit 137 miles-per-hour on a three-fourths of a mile straightaway on the back course before being forced to brake for a 45-degree curve.

Four five-lap races were held to determine positions for today's four distance races. The longest will be 30 laps.

Tampa Rips Amherst

TAMPA — (AP) — The University of Tampa baseball team jumped on two Amherst pitchers for seven runs in a big first inning and coasted on the cushion to a 9-4 victory Saturday. Bill Rouse, Tampa's first batter, hit a home run. Manuel Perez hit a grand slam blast later in the inning.

California Oaks To Miss Uppitty

SAN BRUNO, Calif. — (AP) — Miss Uppity caught the pace-setting Tender Size in the stretch Saturday for a length and a quarter victory in the 16th running of the $16,450 California Oaks at Tanforan.

Sybil Brand was third in the field of 11. The favored Ruwenzori ran fourth.

Miss Uppity ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:42 3-5. The winner paid $8.70, $5 and $3.50; Tender Size, $7.80 and $5.10 Sybil Brand, $6.20.

Detroit Women Win Badminton Tourney

DETROIT — (AP) — The Detroit team of Mary Connor and Mildred Sirwaitis upset top-seeded Helen Gibson and Wanda Bergman Saturday and captured the U.S. senior women's doubles badminton championship.

The second-seeded Detroit entry, winner of the Mexican Women's Open title two weeks ago, won the U.S. crown by scores of 15-10, 8-15, 15-11.

Leonard Fires 69, Locks Palmer for Masters Lead

Snead, who have accounted for five Masters titles between them, shot their way out early.

Playing together in a grim reminder of their playoff for the Masters title five years ago, Snead scrambled to a 72, even par for the 6,980 yard Augusta National course, leaving him seven strokes behind.

Hogan, putting uncertainly on the front nine, came in with 76 for a 223 total.

Billy Joe Patton broke par with a 71 and tied with four seasoned pros at 216. They were Fred Hawkins, who came from far behind with a third round 68, Billy Maxwell, a 72 shooter Saturday, and Walter Burkemo and Jack Fleck, who had 71s.

It took something better than par on this still, sunny day to break up the scoring jam that existed at the halfway point of the tournament.

Coe's 67 was the best, but he had been seven strokes behind Palmer when the round started. Playing steadily all the way, the lean Oklahoma amateur finished with birdies on the 13th, 15th, 17th and 18th holes.

"I've been swinging real well and I'll surely be in there trying," he said.

No amateur ever has won the Masters although on a couple of occasions Patton and Ken Venturi gave the pros the shakes.

It was Leonard's 69, bringing him from two strokes behind, after he blew his first day lead, that set the stage for the day's drama. He had a 35 on the front nine with two birdies and a bogey, and picked up another stroke at the tricky 11th where his 3-iron shot drifted in 2½ feet from the pin.

On the 15th, a 520-yard water hole, his 4-wood approach went into the crowd at the back of the green and stopped. He lagged up a long putt and sank the next for the birdie.

'Facts' Fade, But—

Bible Still First Base For Pepper

Pepper Martin, '34 Pepper Martin, '59

. . . ambition unchanged: 'want to go to Heaven'

By EDDIE STORIN
Herald Sports Writer

A weary man with high cheekbones, a long crooked nose and a pointed chin sat in a cocktail lounge munching an apple. All about him, people were drinking and talking.

"What's your ambition, Pepper?" someone asked.

"Ambition?" John Leonard Martin looked up, surprised by the question. "My ambition is to go to heaven."

STORIN

There was a snicker. "You wanna play a harp, too?" the questioner asked.

There was a brief silence. Pepper, bellicose member of the memorable St. Louis Cardinal Gashouse Gang, stopped chewing his apple.

"Mister," he snapped. "I don't think that's funny."

Martin, a sensitive, forthright, kindly man of 55 years, recalled this incident of a dozen years ago as he puffed on his pipe in the Miami Marlins' clubhouse.

It seems it has been ever thus for Pepper. And he's more than somewhat tired of playing the role of the "strange, eccentric clown." He firmly denies any resemblance to such a character.

"Because I come from Oklahoma," surmises Martin, "people seem to think that makes me something to laugh at—an illiterate Okie with a mattress on top of my car.

"I've always managed to pay my way. I raced midget autos, played football for a chiropractors' college, owned a fighter, drove a tractor, played in a band, raised goldfish and cattle and gave my best in baseball for more than 35 years.

"I got by. Damon Runyon, Grantland Rice and all the rest said I was one of the greatest base runners of all time. Yep, I always managed to pull my weight.

"All I've got to say," he went on, "is that if there's anything wrong in reading the Bible and believing what's in it . . . if there's anything wrong in a man's wanting to live the life of a rancher . . . if there's anything wrong in managing a baseball team . . . if there's anything wrong about wanting to go to heaven when you die . . . then I'm afraid life isn't worth living."

* * *

A Bouncing Boy

IT TOOK the Wild Hoss of the Osage nearly 10 years to make the big leagues for keeps. Along the way, he played every position except catcher, developed his never-to-be-forgotten belly slide and picked up the name Pepper.

"When the Cards bought my contract in 1925," he explains, "they sent me to Fort Smith, Arkansas. The owner of the team heard how I liked to bounce around. So he told the newspapers that a new player named Pepper Martin was joining the club.

"From then on everybody called me Pepper."

Although he hit an even .300 in 128 games in 1931 (his first full season in the majors), Martin was a relatively unknown when the Series between the Cards and Philadelphia Athletics rolled around.

"I feel like a kid with a little red wagon," said Pepper before the autumn classic began. When it was over he had tied a record with 12 hits (.500 average) and had stolen five bases off Mickey Cochrane, the A's Hall of Fame catcher.

Later he asked Catcher Gabby Street, "Ain't I the same guy I was before the series? Then how come they want to pay me $1,500 a week as a vaudeville man? I'm a ball player, not an actor . . . I don't want to cheat anyone."

* * *

It Just Isn't So

ALTHOUGH the Gashouse Gang began to take shape in 1931, it wasn't until 1934 that it reached full bloom.

As Pepper recalls it:

"It came to pass in 1934 that we were on the road 28 straight days. Our uniforms were torn and filthy when we hit New York.

"Besides, we were a noisy and boisterous bunch on the bench. There was Dizzy Dean, Rip Collins, Joe Medwick, Durocher, Bill DeLancey and the manager, Frankie Frisch.

"Anyway we beat the Giants three out of four games and Frank Graham wrote in his column: the Gashouse Gang from St. Louis whipped the Giants . . . the name stuck."

Stories about the Gashouse Gang through the years have become more fiction than fact, according to Pepper.

"I guess," he said, "I've committed more sins than most . . . I ought to be ashamed of myself for admitting any of them. But truthfully I didn't do half the carrying on I've been given credit for.

"Growing a six-day beard during a winning streak . . . yes, I did that. Throwing ice water on people from hotel windows, I did that, too.

"But," he stressed, "I never gave a sliding exhibition in any hotel lobby and I never had much trouble with [illegible] except that time I almost choked that fellow down there in Havana when I managed the Sun Sox.

A Sport In Our Town

"For years I've been accused of throwing a bucket of water on Frisch's head as he and a newspaperman walked down a street in front of our hotel. I didn't do that, either."

What about the choking incident in Havana?

"That umpire," explained Pepper, "was wrong, awful wrong. He missed four straight close plays . . . called them all against us.

"Then he tossed Knobby Rosa out of the game and told me I had one minute to get him off the field or he'd forfeit the game. I blew my top, grabbed the ump by the throat and started to squeeze.

"Then, I said to myself, 'Lord, what am I doing?' and let go. For a minute there I was going to kill the so and so."

* * *

'Next to Ty Cobb'

RECORDS don't show it but Martin feels he ranks next to Ty Cobb as a base runner.

"My trouble as far as records go," he figures, "was that I wasn't permitted to steal enough. One year I stole 22 bases in 23 tries . . . and I should have been called safe the other time, too."

Pepper credits his wife, Ruby, a gentle woman with a lovely smile, for his amazing command of the English language.

"My high schooling was confined to two football seasons," he admits. "Then I met Ruby and we eloped the day she turned 18. She inspired me to read the Bible and other good books.

"I can use those big words. I know what they mean in my mind, but don't ask me to define them . . . might have trouble."

Now that their three daughters have grown up—two are married and one is in college—the Martins live a quiet, full life on their ranch in Oklahoma.

"I usually eat my Wheaties and go to bed around 9 o'clock," said Pepper. "Of course these night games are going to foul up this schedule. I'm liable to fall asleep out at the Stadium some night.

"Then," he concluded, "everybody will say that clown is at it again."

A Stitch in 10 Will Get Me In

Pared-Down Beecham Aims at Welters, TV

By MEL DERRICK
Herald Sports Writer

Miami's Jimmy Beecham, reader of good books, lover of progessive jazz, dresser of note and middleweight boxer of late, paused, smiled, and began to tick off reasons why he's switching from middleweight to welterweight ring foes.

He got as far as one.

"To win," said Beecham. "I think I can win consistantly as a welter. That just about wraps up the reasons."

Beecham, who muscles back into the welterweight class Tuesday night against ninth-ranked Rudell Stitch at the Beach, traded on even terms with the best during his two-year run as a middleweight. Twice he climbed into the top ten rankings; once he shoved-up to ninth place.

"But those 'middleweights' I was fighting," he said. "They were just trained-down light heavies. They'd weigh in at 160-161, then actually come at 165. I was giving away too much reach, height and poundage.

"You get tired of that win-one, lose-one, win-one routine. So you just take stock of the situation and say, 'Well, now, let me take off this excess baggage and see what happens.'"

Beecham has no worry over sapping his strength by paring down to the 150-pound limit stipulated in his contract with Stitch. Neither does he worry too much about Stitch's ranking and probable favoritism in the non-televised fight.

"I'm down to 151½ now," he said. "I've hit 150 in the gym in the past — actually had to put on weight to stay with the middleweights — and I've never felt weak.

"Sure, it's been two years since I fought at 150, but I've always been strong. My strength was what took me through against those middleweights.

"Stitch? I saw him on TV against (Gaspar) Ortega. He's a tough fighter, a pretty fair puncher. But I think I've been traveling in a little better class."

* * *

BEECHAM, who generally fights his best against the best, figures a victory Tuesday could be worth (1) a slot in the welter rankings and (2) a TV shot . . . He could be right . . . Stitch is an elder in the Presbyterian Church now, but back in his youth he used to pilfer old railroad ties for wood to burn in the family fireplace. "Learned how to box by fighting other kids for the ties," he grins . . . Gomeo Brennan, scheduled to fight the 10-round semiwindup on last week's Carmen Basilio-Arley Seifer card in Augusta, had to pull out when he sprained an ankle the day before the match. Nothing serious, but he's waiting awhile to resume training . . . Joe Netro, co-manager of Basilio, reports the fight (with a $12 top) drew a net gate of $13,590. Netro also postcards praise for Miami Beach's Eddie Coachman, who refereed the hassle . . . Boxing is booming in Havana, where Florentino Fernandez and Urtiminio Ramos drew a $17,000-plus gate last week despite tickets scaled as low as 85 cents. Fernandez chilled Ramos in the second round for his 15th straight knockout. Angelo Dundee, on a [illegible] mission to [illegible] Fernandez he should fight in Miami Beach, reports over 4,000 were turned away from the Sports Palace feature.

Steel Framework at Port Everglades Site to Contain Boiler

Power-ful Plant to Deliver New 'Title' to Broward

By GEORGE LARDNER
Herald Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Florida Power and Light Co.'s huge plant at Port Everglades will be producing enough electricity next spring to make Broward County the hub of the state's power network.

Only three years ago the area's overtaxed electric system needed the help of a floating power plant loaned by the Navy to get through the winter.

A labor force of 230 is in full swing at the sun-baked, 70-acre site south of the port, with work about 20 per cent complete and "close to schedule," says officials of Bechtel Corp., the construction firm.

A giant, red boiler frame, concrete turbine pedestal and a lonely, unfinished smokestack already stand in sharp relief against the white sand with workers scurrying like like ants about the huge structures.

The plant, Florida's largest, will include two 240,000-kilowatt turbine generators, each with its own boiler and 16-story smokestack. One complete unit will be operating in May 1960, the other by May 1961, FP&L officials estimate.

Smokestack Will Be 16 Stories High
. . . and it may go another 10

FP&L's three power plants in Dade County generate 513,000 kilowatts, but the Port Everglades plant will boost Broward capacity to 654,000 kilowatts next year and 240,000 more by 1961. The Fort Lauderdale plant west of Dania, now the state's largest, has a 414,000-kilowatt capacity.

When completed, the Port Everglades plant will generate enough power to serve a community of 800,000, says E. W. (Ed) Smith, FP&L manager for Broward County. It will raise the utility's total capacity to 2,128,000 kilowatts, including a nearly finished addition at Sanford.

This week the first large piece of equipment for Port Everglades will be installed with the raising of a 108-ton steam drum for one of the boilers.

Only one big problem has hampered construction work since it began last May, said Harry O. Reinsch Jr., general superintendent for Bechtel, and that's been licked.

A soil hazard involving collapsible strata, 47 to 67 feet below ground level, required the driving of longer piles than had been planned and caused a few weeks' delay.

The plant will include money saving features such as the ability to operate under greater pressures and higher temperatures than any in the system, Smith said. He would not estimate the plant's cost beyond saying that it would run over "20 million dollars."

Part of FP&L's $567 million expansion program started in 1952. It also has room for three more generators as powerful as those being installed.

Population Boom: Will It Bring A Growing Danger of Narcotics?

By PAT MANGAN
Herald Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — Not everything that accompanies growth is desirable in a city.

Dope and dope addiction come under the heading of undesirable growth, but police fear that as Fort Lauderdale's population increases so will the number of people who deal in narcotics.

Last month, for the first time, police faced a serious effort to set up a narcotics business here.

Two users were arrested. Police said they admitted planning an armed robbery to get funds to go into the heroin and marijuana business on a large scale.

"As the town grows, narcotics will be a constant threat," said Detective Dudley Johnston, who last November attended a six-week training course conducted by the Federal Bureau of Narcotics for police officers all over the world.

* * *

THE FACT THAT Fort Lauderdale is a seaport town adds to the likelihood of narcotics coming to it, Johnston said. While there is evidence that narcotics have come through Port Everglades, they have not stayed in this area, he added.

"Narcotics users arrested here usually indicate their closest source for obtaining drug is Miami, Johnston said.

"More and more people arrested here for minor violations are found to have records for possessing narcotics," Johnston said.

These people are questioned carefully, he said, adding that the best preventive is watchfulness. To that he added cooperation from the public and from pharmacists and doctors.

* * *

RECOGNITION OF narcotics and narcotics users, how to work with informers, and surveillance were among the topics included in the course Johnston studied in Washington.

Heroin is the most popular drug of addiction, it was pointed out. It is invariably diluted before sold by retailers in capsules or folded paper packages.

Opium itself is not popular in the U.S., officers were taught. Using it requires elaborate preparation and the odor is very noticeable.

SO IS THE ODOR of marijuana, not an addictive drug in itself, but "the first step toward addiction."

Marijuana smoking never has been discovered among school-age youngsters here, Johnston said, though there have been reports of it. All are investigated.

Average Sewer Cost In Pompano: $325

POMPANO BEACH — The average homeowner in the area of Pompano to be initially served by a $4.8 million sanitary sewer program will have to pay about $325 the first year.

But he'll have plenty of time to accumulate the money, because if voters approve the general obligation bond issue ($3.3 million) needed for financing the system at the May 19 referendum, it would be September 1961 before the sewer system would be completed.

The initial costs can be broken down this way: (based on the estimated financing proposals, subject to review by the city's fiscal agent.)

According to city records, the average taxable real estate property is $3,000. So with the 1.5 mill levy required to help retire the general obligation bonds, the homeowner would pay $4.50 in taxes.

The average home will have five plumbing fixtures (a fixture is a drain connection: toilet, shower, sink, utility tub, kitchen sink, etc.) requiring a monthly service charge of $2.75. This comes to $33 a year. (Larger homes would pay more. The charge is based on $2.50 for four fixtures, and 25 cents extra for each additional fixture.)

Then there will be the special assessment, at $2.50 per front foot. Considering an average lot to be 70 feet, this cost would come to $175. The property owner can save money by paying this sum all at once, or it can be paid over a 10-year period, with six per cent interest.

Each homeowner will have to hire a plumber to make the necessary connection from his home's sewer system to the city's lateral lines, at the property line. This has been estimated at $2.25 a foot. Costs will vary greatly from home to home but a 50-foot run would be considered average. This amounts to $112.50.

Proposed Aid Cuts Would Hurt

Question Mark Hangs Over County Schools

By GREG TAYLOR
Herald Staff Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — How hard will proposed cuts in state aid hit education in Broward County?

If the Legislature approves a proposed five per cent slash in state school appropriations "the situation looks bleak for Broward," said William Minton, assistant superintendent for finance.

"The coming school year would be one of the hardest in a decade to find the means for financing the daily education of our children.

"Half the money spent to pay for day-to-day operating costs in Broward County comes from state aid.

"If the Legislature makes the cuts that have been proposed, we may face a cutback in the present educational program."

Even if voters approve a five-mill hike in real estate tax rates, the increased revenue would not be available until the fall of 1960.

* * *

THIS HANGS A BIG question mark over school operations for next year.

If the millage increase is approved in the Nov. 3 election, it will produce about $2.5 million based on the 1958 tax rolls, Minton said.

Looking further ahead — "Once we reach the 20-mill limit, we'll have to depend on increased state or federal aid to pay for increasing costs of operations. Unless, that is, tax rolls grow enough to keep up with the increase in school enrollments."

Broward has the fourth largest school system in the state. A total budget this year of $35 million makes it the biggest "business" in the county.

Of the total budget, $20 million pays for building schools, other capital outlays, such as buying sites or buses, and debt service. About $15 million is being spent to operate the schools.

"Next year, to provide the same educational program, we estimate it will take roughly $17 million. That's taking into consideration an anticipated increase of 7,000 children."

* * *

ENROLLMENT, IN TURN, is normally the basis for determining the amount of state aid a county receives.

But the increased number of school children isn't the only factor that boosts operating costs.

"Every time a new school is opened, it increases the cost of operations. When we take children off double sessions we have to have more furniture, more utilities, more custodial help and spend more on maintenance."

Broward won't know how it stands on state aid until after the Legislature adjourns in June.

"We have no way of knowing whether a five per cent cut will be made across the board or whether certain programs such as free textbooks or adult vocational education will be eliminated."

On the basis of what was received this year, a five per cent slash just to the Minimum Foundation Fund for operations and the special sales tax fund would cost the county a loss of about $400,000 in operating revenue.

* * *

IT'S NOT KNOWN whether the five per cent cut would include the state school construction fund.

This year Broward is getting $1,119,000 from the construction fund.

"We're not in too bad shape in construction for the coming year. We have money for all the projects planned for the 1959-60 school year."

"But there are no funds in sight to build schools for any subdivisions that might spring up."

Charles Lowery, school planner, agreed. "The money we have is all allocated to planned projects. Financing will be pretty close. We'll have a pretty heavy construction program next year with about 19 projects."

Source of Cash?

FORT LAUDERDALE—This year it's costing $15,335,000 to operate Broward County schools. Here's where the money is coming from:

About half, $7.6 million, is raised through local taxes. The state contributes almost all of the rest.

The county is getting $6,448,000 from the Minimum Foundation Fund. Other state assistance comes from special sales tax fund, $907,000; free textbook fund, $119,000; driver education fund, $37,000.

Broward also gets $207,000 in federal aid for the school lunch program.

25 Years of Helping Others

She Found Way to Beat Disaster

By FRAN LASLIE
Herald Staff Writer

WEST HOLLYWOOD—Today's lesson in first aid —

An arm of a chair and a soiled dustcloth make a dandy splint for a broken bone.

Miss Bess Allen, who has a sweet face, a soft voice and plenty of self-sufficiency, learned that the hard way.

Last Friday she broke her arm, made her own splint and calmly took herself off to Memorial Hospital.

Miss Allen is 71.

* * *

AND SHE IS living proof that the spirit of the pioneer has not faded away.

While trimming the hibiscus hedge at her home at 6119 SW 18th St., she tripped in the grass and fell on her left arm.

"I've broken my arm," she called to her brother, Donald. "Bring me a board and some clean dustcloths."

Unfortunately Donald did panic. In his excitement he couldn't find a board — so he broke off the arm of a chair.

"And he got the dirstiest cloth in the closet," said Miss Bess.

Doctors at Memorial Hospital, however, thought it was a commendable job. But Miss Bess was chagrined.

WHEN DISASTER STRIKES
—Herald Staff Photo By Steve Wever

Bess Allen, Red Cross Worker, Met Disaster
. . . she made own splint when she broke arm

"The Red Cross would fire me if they could see this funny splint," she said.

Bess Allen, you see, is a veteran Red Cross worker who has aided others for more than a quarter century.

* * *

SHE HAS COVERED nearly every major disaster in the nation during that time, beginning with the devastating 1926 hurricane in Miami.

She has been into the black bottoms of coal mines, rowed over swollen rivers, witnessed fires, tornadoes and shipwrecks.

As a social worker with the National Red Cross rehabilitation program, she has gone into 45 states to survey the aftermath of disasters.

To get to the scene, Miss Allen has ridden mules, (in the Kentucky hills) traveled by rowboat, wagon and on foot.

"In the old days, there weren't the conveniences we have now. Sometimes I'd think, 'We'll never make it' — but we always got there."

Answering the call of a national emergency often meant going without food, sleep or water.

During the 1937 floods she worked steadily for 36 hours. After everyone except she, an orderly and a doctor had been evacuated, Miss Allen collapsed with pneumonia. The three were forced to stay behind for two weeks in the cold, flood-wracked hotel.

* * *

THROUGH HER WORK she has seen the peaks of joy and sorrow that touch human lives.

"I particularly remember a young family during the '37 floods. They were floating on an old mattress, but it soon became water-soaked. The father jumped off and swam away.

But the mother's weight was too much for the flimsy mattress, too. So she tied the baby down and swam off.

"The parents were picked up, then hours later — after they had nearly given up hope — the baby was found floating on the mattress as sweetly as a little Moses."

The '37 floods were the worst, she said, of all the calamities she has worked in.

Her chief job is analyzing the essential needs of the stricken but she often lent a hand to the local chapter in handing out coffee and comforting the stricken.

She cannot even guess the number of hazards she as attended.

The last call was to the floods in North and South Carolina last spring.

* * *

"BUT AT 71, I find I must slow up a little," she said with a twinkle in her bright blue eyes. Her hair, now silver, softly curls around her face.

Her energy, she says, comes from remaining calm — [illegible] in emergencies. "And when a problem gets to be too much, I go fishing and forget about it," she said.

In 1943, Miss Allen and her brother moved to Hollywood. She went on semi-retirement with the Red Cross, working without pay except when on a national emergency call.

The first thing she did with her new-found leisure was build a log cabin where she and her brother lived until two years ago when they moved into their West Hollywood home.

Miss Allen is now sporting a white hospital cast on her left arm.

She doesn't want it to get around, but that hasty, homemade splint wasn't exactly up to Red Cross standards.

Traffic Crashes Increase

POMPANO BEACH—There were 52 Pompano Beach traffic accidents in March, an increase over the 46 during February.

But for the first time in many months there was not a single driving-while-intoxicated charge connected with the acidents.

The monthly report issued by Police Chief James Boggs indicates there were 11 accident injuries in March, compared with six in February.

Total property damage was estimated at $15,968 as a result of the accidents.

Fire Loss Low For Pompano

POMPANO BEACH — This city came through March with only $285 in property loss from fires, according to a March report by Fire Chief C. L. Goodrich.

The department responded to 15 alarms during the month. Three were residences, one commercial, three first aid and assistance, six grass and woods fires, one mutual aid response to Margate, and one miscellaneous.

Seniors Not Collared On Their 'Shirt Day'

By DUANE JONES
Herald Staff Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Principal Harold Phares, with hands on hips, stared dubiously into the school patio.

"You name it . . . We have it," he grinned.

Wednesday was "Senior Shirt Day" at South Broward High School, and the kids didn't miss a trick.

Sporting a week-old beard and sidearms, Bill Davison was a dead-ringer for Fidel Castro.

Little Miss Muffet was represented and so were Huckleberry Finn, Tom Sawyer, Marilyn Monroe, Davy Crockett, Elvis Presley and scores of other celebrities and comic book characters.

"This is the one day we let our hair down," explained Bart Peistring, senior class president.

"The rest of the year we try to be dignified . . . like seniors should."

"But on Hell Day, or Shirt Day, we really cut loose. Anything goes."

"Almost anything," chimed in the school principal. "I had to confiscate a few water pistols, but other than that the kids have caused no trouble."

While most of the seniors were having a ball, Bill Davison, the Castro impersonator, had a problem.

School officials informed him his prize beard "had to go" Wednesday night.

"They told me to shave it off or not return Thursday," Bill sighed.

"That's a big decision. I'd rather put my right arm in a meat grinder than shave.

"And I'm not too crazy about school."

It's 'Plectronic Piano'

Artist Invents Piano-Guitar

ATLANTA — (UPI) — An Atlanta man has crossed a small piano with a singing guitar — and come up with a "plectronic piano."

William B. Taylor is the inventor of this unique instrument that looks like a miniature baby grand, but sounds like an electric guitar.

Taylor's plectronic piano is played just like a regular piano. The big difference is that when the key is depressed, the strings are plucked instead of hammered. A small metal device at the back of each key plucks the strings as the key is struck.

Taylor's first model used piano strings, but the wire was too heavy, giving the instrument too much overtone. Guitar string wire is used in his present model. An electronic system is built in for volume.

The inventor cut and fashioned his own wooden keys and covered them with ivory. The instrument is housed in a delicate, highly-polished birch case.

Taylor, a commercial artist, says he got the idea for the plectronic back in 1926 when he was strumming a guitar with a Dixieland Jazz Band in New Orleans.

He decided to build an instrument that combined the good points of the piano and the guitar. He started work on his first plectronic a few years later.

City Leaves Its Mark

By RICK TUTTLE
Herald Staff Writer

FOUR MONTHS ISN'T LONG enough to acquire a thorough understanding of a community. It is time enough to grasp the basic problems, meet the politicians, learn the streets and some of the prejudices.

But it takes much longer to really know a community; to know the motives that dictate the outcome of a particular issue.

I'm leaving before obtaining the full knowledge.

But after four months here, I think Hollywood is a good city — in many ways splendidly operated — and South Broward in general has unlimited potential.

However a like or dislike for a city frequently comes more from treatment by the people in it, than from its taxes or policies.

Remembering the cities I lived and worked in, I recall the people, their attitudes and actions, not what the millage was or whether the commission met every Tuesday or Monday.

When thinking back of South Broward, I'll remember:

The people's pride in the sparkling new outfit Hollywood Blvd. wore for the mild winter.

The violent political squabbles of small western communities.

The little old lady who laughed as she waded across a downtown street during a heavy rain.

After her son was shot by a playmate, the mother saying, "The doctor said Harold just coughed blood and died." The fireman kneeling on the burning roof of Riverside Military Academy, flames leaping up around him, the great clouds of smoke covering him, leaving only his hand in view — clutching the bulwark.

The Tie That Binds, Etc.

"I WANT TO KNOW who dislikes you so," City Commissioner William Zinkil said.

"The tie?" asked City Attorney August Paoli.

Zinkil nodded, laughing. The tie was red, white, blue, brown, green, a hand-painted thing.

"My mother-in-law gave it to me," Paoli said.

"Don't go any further," Zinkil said. "Just don't wear it to court."

"I already have," Paoli said. "I got an adverse decision."

Thoughtfulness at a Jail

THEY WERE thoughtful children.

The girl combed her hair. She spun around on the heel of her tennis shoe and combed her hair again. She wore dungarees and a shirt and a pastel sweater. She was 12 or 13.

The boy sat on the floor, leaning against the wall. His long hair fell in front of his eyes and he tossed his head automatically to replace it. He smoked a cigaret.

His black leather jacket was open and his motorcycle boots were unpolished and worn. His feet blocked the walkway.

He was 12 or 13, too.

Policemen glanced at the couple as they walked by. The boy always moved his feet for the cops.

The girl was restless. Visiting hours begin at 4 p.m. It was only 2 o'clock.

"They came to see a friend," the desk sergeant said. "He's upstairs in jail. Nineteen or so."

They were thoughtful children. They waited.

American Hero—But Not Early

NO, CAROLE, it wasn't the Civil War.

I may be old but not that old.

And why do people insist on identifying me with Early American history?

I'm just a kid—hardly out of my teens.

But apparently not in the pretty eyes of 16-year-old Carole Johnson, Hollywood's new Fiesta queen.

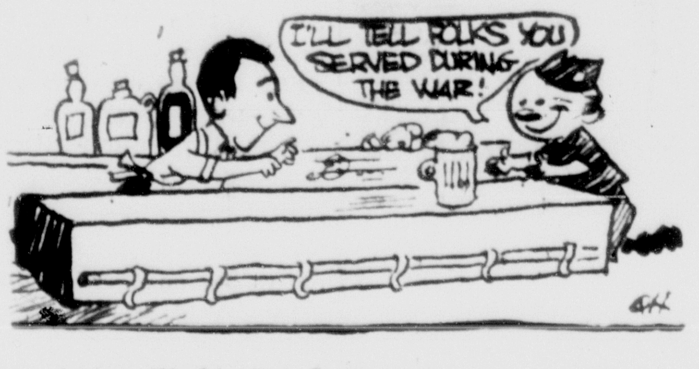
While interviewing Carole a few days ago she mentioned that she came here from New York. And being a name dropper, I bragged of being there a few months during the war.

"The Civil War?" Carole asked excitedly.

Maybe she was trying to be humorous but I don't think so. And I don't think much of the Civil War was fought in New York.

We Joneses aren't cowards. We're fighters. But I don't know that any of us carried a musket in that particular campaign.

John Paul, of course, did us proud in the Revolutionary War, and my Uncle LeRoy upheld the family tradition during World War I. He didn't go overseas, but would have with a little more coaxing.



I'LL TELL FOLKS YOU SERVED DURING THE WAR!
GH

And you've read, perhaps, of my heroism in World War II. You won't find much in the Congressional Library, but if you've been following this column you're award that I was there.

And if you don't want to take my word, check with the American Legion at Kokomo, Ind. I was a member of the Post's drum and bugle corps in 1946 and 1947, and also served drinks on the regular bartender's night off.

But no, Carole, not the Civil War.

But Frankie Didn't Call Either

ONE OF MY NOT-TOO-GENTLE readers has fired me a not-too-complimentary letter in which she raked me over the coals for not taking my wife to see Frank Sinatra when he was in Miami.

She may be right in calling me the names she did, but I'd like to remind her that Sinatra made no attempt to see me.

And I've been home all winter.

HENRY KINNEY

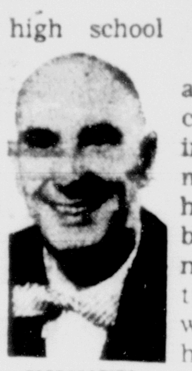
Why Wait to Teach Foreign Languages?

COUNTY SCHOOL OFFICIALS deserve commendation for their plan to begin teaching languages in the lower grades—specifically, to introduce Spanish into the eighth grade.

The question should be raised, however: Is the eighth grade early enough? Would we do better to start foreign languages in the sixth or the fifth—or even sooner than that?

In Hollywood, as a Herald article noted a few weeks ago, there's a private school which teaches French to children only three years old. The method is quite successful, according to the teachers. At that age, they say, children learn a second language as easily as a nursery rhyme.

Moreover, they contend, high school youngsters have too many outside interests to distract them from the proper study of languages.



KINNEY

In Broward County public schools, it is encouraging to note some traditional teaching theories are rapidly going out the window. Courses are being modernized and special ones established for gifted students. This is, of course, a development for which we can thank the Russians and their sputnik. Now that we have begun to see the light, to understand that the purpose of an educational system is to educate, not to turn out baton twirlers, and now that our boys and girls are beginning to get the same idea, let's go at languages with some vigor.

* * *

New Era Launched

IT HAS BEEN the habit of the American people to report to each other periodically such revelations as that the average college freshman can't name 10 U. S. presidents, or that the average high school senior thinks the Missouri Compromise is Harry Truman's favorite Waltz. These disclosures usually have caused virtually no alarm. We have continued to feel that no matter what the tests showed, our youngsters would come out all right in the end and emerge as pretty good executives, engineers, teachers, lawyers and doctors.

This is still widely believed, and in essence it may be correct. Since the launching of the sputnik, however, we have been learning that much of the battle for freedom is likely to be fought in the classrooms of this country and the USSR.

We have learned other things, too: that Russian representatives go forth into other countries knowing the languages of those countries thoroughly, in contrast to Americans who too frequently go with no knowledge of other languages and no whole-hearted intention of learning any. The advantage this gives the Russians as they pursue their subversive schemes is obvious.

Learning modern languages can be made an adventure. It's not easy to turn a math class into adventure, or arouse a youngster's interest in Latin, a language that is spoken nowhere in the world. But he can take a heavy dose of Spanish or French, or even both, if his chums are getting it too. He'll make it a big deal, using it as a secret code, turning it into slang; he may twist it and warp it a little, but if he's given a chance, he'll absorb it.

No individual is truly educated unless he knows at least one language other than his own. We should begin pumping languages into our school children early enough to have them speaking foreign tongues fluently by the time they get involved with the social and athletic distractions of high school life.

* * *

For Mom, Pop Too

ADULTS OF THIS county who want to learn languages have the facilities of fine night school programs in Fort Lauderdale and Hollywood at their disposal.

Only Spanish is taught right now, but any course will be established if there's enough demand for it.

Parents who hope to keep pace with their youngsters had better go to work on foreign tongues. Otherwise they may find Sis and Junior plotting devilment across the dinner table in Spanish.

Capital Punishment... Simple and Complex

FOR OR AGAINST capital punishment?

It's one of the big issues of our time, here and abroad. Our own Legislature is likely to consider it this month.

It's both simple — because everyone can understand the stark alternatives — and complicated — because it's loaded with taboos and prejudices handed down by history.

On one hand, there's the ancient "life for a life" doctrine. On the other, there are modern social theories that seek beyond the criminal for the cause of crime.

For us in this county, the debate is no abstract discussion. It's real.

Time Runs Out For Buzzy Mead

AS YOU READ THIS, Buzzy Mead, 50, sits in a cell on the fourth floor of the courthouse facing the electric chair at Raiford.

Four years ago Mead was sentenced to death. He won an appeal, had a new trial, was sentenced to death again. All the remaining appeals have been used up.

Last week Mead was declared sane. His life is running out.

Time, legendary healer of all wounds, has dulled the sense of outrage at his two brutal murders. Mercifully for humanity, horror gets buried under the years.

But Mead is still a life-size problem. Opinion is divided.

Some people feel that four years facing execution is a cruel and unusual punishment — worse than death itself. Others think that Mead still owes his life, and not a life in prison.

Society rightfully condemns murder as a violent, premeditated act.

It's curious that the punishment is another premeditated act of violence.

Double Standard In Manors?

IN WILTON MANORS some people wonder if there's one set of rules for the average citizens, and another for those with official connections.

There was the recent instance of a former council member who rode to club meetings in a police car.

Then there was the arrest of E. L. Braddy and his partner, Mayor Frank Starling. Braddy said they didn't go down to the police station because "it was raining awful hard."

Now there's the celebrated case of the coin-operated laundry whose attorney is Municipal Judge William Leonard. The city has lost two Circuit Court suits in defense of the laundry's zoning status.

Three weeks ago its variance was quashed. Since then it's been operating in apparent violation of the zoning laws.

Circuit Judge Richard Sauls' ruling against the variance was attacked in print by City Attorney William Miller. The judge took the criticism in good part.

His decision held in part that a tenant does not have sufficient interest to obtain a rezoning of his landlord's property.

When there were wails over this, Judge Sauls remarked simply: "Suppose the owner does not want the change?"

Committee Needed Now

By CLARENCE ZAITZ
North Broward Bureau

NORTH BROWARD—Deerfield Beach, which will receive an engineering report on a sanitary sewer system any day now, is in a position to profit nicely from the experiences of nearby Pompano Beach.

Both communities have similar economies, and both have the same assortment of residents, so that the public sentiment in one town could be quite similar to that in the other.

Pompano learned that the appointment of a citizens advisory committee on sewers, as a fact-disbursing organization, came too late. The committee should have been appointed before the commission set a referendum date which subsequently had to be changed.

Deerfield could appoint that committee about the same time the engineers disclose the report to the commission.

In fact, as has been demonstrated in Pompano, that committee could function more effectively if it joined with the City Commission in the initial review of the engineering report.

The proposed method of financing the Pompano project, though initially opposed by the citizens group, was finally compromised.

After all, it is to the advantage of the commission to have as much public support as possible, because the matter has to go to a referendum, anyway, if a bond issue is necessary.

* * *

Permanent Sewerage Committee Asked

THE POMPANO CITIZENS Advisory Committee on sewers made this suggestion to the City commission, too: That there will be created a permanent citizens sewerage committee, to be appointed by all of the Pompano Beach property owners associations, which committee will be kept informed by the City Commission in advance of any major decisions regarding the sewerage system.

Charge for Septic Tank: $22-$42

AND JUST IN CASE you have never experienced difficulty with your septic tank, here's what the average cost is to have your tank pumped: $22 for a small one; $32 for medium; and $42 for a large tank. The firms who specialize in such jobs say a tank needs to be pumped out every 2½ to 10 years, depending upon individual conditions.

Problem Hit--But Not the Solution

POMPANO CITY MANAGER James Hughes has been a bit unhappy with an erosion study report received last week from the coastal engineering laboratory of the University of Florida.

The survey, financed by city money and that raised by some oceanfront property owners, was to have explored the erosion problem, and offered suggestive remedies.

Apparently the report hit the problem on the head, but was a bit hazy in suggestions for solving that problem.

Hughes is still sitting on the report, hoping for a visit from Dr. Per Bruun, head of the laboratory to provide supplemental information before the report is studied by the City Commission.

Water Cleanup Lauded

EDITOR: Recently, I noticed an item in your paper stating that there was a project afoot to clean up the Intracoastal Waterway here.

Capt. Jim Andrews is to be congratulated for initiating this undertaking.

We are yacht owners and we, as well as our friends, know by sad experience the great need for this program. It is most discouraging, particularly to visiting yachtsmen.

On two occasions, with guests aboard, we struck flotsam in the waterway, damaging our rudder, necessitating our return to the dock, spoiling our day, and giving us additional expense on our boat.

Last year, as the head of the anti-litterbug campaign for the county's garden clubs, I became familiar with the problem. I can assure you the wholehearted support of this civic-minded group.

Animal Lover Speaks for Pup

EDITOR: I read where the Humane Society of Fort Lauderdale had put a lot of dead dogs' bodies on a dump in Fort Lauderdale and they were left there for the bulldozer to come and cover, but one poor little pup managed to survive.

The most disgraceful thing about the whole thing was for the so-called Humane Society to go out there and still destroy that little pup. It should have been made well again and given another chance.

Better Business Bureau Planned

Fly-by-Nights' Wings Clipped?

By FRAN LASLIE
Herald Staff Writer

ASIDE TO ALL fly-by-night operators, con-game qizards and sleight of hand experts:

FRAN

The Chamber of Commerce is planning a special bureau with you in mind. In fact, they're scheming to encourage you to light in some other community.

That's the reason behind the satisfied grin of Chamber Manager Wilfred Cadotte.

His year-long crusade for a better business division appears to be ending in a workable plan. It would take care of regular complaints that crop up as well as discourage an influx of any shady operations.

Chan Cunningham and Regis Reasbeck are scheduled to report on the new division at the directors meeting at noon Wednesday.

Under the plan, complaints would be handled at the chamber office on a partime basis. Someone with experience in dealing with the public, preferably retired, would be in charge. His expsnes, supported initially by the chamber, would later be paid through merchant contributions.

"It is a step in the right direction and I think merchants will be for it 100 per cent," Cadotte said.

Without a special division Cadotte has cautioned the chamber that it has little power to fight fly-by-nights.

He and Chamber Secretary Lois Carey, now take complaints. "But we don't have the time or facilities to do the job," he said.

The idea was first considered last fall. Attorney Harvey Ford has checked out better business methods used in Dade County and Fort Lauderdale.

The division would be a boost to the community, Cadotte said, and a blow to any shady business operators.

Haiti Chief Won't Fall, Aide Says in Deerfield

By CLARENCE ZIATZ
North Broward Bureau

DEERFIELD BEACH — Will Haiti's president, Dr. Francois Duvalier, be toppled from power Wednesday as predicted?

A part-time Deerfield Beach resident who is personal advisor to the Haitian president, says no.

He is Francis R. Cusumano, Duvalier's personal representative in Washington since the president's election 17 months ago.

"The people are still behind Duvalier 100 per cent," Cusumano said. "The strength of the 'Abe Lincoln of Haiti' lies in his many years of work as a doctor in the interior where he made long-lasting friendships.

"They look to him as their 'savior,' and have implicit faith in his ability to restore the nation's chaotic economic condition to normal."

The prediction for the downfall of Duvalier was made by Louis Dejoie, who was defeated as president. Cusumano says Dejoie, Daniel Fignole, Clement Jumelle and other "opposition" leaders "won't have the support of the people."

Cusumano, who visits the island republic frequently, said the U.S. State department is still trying to cut red tape to ease the hunger pangs of Haiti.

"By supplying food, we'll strengthen the country and bring them closer to the democratic way of thinking," Duvalier's aide said.

He also predicted that a recent grant of $6 million to Haiti through the International Cooperation Administration will do much to help stabilize the country's economic condition.

Cusumano credits Florida Rep. Dante B. Fascell for securing the aid. Cusumano played a vital role as Duvalier's representative in this country.

"This aid has given the Haitian people concrete evidence of the faith the U.S. has in their country," Cusumano said. "It will do much to strengthen the U.S.-Haitian alliance."

Allsworth Represents Pair

Legislature Opening Postpones Two Trials

FORT LAUDERDALE — Trial of a mother and son on charges of passing worthless checks has been postponed because the Legislature meets this week.

Their attorney, State Rep. Emerson Allsworth, obtained the postponement because he is busy preparing for the legislative session.

Mrs. Helene Dahlman, 70, was due to appear in Criminal Court Tuesday. Her son, Louis, 41, was to face the same charge in the same court and a lesser charge in connection with a bad check in Court of Crimes.

County Solicitor Thomas Coker explained that a state statute provides for continuance of cases involving an attorney who is serving in the Legislature. The trials were reset for June.

The charges may be dropped if restitution is made, Coker said.

The Dahlmans operate a New York travel agency. Their last local address was 837 NE 17th Ter.

Two Sides to Annexation Story

POMPANO BEACH — There are two different thoughts on annexation of suburban areas. The city's—and the county's.

Basically the county feels no area should be annexed unless those people want annexation.

And the city tends to believe it should have something to say about annexing areas that are benefiting from the city, but not subject to its taxation.

County Commission Chairman George Petersen said only last week that before any city thinks of annexation, it should look to the problems that annexation will create.

And on at least one point, the county and Pompano agree—there is no use annexing areas which will not help in paying their way.

The city demonstrated often in recent annexation discussions that it doesn't want to annex land merely for the sake of annexation.

But the city officials, ever cognizant of increasing demands suburban areas make on municipal government, realize that without annexation, [illegible] ited.

If city area is not increased, it will not be long before the fringe areas of development would command a greater population than the city's.

The city is anxious for annexation — but wants to skip the areas of county slums, and the huge low-cost housing projects to the north.

That leaves not many directions to go.

One has already been indicated. The city is seeking ways of annexing some 800 acres of land west of Sunshine State Parkway — even though it's two miles from the city limits, and the city doesn't want to incorporate what is in between. They're trying now to annex a connecting strip — the Pompano Canal.

Unless the growth of Pompano may be northward, across Hammondville Rd., from this 800-acre tract, the only other way to go is south—through Lyons Park, High Ridge Estates, and the vast, rapidly developing area of fine homes south of McNab Rd.

But the city has adopted a strict "hands off" policy toward annexation thoughts of Cresthaven, Collier Manor or Pompano Beach Highlands.

The only way that would be considered would be if Lighthouse Point is included.

And while that is the thinking, no one dares state publicly that's what the commission would like, because they don't want to get a feud of cities started.

The Bird In Hand Worth . . .

BALTIMORE — (AP) — A woman selling reference books for children was demonstrating how her product makes a boy think for himself.

She showed 4-year-old Frederick Spinning a picture of three small birds, one with an open beak, and one larger bird.

"Which bird gets the worm, Freddie?" she asked.

"The bird on the end of the row," Freddie replied. "He's the biggest."

She made a sale.

Commuter Champion? 700 Miles

MARYVILLE, Tenn. — (AP) — Dale K. Russell spends $1,500 a year traveling to work. He lives 700 miles from his job.

Russell, 40, is a first officer for Pan American Airways, with headquarters in New York.

Since 1957, Russell and his family have lived in his hometown of Maryville.

Russell, who has been with Pan-American 15 years, plans to continue his present schedule as long as is feasible.

He points out that despite the distance, he spends only 14 flight hours a month commuting, which is less time than many who live much closer to their jobs spend in their cars.

Mrs. Elizabeth Borbely Smiles Over Score

. . . husband Anton agrees it's "eleg jo"

By DICK MEYER
Herald Staff Writer

WILTON MANORS—A 70-year-old bowler with bursitis in her shoulder has set a target for Broward County keglerettes.

Mrs. Elizabeth Borbely, who claims she is "relearning" the game, rolled a 299 at Manor Lanes.

When her husband, Anton, watched the final ball hit "right in the pocket," he momentarily lapsed into their native Hungarian to shout "eleg jo!" (Very good).

The 10th frame effort was very good, but Lady Luck last week refused to smile on one of her sex.

The gray-haired little woman swayed with the tottering five pin, then watched it right itself, costing her a "perfect game."

★ ★ ★

MRS. BORBELY wasn't overly disappointed.

"More important than a 300 score is that my shoulder feels better now that I'm exercising it more," she rationalized.

She resumed bowling last summer after giving it up for five years because of shoulder pains and a mild heart condition.

"But when you retire, you just can't retire," she gestured, by way of explaining her decision.

The Borbelys, who live at 208 NE 21st Ct., came here five years ago after disposing of a Detroit supermarket business which kept them both occupied for many years.

★ ★ ★

"I FEEL BETTER when I'm bowling than when I'm sitting at home doing nothing," she said. "Now when my husband says he's going bowling, I don't say 'Goodbye.' I say "Wait for me'".

Elizabeth Borbely, who looks much younger than her age, has a health and beauty [illegible]

Medium Fast Ball

. . . new dream: 300

"Playing hard, like working hard, makes you feel and look younger."

She and her husband, who is 71, play as many as 10 games when they go bowling.

The 299 effort has skyrocketed her morale.

★ ★ ★

THE NEAR-PERFECT score came in open competition, against Anton, whose Dogpatch League average is slightly better than his wife's 144.

"I should pass him now," she needled. He smiled acceptance of the fact that she generally beats him in open bowling. (While Elizabeth bowled 299, Anton settled for a 173 game.)

Mrs. Borbely's 299 exceeded by 22 pins the best prior Manor [illegible] pinfall by a feminine bowler.

A bowling ball manufacturer sent Mrs. Borbely a "300 pin," explaining that in deference to her age the company was making a "one-pin exception."

Catcher Testa: Giants In First -- After Braves

By DUANE JONES
Herald Staff Writer

POMPANO BEACH—Watch out for the San Francisco Giants this year. They're going to be tough.

But not tough enough to outdistance the Milwaukee Braves.

That's the opinion of Nick Testa, a Dallas Rangers catcher who was bullpen catcher for the Giants last year.

Mike figures his old teammates should wind up in second place. Last year they were third.

"They'll be strong, but Milwaukee has too much offense and defense," Mike said.

He believes the Giants will be stronger in the pitching department, and is predicting good seasons for Hurlers Jack Sanford and Sad Sam Jones.

—Herald Staff Photo by Mel Kenyon

Nick Testa

. . . he's optimistic

Sandford had a bad year with second division Philadelphia last season (10-13) but Testa believes he'll "be hot" with a winning club.

Jones racked up a 14-13 record with the Cardinals last year.

"Our only real weak spot last year was at short and that's been taken care of with the acquisition of Andre Rogers," Testa said. "He should have a great year."

Testa also foresees a good season for the Dallas club. "The boys have been looking great and should be hard to beat," he added.

FISHING BROWARD WATERS

Gal Anglers Score High

By GEORGE E. CROWLEY
Herald Columnist

A CHECK ON THE "JUST RELEASED" International Game Fish Association world record chart for 1958 shows that Broward's feminine anglers are way out in front of their male counterparts. In fact, the box score shows eight records for the women and only three for the men.

Mrs. C. G. Pollard, Fort Lauderdale, continues to hold the top position with an "all-tackle women's" snook record of 33 pounds, 12 ounces, caught July 29, 1951, on 30-pound test tline.

Other record holders are Margaret Paine, Pompano Beach, 54-pound kingfish caught Jan. 6, 1957, and Vivian Pritchett, Pompano Beach, sailfish, 75 pounds, caught June 21, 1956. Both are champions in the 30-pound line test class.

The 50-pound line test champs include Dorothy Snyder, Fort Lauderdale, Dolphin, 52 pounds, caught Dec. 3, 1956; Mrs. E. C. Minas Jr., Pompano Beach, sailfish, 95 pounds, caught March 16, 1952; and Helen Jacobsen, Fort Lauderdale, permit, 36 pounds, April 19, 1951.

Champs in the 80-pound line test class are Mrs. D. W. Miller, Pompano Beach, allison tuna, 193 pounds, 12 ounces, Nov. 7, 1957; and Laura M. Walker, Hillsboro Beach, wahoo, 86½ pounds, June 16, 1958.

[illegible] Fort Lauderdale, holds the men's 30-pound line test record on allison tuna with a 185-pounder caught Nov. 29, 1957.

In the 50-pound line test class, F. J. Fleming, Pompano Beach, holds the record on swordfish with a 444-pound broadbill caught off Hillsboro Inlet April 27, 1951; and W. E. Johnson, Pompano Beach, is champ in the men's white marlin division with a 159½-pounder caught April 25, 1953.

Illinois Woman Bags Big Blue

OFFSHORE FISHING HIT a new high last week off Hillsboro Inlet with a record catch of two blue marlin, 10 white marlin, 44 sailfish (14 released) and loads of wahoo, dolphin, kingfish, blackfin tuna and snappers reported. Visiting anglers filed a total of 74 catches of eligible fish for Chamber of Commerce certificate awards.

Mrs. J. Kenneth Laird, Kenilworth, Ill., topped the field and won first place in the blue marlin division of the tournament when she entered a 260½-pound, 10-foot, three-inch blue. The catch was made from the charter Joyce III.

A smaller blue, 122 pounds, fell to M. R. de Tolve, Chicago, on a junket of the Tradewinds.

Robert Hachtel, Baltimore, nailed the heaviest sailfish, 70 pounds, and the largest wahoo, a 75-pound bruiser, was caught by G. Kendall Smith, Minneapolis.

Anglers catching white marlin were Mrs. F. Clatworthy, Detroit, 72 pounds; Mrs. Walter J. Bragdon Jr., Pittsburgh, 71; T. R. Ackerbloom, Wayside, Md., 69; Ann S. Copeland, Allisom Park, Pa., 65; D. E. Hardenbrook, Rochester, N.Y., 60; John Burleigh, Pleasant Ridge, Mich., 58½; G. W. Jackson, East Orange, N.J., 53; Mrs. Edwin Motch, Shaker Heights, Ohio; 49; Oscar Bard, Detroit, 48; and Mimi Reim, Pompano Beach.

The Fish With a Roving Eye

DID YOU KNOW? — Strangely enough, all baby flounders start out in life with an eye on each side of the head as do normal fish. As the flounder ages, one eye works its way around so that by the time the fish reaches maturity both eyes are close together on one side of its head.

Big Mackerel Caught at Piers

BIG MACKEREL, in the six-pound class, are being caught at both the Deerfield Beach and Anglin's piers.

Jim Decker, West Hollywood, and Andy Turner, Wilton Manors, in a rented skiff, fished the port area for only two hours and caught 22 mangrove snapper and three snook, on live shrimp, the Port Boat Livery announced.

Bud Tolson, Lauderdale floor specialist, cashed in on a night trip to the port area by catching 12 snappers, a 21-pound snook, and a small tarpon which he released.

Mickey McCann reports from Cat Cay that the first giant bluefin tuna of the season was caught March 30, a 338-pounder by C. Dabney Thompson of Cincinnati. Bluefin migrate through the Florida Straits in May. This is one of the earliest catches known.

Reports from Lake Okeechobee indicate excellent fly fishing for shell-crackers and other pan fish. Big black bass are hitting plugs with a vengeance. Hot spots appear to be the Reef, Moonshine Bay, Worm Cove and the Fish Eating Creek area.

Leaders Can Scare Your Fish

BETTER MAKE THOSE LEADERS invisible if you wish to catch fish! A tackle manufacturer recently set up exhaustive experiments at the Marine Studios at St. Augustine, and the results were amazing.

As he watched and tallied results on various lures, it was found that many fish "backed off" when attracted to a lure if it was preceded by a snap, swivel or bright leader.

Five to six-foot monofilament leaders tied directly to the lures scored most often. This is without a doubt a good reason for the success of spinning tackle.

Conservationist to Speak

FREDERICK W. STURGES, state coordinator of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission, will address members of the Broward Rod and Gun Club at its monthly meeting Tuesday night. Jack McLeieer, club president, said Sturges will outline and answer questions pertaining to legislative matters of interest to sportsmen.

A 24-minute color and sound movie, "Yosemite High Sierra Trails," portrays scenic beauty, camp life and activity starting on the floor of Yosemite Valley. The movie includes several trout fishing sequences.

Meetings are in the Chamber of Commerce Building at Pompano Beach starting at 8 p.m. All sportsmen are invited.

Shark, Wahoo Catches Change Festival Board

FORT LAUDERDALE — New shark and wahoo leaders had their names posted on the Winter Fishing Festival board last week.

Earl Sexauer, Chicago, nailed the shark — a 306-pounder —from Capt. Jack Weygant's Amigo III. The catch measured 10-foot-1.

Dr. Harvey Updegrove of Hollywood reeled in a 56-pound wahoo for the second change. He fished from the private boat Alexo.

Action was heavy throughout the week.

Tournament director H. H. (Buck) Kinnaird Jr. said the week's catches included 15 sharks, 30 sailfish, eight wahoo, 25 dolphin, 20 white marlin, six blue marlin, 32 kingfish and three tarpon.

The tournament continues through the end of the month.

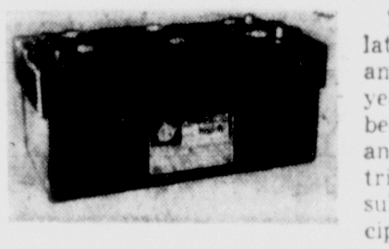
Florida Marine Batteries Lauded

"We build storage batteries of many types," said Walter G. Morris, co-owner with Jerry G. Wertz of Florida Battery Co. "These range in size from the very small units found on motor scooters to the largest, heavy - duty marine installations with from six-to-32-volt capacities.

"When we started this business in 1951, we decided to concentrate on a quality product and build our reputation on a broad service guarantee to our [illegible] abled our firm to expand nearly ten-fold in the past eight years."

"Our Florida, heavy - duty marine batteries," said Wertz, "are widely accepted by experienced yachtsmen because of uniformly superior performance and exceptionally long life. All of our marine units contain the highly-rated chemical known as ADX-2. We have used this remarkable product from the day we went into business and our faith in it certainly has been justified in the trouble-free service our marine batteries have delivered. For example:



New 12-volt Model
. . . power-packed

"Just last week a client to whom we sold a 110-volt lighting installation and twin 12-volt diesel starting units asked [illegible] before he started north in his 110-foot yacht. 'Never had a minute's trouble with those batteries since they were installed,' he said, 'but we'll be making a 1,600-mile run before getting into our home port, and remember, those batteries are at least five years old.'

"I did remember. His installation was our first big sale, and those batteries were seven years old—not five. They had been well cared for, it is true, and were entirely fit for the trip ahead. There had been no sulfation whatsoever, the principal evil of storage batteries.

"In a matter of minutes, ADX-2 can be added to any battery, just as simply as distilled water is added at a filling station. One treatment is good for the life of the battery, regardless of make. The cost is $3.00 for automobile batteries. For heavy-duty marine units, the cost of adding ADX-2 will vary according to the size of the batteries involved. We gladly will give you this information by telephone if you will call us."

Andrews Surgical Has Physician's Supplies

Capitalizing on their combined experience of more than 40 years in a highly specialized service to doctors, surgeons, and their patients, as well as to the physically handicapped, Robert A. Foster and I. Feldman own and operate Andrews Surgical Stores.

Foster is a graduate of Fordham University, New York, where he secured his degree as a pharmacist. Feldman is an expert fitter of trusses, braces and corrective anatomical supports and appliances as prescribed by doctors and surgeons. For 15 years prior to coming to Fort Lauderdale, they operated a similiar establishment in the north.

"We maintain in our store at all times," said Foster, "one of the most complete and complex inventories of its kind in Broward County. For example: when an abdominal support is prescribed by a doctor and his patient comes to us to have that prescription filled, the physician and his patient expect us to supply the device exactly according to specifications.

"Leather, plastics, cotton webbing, rubber, aluminum and stainless steel are just a few of many variations of specifications found on trusses and braces. We have to be prepared to supply exactly what is ordered. To do this on demand means that we have to carry a very large inventory.

"In addition to the wide selection of anatomical supports, crutches, folding wheel chairs and invalid walkers, we have available on a rental basis many devices which frequently are needed only during periods of convalescence.

"Our fitting service for trusses, belts and various types of supports is particularly important. This department is under the personal direction of Feldman. His many years of experience in this highly specialized field eminently qualify him for this important work. His assistants have been thoroughly trained and are carefully supervised. Consequently all patients sent to us by physicians and surgeons to be fitted for special devices are assured expert attention.

PICTURED ABOVE are I. Feldman, left, and Robert A. Foster, owners of Andrews Surgical Stores.

"Complete lines of surgical dressings, bandages, adhesives and elastic hosiery are carried in stock. Doctor's and surgeon's instruments, biologicals and injectables also are available from stock.

"Free parking facilities are provided for our customers at the M & M lot adjacent to the cafeteria on SE First Ave. Free delivery service to the home or office is available."

Andrews Surgical Stores is located at 31 SE Second St. The telephone number is JAckson 5-1152. The telephone number for night emergency service is WAbash 2-3870.

Extreme Pain of Bursitis Relieved

Dr. S. Perolman

This painful ailment is chiefly confined to the shoulder joint. In many instances, pain is so excruciating as to prevent the slightest movement.

Pain-filled days and sleepless nights are the rule in bursitis. Surveys prove bursitis and other allied rheumatic conditions respond very favorably to chiropractic care.

In these conditions displaced vertebrae press on sensitive nerves causing pain. A chiropractic doctor locates and relieves these pressures by re-alignment of the affected vertebrae (neck and upper back areas).

Basic Cause Corrected

This scientific procedure corrects the basic cause of these ailments.

For a complete explanation and correction of bursitis, consult your chiropractic doctor.

Dick Powell to Film Vegas Story in Cuba

HOLLYWOOD — (UPI)— Dick Powell and June Allyson looked very well after their hospital siege at the opening of "The Diary of Anne Frank."

Dick told me that he would like to have Rita Hayworth and Dean Martin for "Casino," which will follow "Bachelor's Baby" with Bing Crosby.

"Casino," I was interested to learn, is the adaptation of Steve Fisher's novel "No House Limit." Steve sent me a copy of his book and I must say I enjoyed reading it.

It is a Las Vegas story with a big, big mystery plot. Dick plans to shoot it in Cuba and he went there to scout locations before he came so sick.

CORNEL WILDE, who for a while feared he might lose the sight of one eye, is so fully recovered that he's accepted the starting date of April 21 for his Columbia picture "Rim of the Canyon."

Cornel continues to have all the work he can handle ahead of him and he has also been offered the lead in a big historical epic, titled "Carthage," to be made in France during the summer.

Rita Hayworth
. . . wanted for role

Cornel Wilde
. . . well again

If Cornel takes it he will postpone his own production "Caves of the Night" for Columbia.

AS MANY TIMES as you've laughed at the rough and tumble antics of the Three Stooges — how many of you know that their names are Moe Howard, Larry Fine and Joe Derita? Not many, I'll wager.

Anyway, Moe, Larry and Joe under their professional tag of the Three Stooges are being starred in their first feature movie after making hundreds of shorts and TV programs for Screen Gems. The name of their picture, a comedy at Columbia, is "Have Rocket, Will Travel," which Harry Romm will produce and David Rich direct.

Romm recently made "Hey Boy, Hey Girl," with Louis Prima and Keely Smith.

A CHATTY LETTER from John Farrow who is pleased over the way "John Paul Jones" is being received (Jack Warner sent a congratulatory cable plus warm praise from the Admiralty).

He's even prouder of The London Telegraph's comment on his lovely Irish wife, Maureen O'Sullivan, following her appearance at the Royal Ballet gala.

The article, illustrated with a photograph, says. "Picked as the smartest woman of the week at the ballet, the lady who swept up the stairs in a short black organza dress under a spreading three-quarter length coat. She let the other women sport the jewels and gimmicks and carried a fur the exact color of her elegant pewter-grey hair. Her name? Maureen O'Sullivan."

Nice to see Georgiana and Ricardo Montalban back in their own home in Beverly Hills. Ricardo was with the Broadway play "Jamaica" a year and a half.

Ann Wilner Takes Role In 'Gigi'

HOLLYWOOD — Playing a part in an upcoming Hollywood Little Theatre production shouldn't be too much of a strain for Actress Ann Wilner.

The veteran character actress, a Miami Beach resident, will portray Alicia de St. Ephlam in "Gigi." It opens April 14 at the Little Theatre.

Formerly a specialist in dialects at the Pasadena Playhouse in California, Miss Wilner has portrayed such varied characters as a queen, a cockney maid, a dowager, an Irish woman and a salty-tongued busybody.

She recently appeared at Miami's Coconut Grove Playhouse in "The Chalk Garden" with Judith Anderson and in "Auntie Mame" with Shirl Conway.

Sex Censorship? 'Just Common Sense, Taste'

HOLLYWOOD — (UPI) — "Sex censorship is really a matter of common sense and taste," says Jack Douglas, the television producer whose documentary films have included undraped female forms.

"We make documentaries," he said, "and therefore have the widest latitude of any TV producers, but we still have to be careful. My own feeling about censorship is that 99 per cent of today's TV producers are handling their own censorship very well."

Douglas produces "Seven League Boots," an international travel-type film; "I search for Adventure," now seen in more than 100 cities, and the ABC - TV weekly program, "Bold Journey."

"When we showed Japanese women bare to the waist — they were diving for seaweed — we did it in good taste," he said. "We used mostly long shots of them, and the camera kept moving. We have no pornographic intent, and intent is important in censorship.

"Sometimes," Douglas went on, "it's hard to know where to draw the line. A little cleavage on a Western and someone could be accused of injudicious display."

Douglas is proud that in five years of making documentaries, he has received only two or three complaining letters. "We don't expect any medals for exercising good taste," he said. "Our stuff is usually seen in the early evening and is recommended by schools. It has to be done right."

Despite the globe-trotting character of his programs, Douglas has never been out of the country. "I'm spoiled," he said. "I see it in color and in the comfort of my office. Besides, I'm so busy I really can't find the time to go on a trip."

BROWARD NIGHTBEAT

Season's Waning --But Not Talent

By PATRICIA BROWN
Herald Columnist

Marvin and Leigh
. . . fun at Lorelei Room

NIGHTBEAT BUCKED the waning season with a total of six openings last week—some acts new to the area, others in for a reprise.

Biggest news for the coming week concerns Miss Fifi D'Orsay, the ersatz French dolly who'll clown and sing in ze fractured accent at Barefoot Mailman starting Thursday.

Newcomers ensconced on the scene are Marvin and Leigh at the Lorelei Room, Vann and Mudgett at Tale O'the Tiger, and Aldrich and Gamm at Marie Antoinette.

The Marie also welcomed the Lenny Herman Band for a return engagement, and it's the second time around for Cass Paley at Pier 66. As for the Berj Vaughn Quartet at the Four O'Clock Club, Miss Bea Morley likes the sound effects so well she booked the combo for the third time.

* * *

BERJ AND HIS SIDEMEN — Harry Manian, Charlie May and Ducky Charles — have become heavy favorites in the entertainment sweepstakes since they hit our Southeast coast a year and a half ago.

This is definitely a cool group which swings from comedy to cadenza, doubling on a mess of instruments for some pretty shattering results in the audio department.

There's no star of the show, per se, but Ducky Charles is a good man to watch. Guy handles most of the comedy material besides being a topnotch drummer. Former is expert buffoonery; latter ends up as a real smash.

Quartet are all ex-New Yorkers; the bossman was band leader at the Copacabana for 10 years. Since joining forces three years ago, combo has made successful stands in New York, Chicago, Tahoe, Vegas and Miami Beach; has also been viewed on TV.

In between workouts, the Eddie Meekin Trio moves in for vocals and its own brand of dance music.

* * *

CASS PALEY'S TRIO at Pier 66 hasn't lost any of its savvy since departing the premises last February for northern engagements.

Cass plays piano, a muted trumpet, and occasionally the accordion; sidemen handle guitar and bass, and it all adds up to pleasant fare which won't blast your eardrums.

Gents turn out a good dance beat in a spot where dancing is a popular pastime, with the Karl Keller duo spelling nobly for what amounts to continuous music.

* * *

THE LENNY HERMAN crew at Marie Antoinette is billed as "the mightiest little band in the land," and it's a mighty fine little dance band playing the Cote d'Or Dining Room. Instrumentals are laced with some solid vocalizing for a real creamy beat which anybody can follow.

Lenny is a fugitive from New York's Hotel Astor, where he held the stand for a full decade before moving on to the Roosevelt and New Yorker. This is his third stint for Joe Cunningham — Joe first hired the band when he was manager of Philadelphia's Warwick.

Working the bar-lounge is a perky duo — Susan Aldrich and Keith Gamm. Susan sings nicely and roams around with a mike; Keith stays put at the piano for his share of the teamwork.

* * *

A DOUBLE TAKE at Jim O'Hare's new attraction at the Lorelei revealed that the new Marvin and Leigh duo is none other than Leigh Rocke and Marvin Fudalla, formerly of the Crosswinds quintet heard last winter at the Barefoot Mailman.

Guys have worked up a lounge act involving parodies, dialect and novelty numbers augmented by a batch of props. Marvin confines himself to a standard accordion but Leigh comes up with an unusual guitar-bass, a two-in-one contraption which seems to call for four hands.

Leigh also has a lot of voice which he couples admirable to classic numbers for good response.

* * *

VANN AND MUDGETT, also known as the "Fabulous Moods," have a good act at Tale O'The Tiger linked to piano, vibes bass, pantomime and patter.

Team turns in a smooth performance on all counts.

In the pantomime department, however, they're pitted against Jay Wray who's also on the bill and one of the finest mimics in the business. Jay was rated by Billboard and Variety as the nation's No. 1 pantomime artist for three years in a row and, Dad, you can't hardly get them kind no more.

* * *

SHIFTING SANDS: Southern Colonels move across the street from the Lauderdale Beach Hotel to the Marlin Beach Monday night; same date, Ruthie Warren, Marcel Franchois and Wally Pape replace Hal Iverson group at the Banyan — Marcel and Ruthie were recently at the Marlin . . . Richie Bros., now at the Reef, relieve the Punchinellos at Golden Falcon the 16th . . . Danny Driscoll, now at the Falcon, returns to Bahia cabana the 17th. On your mark, kids.

* * *

JAN AND BOB CASE'S Villa Venice spots Ray Paul's five-man band for dancing. Villa also has veteran radio personality Herbie Mintz for nightly deejay sessions over Miami's station WCKR.

Herbie's an old pro with the mike. Former owner of the Pit on Sunrise Lane, deserted the radio field in 1955 after a long-time stand (23 years) with Chicago's WMAQ to launch his own TV program for WNBQ — a daily frame of nostalgic content called ". . . But Not Forgotten."

* * *

HERE AND THERE: Hollywood Little Theater's production of "Gigi" opens April 14 for a six-night run at the theater, 2641 Dewey St. . . . "Gentleman" Jim Lieber new pianist at La Shay Lounge . . . Big farewell wingding tonight for Hal Iverson Quartet at the Banyan (guys open the 16th at the Dunes in Vegas) . . . Sea Shore Hotel has a new maitre d', Steve Pothier, formerly at Boston's Latin Quarter and Statler; he also owns a motel on Cape Cod . . . Lauderdale Beach Hotel closing down for the season on the 15th . . . Lou Jones of the Beach Club has a new baby girl named Ribon . . . Thrush Eleanor Carline making like a duo via drum lessons . . . Rudy Vallee greeting the Seahorse's Larry Maturi, latter was once in charge of transportation arrangements for the Ol' Vagabond . . . Bahia-Mar's Dotty de Winter (wife of Stan Nelson) in New York for the funeral of her mother who died suddenly . . . L. Bert Stephens reported making a business jaunt up around Palm Beach and Boca.

* * *

REGARDLESS OF WHAT you hear to the contrary, a former undefeated heavyweight champion of the world is definitely interested in leasing one of our main stem restaurants. Even has a tentative name picked — "Rocky Marciano's Ringside" — if the deal jells. And it could.

* * *

Strike Sweetens Molasses Pot

HONOLULU — (AP) — Hawaii's four-month sugar strike in 1958 caused a drop in sugar cane production, but raised molasses production by 2,500 tons over the 1957 figure.

The Hawaiian Sugar Planters Association explained that the strike resulted in lowering the purity of cane juices.

Because the juices contained less sucrose, more of the non-sucrose content was available for processing into molasses.

744 Homesites in Luxury Subdivision

Next for Boca: Royal Palm Club

By DICK MEYER
Herald Staff Writer

BOCA RATON — A 450-acre tract south of the Boca Raton Hotel and Club will be transformed into a subdivision of Stanley homes surrounding an exclusive 18-hole golf course and including a yacht club and sheltered basin, according to the developers.

The Arvida Realty Co. — a subsidiary of Arvida Corp.—late last week placed the 744 homesites in the tract on the market.

The subdivision, to be called Royal Palm Yacht and Country Club, will represent a $38 million investment, said President Milton N. Weir Sr. of Arvida Corp.

A championship layout designed by Golf Course Architect Robert Trent Jones will wind through the subdivision. Weir said that it will be ready by next January, shortly before completion of the yacht club and basin.

Ground is being cleared for these accommodations.

The regulation-distance links are to be presented just south of the hotel and club course.

M. N. WEIR

The southernmost nine holes of that 27-hole facility fit into the layout of the new course.

Four of these nine holes are to be removed, being in conflict with residential planning. So the Royal Palm project necessitates the addition of 13 holes to produce a full-length test of golf.

Weir said the luxury subdivision will "exceed the fondest dreams" of Addison Mizner, famed architect for the Boca Raton Club who in 1926 laid out Boca Raton as a "dream city." Mizner's plat bears a remarkable resemblance to the development pattern now taking shape here.

The Royal Palm property is bounded on two sides by water (Hillsboro River and the Intracoastal Waterway), and will be laced with wide canals.

All utility lines will be under ground.

* * *

ARVIDA OFFICIALS claim the yacht club will cost a half-million dollars, and that the sheltered basin there (on the Hillsboro River) will be three minutes by boat from open waters of the Intracoastal.

Weir believes the land will be fully developed within three years, and that 2,250 residents will live in the subdivision. Boca Raton's population stands at about 5,500.

The Arvida head, who is charged with improvement of lands formerly owned by Arthur Vining Davis, founding father of Arvida, said the plush program will add $7,875,000 in retail sales—an increase of 51 per cent—and 93 per cent more in tax revenues to this fledgling community.

Boca Raton, he said, "is beginning to waken, stretch and fulfill its destiny."

Architect for all club buildings is Robert Fitch Smith, chairman of the board of design for the inter-American Cultural and Trade Center.

Smith has designed 600 residences and 200 civic, commercial and industrial structures throughout South Florida and the Bahamas.

Annual club memberships will cost $350, including golf playing privileges, and $250 otherwise.

All residents of the subdivision will become eligible for membership. Persons outside the Royal Palm limits must be approved.

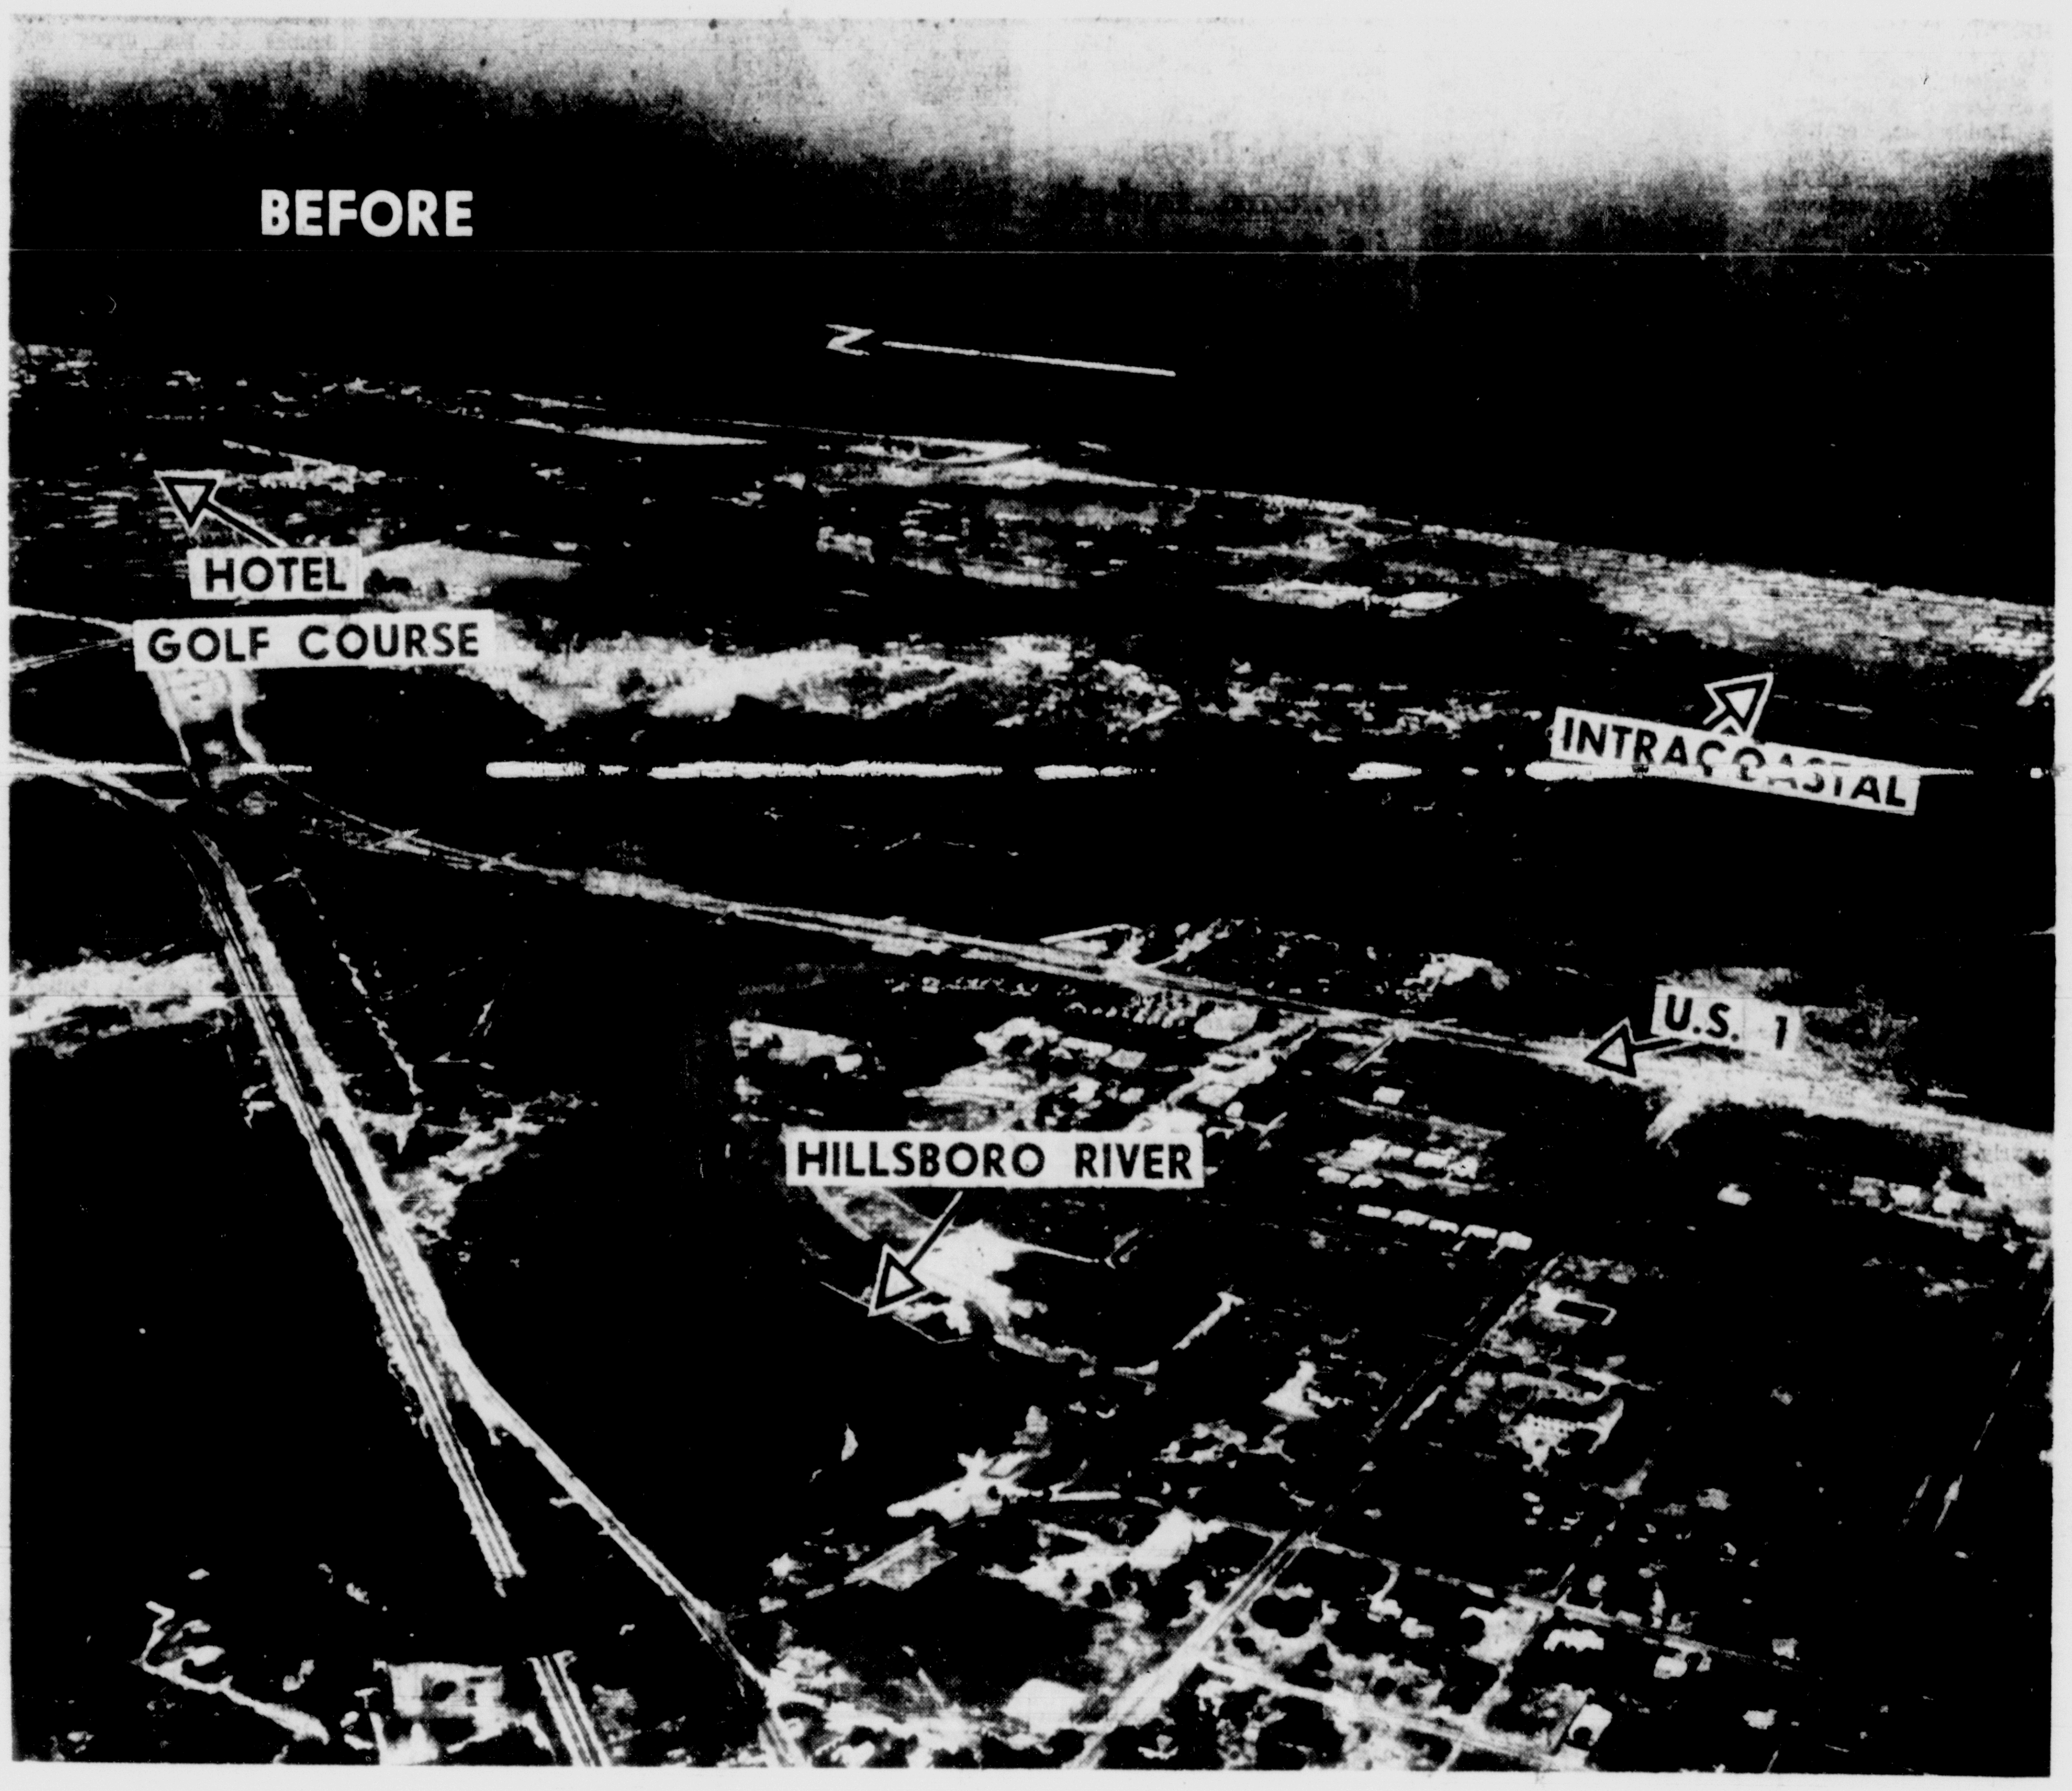
* * *

NO MULTIPLE-FAMILY DWELLINGS will be permitted, and homes must have a living area of at least 2,000 square feet.

Home construction will start about June 1. Residences will be custom-built by contractors of the owners' choice.

Anxious to spur quick development, Arvida offers a 20 per cent discount to lot purchasers who complete their homes by June 1, 1960. As little as 25 per cent in cash may be paid, but Arvida Realty will hold such mortgages until the balance is paid in eight equal semiannual installments, including interest payments.

Lots, listed at $10,000 to $45,000, including seawalls, range in frontage from 85 to 300 feet and in depth from 125 to 225 feet.



450-Acre Site of Proposed Royal Palm Yacht and Country Club of Arvida Corp.

Inspiration for the name of the subdivision came from statuesque Royal Palms which line Camino Real, on the north boundary of the property. Manned entrance gates opening on monumental fountains, just off Camino Real and Federal Hwy., are meant to insure privacy.

* * *

THERE ARE TO BE 230 waterfront homesites and 218 bordering the golf course.

Development work will be by Arvida Realty, for Arvida Corp., which will own club facilities.

The Arvida Corp. agrees to underwrite any club deficit until 1965, or until there are 500 members, if that occurs sooner.

Work will begin this week on the golf course clubhouse and the yacht club building. The structures will follow Bahama colonial architectural patterns.

During construction of club facilities, and until May 1, 1960, purchasers of homesites will have membership privileges in the Boca Raton Club, which is included in Arvida Corp. properties.

BROWARD BUILDER

Traffic Study Asked Before Center OKd

THE CAUSE OF PROPER PLANNING received a strong forward thrust recently when the City of Pompano Beach asked for time for a traffic study before the county acts on rezoning the intersection of Cypress Rd. and Airport Rd. for a major shopping center.

It would be difficult to say whether this is the first time such an action has been taken by a governing body in this county, but it may well be. Most of the innumerable shopping centers being built here are established with little regard for their potential effect on the movement of traffic.

Doubtless the rezoning will be approved and the center built, but at least some consideration will have been given to the matter of cars entering and leaving from the main roads and the effect of increased traffic on the side streets.

The existence of the Florida East Coast Railway tracks only a short distance from the center site, with their capacity for piling up traffic on Airport Rd. while trains pass, also should be taken into account.

* * *

Canal-Creek Barrier

THIS IS ABOUT to become another of Broward County's hot corners. The neighborhood is filling up with homes and people at great speed. Between McNab Rd. to the south and the Pompano Canal to the north, and from Federal Hwy. to South Dixie, dozens of small subdivision are in the making, many of them with canals cutting away from Cypress Creek. Lyons Park, lying on the west side of Cypress Rd. justa south of Airport Rd., already is well established—and some of its residents, incidentally, are opposing the rezoning.

This has become a substantial middle class area. Homes generally are in the $15,000-and-up range, with many above $20,000. Many of the families are and will be in the two-car bracket.

There can't be a normal number of east-west and north-south arteries because of the canal and the creek, jointly forming a V-shaped barrier to the north and east, and because of railroad tracks to the west.

Cypress Rd. must become a four-lane artery in short order. Airport Rd. eventually must be widened also, because it is one of the few crossings of the tracks to the west. But it comes to a dead end at Cypress Rd. and it's doubtful if it can ever be anything but a dead end street, because a network of canals lies to the east, between its present terminal point and Federal Hwy.

Pompano City Manager James Hughes was not indulging in idle talk when he suggested the need for a traffic study.

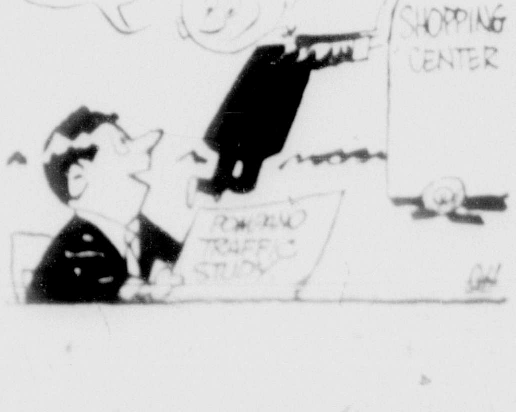
* * *

Yacht Club for Isles

ON THE HEELS of a discussion here recently regarding yacht clubs and golf courses as lures to home buyers, an announcement has been made by the developers of Plantation Isles that they intend to have a yacht club.

The subdivision lies along Peters Rd. west of State Rd. 7, and reaches south to the North New River Canal. The proposed club site is just off the canal.

This can only strengthen the trend, and make it more difficult for the next developer of a waterfront subdivision, no matter where it's located, to go into the market without some such added attraction. With boatmen becoming increasingly concerned over the lack of sites for launching, the pulling power of these yacht clubs is likely to increase noticeably.



BUSINESS IN BROWARD

Million Dollar Spree Of Students Paid Off

G. E. Sutherland
. . . new vice president

DURING THE ANNUAL debate over whether the college students' spring holiday was an asset or a liability to Fort Lauderdale, scattered business people took occasion to estimate how much the fling was worth in dollars and cents.

One guess, which tried to take into account the amount spent by parents who accompanied students here, ran into several million.

Very conservatively, the figure was at least $50,000 a day for the four or five days during which the invasion was at its peak.

That was based on a low average of $5 a day for each of the estimated 10,000. It was conceded that while a few of the less affluent students may have squeezed by under $5, the actual average probably was closer to $10.

If the estimator accepted the forecast by Lifeguard Capt. Frank Dane of about 22,000 for the peak, and used a $10 average he come up with $220,000 a day for approximately three days, or $660,000 simply for the Easter weekend.

Calculations on the students' beer consumption indicated that for this item alone they spent about $3,000 a day for two or three weeks.

Estimating their total expenditure with any accuracy is nearly impossible, because students came and went over a period of several weeks. Probably the average daily outlay could be determined with a survey of hotels, restaurants and taversn, but there are no reliable figures available on how the population built up toward the Easter climax.

It might be safe to guess that there were 5,000 here constantly during the first four days of the final week and 10,000 for the last three days, or 50,000 "student-days" for that week. From that point the individual can use any daily spending average that he cares to.

Home Federal Opens Building

HOME FEDERAL SAVINGS and Loan Association officially opened its new savings building on Young Circle in Hollywood this weekend. It increases Home Federal's space by approximately 50 per cent, housing five savings tellers, two officers, a board meeting room, employes lounge and kitchen.

Other facilities in the $45,000 addition include a night depository.

Home Federal reported a growth of 500 per cent in total assets in the last year, and the addition of more than 3,000 new depositors.

Gifts will be distributed to patrons and persons opening new accounts, in observance of the inauguration of the new addition.

Firm Salutes New Terminal

EMPLOYING the occasion of its own birthday to salute Broward International Airport's new terminal, Atlantic Federal Savings and Loan huddled with Mackey Airlines, Northeast Airlines and Aviation Director Lee Wagener to come up with a novel gift for customers.

It's a miniature travel kit containing, among other toiletries, motion-sickness pills and waterless soap; several thousand of them will be handed out by the institution this month to persons who open new accounts or add to present ones. A lobby display featuring Mackey and Northeast has been tied in.

Best known for its sponsorship of Fort Lauderdale Symphony Orchestra concerts in the field of community service, Atlantic now has adopted a policy of "saluting" some local effort or institution on each birthday.

Peo's company, a Buffalo, N.Y., firm, recently acquired R. H. Wright Inc., and announced at that time that plans for expansion were being made. Broward Asphalt's general manager, E. B. Comaderi, will continue to direct the operations of its three plants.

Bonnie Loch To Include 512 Homesites

POMPANO BEACH — A hundred homes are to be started within a month in Bonnie Loch, a 158-acre subdivision just south of Pompano Beach Highlands.

The Scotch name was hit on because of the new community's proximity to the Highlands, a Mackle Co. project. But Bonnie Loch is under development by the Martin A. Gregory Co., Pompano Beach realty organization, for Dade-Broward Industries Inc., owners of the land.

Edmund Ansin of Miami is the Dade-Broward president.

Land is cleared in the tract, which is bounded on the south by Sample Rd. and on the east by a 40-acre plot allocated for an elementary school, and by the site of the projected north district hospital.

A 35-acre lake, now being dredged, will mark the western boundary.

The site is in the county, north of Pompano Beach. Water and sewer facilities will be furnished under an agreement with the Mackle Co.

Bonnie Loch will have 512 homesites, and homes there will be in the $11,500-$14,000 category.

Carpet Idea Hits Floor

MILWAUKEE — (AP) — Members of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church considered the use of carpeting in their new contemporary church, but the architect, William P. Wenzler, objected.

"The church places great demands and responsibility on its members," Wenzler said. "This fact is likely to be forgotten in a plush carpet atmosphere."

His view prevailed. The floors will remain bare.

676 Residence Potential

Coral Ridge, Highlands Now Humming With Homes

FORT LAUDERDALE — The stretch north of Commercial Blvd. to McNab Rd. is becoming honeycombed with homes of the upper middle price range.

A score of home-building firms are particularly active in Coral Ridge Additions A and B, and in Coral Highlands.

These three tracts are rapidly being developed toward their potential of 676 residences. Addition B, with 326 homesites, is the largest of the subdivisions.

Average lots offered by Coral Ridge Properties, developer of the communities, is 75 by 100 feet.

Builders showing models in Addition A include Nick Pagano, Richard Bienema, K. E. Behring, Cypress Ridge Homes Inc., William Paton, Richard Stempler and Dahl Rask.

Proposed construction on Commercial Blvd. in this addition includes the Coral Ridge Bowling Lanes and a Presbyterian church.

The Food Fair chain will develop an eight-acre shopping center at the northwest corner of Commercial Blvd. and Cypress Rd.

In Addition B, an average elevation of 16 feet has attracted additional builders. Relative newcomers to the construction scene here are Behring, Larry Arnold, Courchene-Audette, Carl Beimly, Al Rickel, Karl Construction, Rene Provencal and son, John Walker, Walter Pelski, Kenneth Johnson and Paul Goodwin.

A variety of new style dwellings are open for inspection in Coral Highlands. Delta Homes has a model on NE 56th Ct. which resembles a modified Swiss chalet. Field stone and wood were used as exterior materials.

Dean-Chambers Inc. has completed two $22,900 models, at 5731 and 5741 NE 18th Ter. and has plans to build eight more on that street before the end of the spring. One of the present models has simulated keystone flooring and cypress walls.

There are to be 34 model homes shown in the Highlands by July 1.

The Highlands property inclues 10 acres owned by the Catholic Diocese of Miami. This land ultimately will be used for a church and a parochial school.

The three subdivisons are popularly known as the "Coral Ridge Isles," along with a 1,500-lot tract of that name west of Cypress Rd. between Commercial Blvd. and Cypress Creek Rd.

Record Building Year Predicted for Pompano

POMPANO BEACH—Chief Building Inspector Howard Lane predicted this will be the biggest construction year in the city's history, based on the first three months' activity, which indicates construction valuation nearly three times as heavy as a year ago.

Total construction valuation to March 31 was $3,543,890, compared with only $1,370,908 for the similar period last year.

March played a big part in the construction picture, as 70 building permits were issued for a total of $775,974 worth of construction, more than twice that of March 1958.

By category, this was the building activity for the month: 24 single family residences totaling $424,136; 28 apartments, $199,000; six business units, $94,000; eight additions to buildings, $18,342 and 31 miscellaneous permits, $40,496.

Four buildings were demolished, and three repaired in the northwest section, under the city's slum clearance program.

SOUTH BROWARD BUILDING

Commercial Property Putting on New Face

By TOM VINCIGUERRA
Herald Staff Writer

THE VOLUME of commercial alterations as reflected in Hollywood building permits so far this year indicates an interesting trend.

Many business establishments are expanding, others are underoing a face-lifting to compete with the many modern structures going up in the city.

Property owners spent $119,912 to expand and refurbish during February. More than $80,000 was spent for the same purpose in January and March.

Some Hollywood Blvd. store fronts have been done over in connection with the beautification program. Response, however, has not been what some city commissioners had anticipated.

Tommy Wohl, who spearheaded the beautification program, reports the problem of renting office space in the downtown area has eased considerably.

"The beautification program helped a lot," said Wohl. New office buildings going up west of City Hall are competing for tenants with the older buildings down town."

HALLANDALE BEACH will get a 61-unit hotel. The structure is on the drawing boards. John May is architect.

Beach Getting New Hotel

THEY BUILD THEM big and fancy in Hollywood's swanky lake section, and Architect Ken Spry is coming up with one that meets all the requirements.

He's designing a three-bedroom, three-bath home for Mr. and Mrs. Phil Loewery. Loewery is a retired electric supply dealer from New York.

The home will be built on piling. It'll have a two-car garage. Lot size is 100 by 250 feet deep, with 80 feet of the depth required for setback. The price? Spry's not saying yet. The job will be put out for bids.

Churches Take To the 'Hills'

LOOK FOR a rash of church construction to break out in the new Hollywood Hills section. William Horvitz, vice president of Hollywood Inc., developer, reported several land sales last week.

They include a Methodist church, 12 lots; Episcopal, three acres; Presbyterian, five lots; Mormon, two acres, and 25 acres for the Catholic church.

The Hills section, where 6,000 homes are planned, will be a community within a community in every sense of the word.

Besides the churches, the area has Memorial Hospital, David Park, Orange Brook Golf Course and Hollywood Elementary School. A fire station is under construction. A 50-acre site has been reserved for a shopping center.

Residential Building Up

HOLLYWOOD'S residential construction for March took a jump over February, but the first month of 1959 is still out in front.

Permits for $729,166 (40 residences, two duplexes and one apartment) were issued in March, compared with $618,886 in February and the high January total of $850,241.

Builder Sells Himself, Lives in Subdivision

BOCA RATON — Harry S. Jacobs, builder of Boca Raton Homes, has a strong sales point for his homes in Country Club Village.

"I know this is a good neighborhood," Jacobs says. "I live here myself."

Jacobs has completed 10 homes in the Village. Five, including his own, are occupied. (He lives at 152 NW 12th Ave.)

There are four Boca Raton Homes styles on display.

They are the Sandra, two bedrooms and two baths, $16,500; the Diane, three bedrooms and two baths, $17,500; the Continental, two bedrooms and two baths, $19,500; and the split-level Imperial, three bedrooms and two baths, $19,500.

Dishwashers and refrigerators are included in all but the Sandra model.

Jacobs plans to build 100 homes in the subdivision.

Permits Total $5,688,857

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Broward County Building Department issued 607 permits during March for a total valuation of $5,688,857.

Included were authorizations for 422 single-family dwellings, 16 two-family dwellings, 41 nonresidential structures and 127 additions, alterations and repairs.

Cost estimate on one-family dwellings was placed at $3,815,178.

They Ship Pets

'Putting on Dog' Pays Off for Pair

WESTERLY, R. I. —(UPI) — "Oh, where oh where has my little dog gone?" asks the mournful tune.

But don't worry. Chances are that Irene and John F. Sullivan know where the pooch is. They probably sent him there.

The Sullivans are operators of a unique organization — a pet travel service they call Bed Rock Dogs International.

Last year, this enterprising couple booked more than one-half million "dog miles" in shipments to 35 states and 22 foreign countries, including Afghanistan, Morocco, Pakistan, England, Iceland, France and Germany.

The Sullivans first began shipping dogs and cats of military, State Department and other government personnel a few years back, just so the animals could be with their masters at their new assignments.

The project has snowballed so that corporation executives and other businessmen now call on the Sullivans for assistance in shipping their pets.

In fact, the nation's leading van lines, as well as American and Eastern Airlines, now refer pet shipping problems to the Sullivans.

"Ours is a very personalized activity," said Irene, "and we try very hard to care for other people's pets the same as we would want someone to care for ours."

The Sullivans' latest addition to their complete travel service is a flight bag containing can opener, paper dishes, food, the pet's leash, toys and other personal belongings.

Cancer: She Won Her Battle Against It

By BEVERLY PAULSON
Broward Women's Editor

FORT LAUDERDALE — "Cancer is the most dreaded, the most fatal and the most ignored of all illness," Mrs. Albert E. Gordon said.

"Why do people play ostrich?" she demanded. "Why do they ignore the possibility that they could get cancer?"

Mrs. Gordon, charming ex-Ziegfeld girl and former swimming teacher at Pine Crest School, is a cured cancer victim. She had cancer of the throat eight years ago.

"I wish I knew how to get to people about the need for checkups and haste in treatments," she declared.

She added: "I wish something could be done about giving every cancer patient post-treatment psychiatric care."

* * *

REGULAR CANCER CHECKUPS for everyone, haste in seeing a doctor about suspected cancer and psychiatric treatment are the three musts of the disease, Mrs Gordon feels.

"I sit and marvel that people don't have checkups," she declared of her first point. "It's everywhere and they do nothing. Then suddenly something happens and it's too late."

Why don't people have checkups:

"Cancer is like automobile accidents — People say to themselves, 'It can happen to the other fellow, but it won't happen to me,' " she replied.

"From all the doctors the hue and cry is 'Why can't we get people to come?'

* * *

"CANCER IS SNEAKY. That's why it is so deadly. When I had cancer I felt no pain.

"Haste is of the essence," Mrs. Gordon quoted on the need for immediate treatment of a cancer.

"The American Cancer Society is always at people about haste. It's advertised everywhere. I don't understand why people let it go."

She pointed out that literally hundreds of people could be saved if they went to their doctors for diagnosis the moment they felt something was wrong.

"I went the minute I knew," she said. "If, instead of hiding their heads, people would just go to the doctor and find out."

* * *

WHILE SHE THINKS haste in treatment, plus the checkups, are essential, Mrs. Gordon's private campaign as a former cancer patient is the psychiatric care.

"There is a mental shock that goes with cancer. It's an absolute despair," she said.

"The one thing I harp on is: Go to a priest or a minister if you can't afford a psychiatrist. Or talk to someone like me who has gone through it and knows.

"The feeling of uselessness, the desire to jump from a window will pass.

"Don't hug it to yourself. Don't be alone, don't dwell on it. Talk to someone about your despair."

* * *

IN REMOVING THREE malignant nodes from Mrs. Gordon's throat, surgeons took her whole right jaw.

"It was pretty bad," she mildly summarized her experience. "I was so shocked mentally, I was sick psychologically."

Shortly after her operation, she caught a glimpse of her jawless face in a mirror while waiting for the dressings to be changed. The shock—heaped on the stunning blow of surgery—was almost unbearable.

"I didn't look like myself. I didn't look like anyone," she recalled.

Radical facial surgery with its mutilation is a horrid experience for a cancer patient, particularly for a woman, she said. "The sneaky little vanity will come out. I never was a particularly vain person, but I was repelled.

* * *

"I USED A LITTLE VEIL after I got home," she continued.

"I asked a friend to buy me a veil and she came back with a great big black one that covered my whole face. 'Take it away,' I told her, 'or I'll never take it off.'

"I made up my mind that I had to meet the public. That's the only way."

Then Mrs. Gordon had to face the feeling of uselessness that came when she realized that she could no longer teach swimming.

"It had been so wonderful for me—it made me feel so important," she said of the swimming lessons she had given "off and on" for a decade.

"That made the cancer even worse—having that taken away."

* * *

THE DESPONDENCY she felt is common among cancer patients, she pointed out. "Almost everyone I have talked to goes through it."

—Herald Photo by Gene Hyde

Why Do People Hide From Cancer?
. . . asks Mrs. Alfred Gordon, cured victim

"I tell them not to waste their energies on worry. They will come through the depression eventually."

Since her surgery, Mrs. Gordon has talked to many cancer patients. She is glad to talk to anyone, anytime, as a woman who knows what cancer is or as a volunteer with the American Cancer Society.

"A patient can even tell his doctor, 'You don't know what I am going through.' But, believe me, he can't say that to me.

"It's not charity, nor even kindness that makes me want to talk to other people about cancer. It's a duty that I have," she said.

'So Shocked' At Diagnosis

The diagnosis was cancer.

"I was so shocked I didn't feel much of anything," Mrs. Albert E. Gordon of the Four Seasons Apartments says of the moment she received the medical verdict.

"I had been ill. One morning I coughed up a clot of blood," she recalls of her bout with the dreaded illness eight years ago. "I thought it was odd, but I thought it was the result of my pneumonia.

"Right after that I noticed a scratchy sensation in my throat that didn't go away."

Mrs. Gordon called her doctor, who referred her to a heart specialist. A biopsy showed cancer of the throat.

The next day she left for New York to enter the Cancer Hospital, of which a personal friend was head.

"He gave me a 40-60 chance of recovery with surgery," she recalls of her doctor's diagnosis. "The 40 per cent was on my side.

"I guess I was pretty naive. I asked, 'What if I choose not to have the operation?'

"My doctor answered, 'You have no choice. Without the operation, you will certainly die within a year.' "

She immediately underwent radical surgery of her throat.

That was eight years ago. If cancer does not recur within five years after treatment, a patient is considered cured.

For American Cancer Month she is telling her story here.

They're Happy They Brought Their Antiques

By BEVERLY PAULSON
Broward Women's Editor

LIGHTHOUSE POINT — You can't use antiques in Florida.

Or can you?

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Davis, 3910 NE 27th Ave., say you can.

"The proof is right here," Mrs. Davis declares, pointing with pride to their new home in the Venetian Isles development.

Mrs. Davis threw warnings to the ocean breeze and moved her antiques down from their former home in Buffalo, N. Y.

The result is a remarkable combination of Florida and the North.

Architecturally, the house is a Cape Cod Colonial. But the most-lived-in area is the Florida room, which is separated by sliding glass floor-to-ceiling doors from the dining room, living room and master bedroom.

All the furniture is antique. ("I didn't bring the oriental rugs and heavy wingback chairs," Mrs. Davis admits.) The kitchen, though, is 1959 modern in a glowing pink.

All walls are painted a cool pale blue. But the dining room is papered with a splashy red rose design. "It's a copy of an old English paper I've used in three houses," Mrs. Davis says.

In planning their home, the Davises adapted three different floor plans to their needs and delved into a file of house ideas she had kept for years.

But Mrs. Davis' real pride are her original touches.

Tiny shells she and her husband gathered on the beach were laid into the entrance hall floor when the black terrazzo was poured.

The marbelized effect is distinctively Floridian.

Second is the ixora planting at the front of the house.

The nurseryman had a tizzy when Mrs. Davis insisted she wanted ixora "to pick up the color of the brick." She got her ixora.

She gloats, "It looks so good, he has used the idea several times since."

Hugh Schaddelees And the Hilaria Home With Honors

By GRIFF PRESTON
Herald Writer

FORT LAUDERDALE — The Hugh Schaddelees and their yawl, the handsome Hilaria, are home with glory and kudos from the Southern Ocean Racing Circuit — the Hilaria having won the Class A St. Pete to Havana reach in fine style and the Havana to Veradero race, finale of the SORC season.

Right now the sleek blue-water racer "is being worked on" in preparation for her trip home to Michigan. First week in May the Schaddelees will sail her to New York, up the Hudson River and into the Erie Canal's 36 locks.

Then she will sail the length of three of the Great Lakes, Erie to Detroit, along the Detroit River into Lake Huron to its tip at the Mackinac Strait and down Lake Michigan on the home stretch to Macatawa Bay Yacht Club. And if you doubt that this is a sailing saga, just take a look at a full-size map!

Fine, Fancy—and Free—Day

IT WAS A FINE AND FANCY DAY at the races for Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Urquhart Saturday. As the winners of Coral Ridge Yacht Club's recent derby party grand prize, the Urquharts were Gulfstream Park's honored guests for the running of the Derby.

Starting with luncheon in the Turf Club, they got Gulfstream's red-carpet treatment with everything on the house except the "tote board." Mr. and Mrs. Urquhart of Greenwood Farm, Valley Forge, Pa., and Georgia's Sea Island are Fort Lauderdale newcomers. Looking for a Florida winter address, they started off in the Naples area in January, viewing the West Coast in vain.

Heading for Palm Beach (a long-time vacation spot for them), they paused here en route — came, saw and were conquered — bought their New Middle River Dr. home within the week!

And on the subject of Urquhart homes, their Greenwood Farms house is an authentic "George Washington slept here" spot. Headquarters for Gen. Washington in 1777, it has a bronze plaque, set in the house wall by the Valley Forge Historical Society to prove it.

Some 14 Fort Lauderdaleans who took the weekend off to see the Indianapolis Speedway boys "pour it on" were the James G. Sampsons, the Harvey Olsens, the Don Bennetts, the Harry Gustavsons, Dr. and Mrs. Si Glerum, the James Binghams and Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Whitson.

And the Trays Floated in Air

DR. AND MRS. WARREN TRAYLOR, just back from island-hopping around the Caribbean, have colorful tales to tell of Good Friday celebrating in Port-Au-Prince and the ra-ra dance.

This is the time when the Haitian buck decks himself in scarlet cloth and sequins to dance the day and night away. The women follow the dance groups with huge trays on their heads loaded with "penny food snacks." At night they light small oil lamps carried on the trays and the trays appear to float in the air. It's quite a sight, the travelers report.

Culinary note for the unwary: At a plush Montego Bay hotel that fancy high-priced "fisherman's surprise platter" on the menu is a real surprise — four kinds of fish, all canned! Caribbean fished out?

FORT LAUDERDALE — Tuesday night she was crowned in a glamorous setting as Mrs. Fort Lauderdale. At 7:15 a.m. Wednesday she was washing diapers.

Dark blonde, hazel-eyed Marilyn Johnston sees only one problem facing her in her new role as Fort Lauderdale's representative: Baby-sitters. Fortunately "I think Mother will be here," she said.

Marilyn, who's 27, and her husband, L. M. Johnston, are the parents of two youngsters, husky one-year-old Michael and two-year-old Karen, a replica of her mother. They live at 1321 NW Sixth Ave.

The Johnstons have been married for four years, lived in Fort Lauderdale for two. They met in Jacksonville when she, then an airline stewardess, was invited to a party honoring L. M.'s Naval squadron. He was a Navy flier.

Now he manages the Seabreeze Restaurant on the beach, co-owned by his father, Maurice Johnston, who showed up Wednesday to take over the baby-sitting job during the first day of his daughter-in-law's reign.

"I knew she'd win," he said.

"I didn't," Marilyn said. "But I knew I'd meet some nice people and have fun. I just had to talk my husband into letting me enter.

"Now I think he's more pleased than I."

Contests aren't new to Marilyn, who was born in DeLand. She is the former Miss DeLand and Miss Stetson. She was graduated from Stetson University with a degree in elementary education and works now as a substitute teacher in Broward schools.

Marilyn if five-foot-four and weighs 108 pounds, though she'd rather weigh 116 — "but with chasing two little ones . . ."

Harbor Beach Surf Club's Healthy at 10

By MARGARET WALKER
Broward Society Editor

FORT LAUDERDALE — Ten years ago there were 14 families who enjoyed their community club.

A charming little beach house of cypress and native lime rock was built a few years later among the sand dunes. It's fringed with Australian pines and the smooth sand slopes upward from the surf.

The Harbor Beach Surf Club, celebrating its 10th anniversary this month, now has 160 members whose families share the 300-foot expanse of private beach.

Within slight of neon-lighted hotels, the little club remains unspoiled, completely in harmony with the sea and sand. It was so designed by Architect William F. Bigoney

Picturesque approach to the contemporary beach house and cabanas is over a wooden footbridge spanning a lovely lagoon. Masses of mangrove line the shore of Mayan Lake which crosses the club property.

Retaining the natural beauty already there — seagrapes, mangroves, native grasses — one of the members, Mrs. Louis J. McCauley, landscaped the secluded spot with great charm.

dance to help guests and serve soft drinks. He looks after cabanas and locker roms.

In celebration of their decade of neighborly get-togethers on their private beach, residents of the swank area had a party last week, biggest in its history.

"It was the first in a series of parties we plan to have all summer long," said president James S. Stubbs.

William H. Rablen is in charge of entertainment.

Also included in the club's facilities is a yacht harbor with slips for more than 25 small craft two blocks from the club, which has its entrance on Ocean Dr.

She's Been Owned by Cats Since 1926

—Herald Photo by Gene Hyde

Mrs. Ralph Mabie Loves Cats
. . . her furry friend is Valentino

By BEVERLY PAULSON
Broward Women's Editor

POMPANO BEACH — "Many people say the only people who love cats are frustrated old maids," says Mrs. Ralph T. Mabie.

"I have four children and seven grandchildren, and I love cats. So I guess that takes care of that."

Mrs. Mabie, 15 NE 17th Ave. not only loves cats, she judges them and has bred them. She has owned cats "always" and "has been owned" by pedigreed felines since 1926.

The energetic grandmother was president of the Miami Cat Club until recently. Since she resigned from that office, she has been its first vice president.

She organized the new Gold Coast Cat Club and is its first president. And she's just back from a meeting in Chicago of the Cat Fanciers' Association, of which she is a past president and now a board member.

Over the years, she has judged cat shows in all of the states and in Hawaii and Canada.

"It's an interesting hobby," she says.

Though Mrs. Mabie maintains she likes all breeds of cats equally, she has always owned a blue or silver Persian. "They're so beautiful and showy, it becomes a habit to own one," she says.

"But one of the children brought home a half-breed one time and we loved it just as much. Alley cats — I hate that expression — are just as lovable as Persians."

Her present cat is a six-year-old silver shaded Persian, Valentino. (The name because Mrs. Mabie got him on Valentine's Day. He's not romantically inclined.)

A cat fancier couldn't ask for a fancier cat.

"Tino," a smugly independent character, has a perfect record of winning every show in which he has been entered.

And besides, he's a much spoiled member of the family who, as a kitten, was raised on tomato juice and pablum, "just like one of the children."

"My husband is so fond of Tino it sometimes embarrasses me," Mrs. Mabie says. "You know how some men talk about the cute things their children do. Well . . ."

Mrs. Mabie loves Tino too, she admits.

But her favorite of pets she has owned? A dog!

Butlers Bound For Two Weeks In Bonny Braes

By ALICE FOSTER
Herald Writer

THE EXCITEMENT is contagious at Joan and Henry Butler's home these days. They are flying to Scotland next Sunday for a two-week holiday. Joan is a Scot lass by birth and it's been four years since she has seen her parents or family.

ALICE FOSTER

The Butlers, with Henry's sister, Sally Butler, will spend Saturday night in New York City and then proceed to Glasgow where they will surprise Joan's two sisters and brother who live there.

A week on the Isle of Skye will be a reunion with Joan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Matheson. This will be Henry's introduction to the family.

Sally Butler, who works for Pan American Airlines, plans a three-week trip including stops in Germany, Spain and Italy.

Saturday night the threesome was surprised with a bon voyage party. A group of young couples met at Bob and Laurene Butler's house and amid travel posters and model planes gave the travelers a royal send-off. The guests were greeted by Bob and Laurene's children, young Jo Ann and Karen, dressed as airline hostesses. Mark and Jeff were the trusty pilots. The guests, in lieu of kilts, wore Scotch plaid Bermuda shorts or dresses and it was a "brau bricht, moonlicht nicht" for all.

Shoffstalls Won't Forget the 25th

ELSIE AND JIM SHOFFSTALL are still surprised!

Last Tuesday was their 25th wedding anniversary. At 6 p.m., accompanied by the Ted Steffens, they repeated their vows at Temple Methodist Church in a lovely ceremony performed by the Rev. George Powell.

In the meantime, 28 South Broward High School teachers and friends slipped into the Shoffstall home. A lovely silver gift, a buffet supper and the guests awaited the return of the unsuspecting couple. To say the least, it was a complete surprise. (Jim is tennis coach at South Broward High School.)

Maralee Springer Entertains

MARALEE SPRINGER took time out from her busy day as secretary to Gulfstream Prexy James Donn to entertain at luncheon in the Turf Club last Wednesday.

Her guests included the James Donns, the James Donns Jr., the Fred C. Flipses, Mrs. Edward Wade, Mr. Horace Wade; Maralee's mother, Mrs. Ralph Springer, and her family, Charles and Lib Springer; Donald and Jean Stonebraker Jr., Bob and Lee Springer, Lou and Edna Gonzales and Ralph and Jane Springer Jr.

Last Friday, Mrs. Henry Mander entertained her house guest, Mrs. Edwin Wells of Mount Dora, and a few friends at Pier 66. The party included lunch and fashions in the yacht club.

After the gala parade Friday night, Doris and Lou Weishedel invited friends to stop by for a "refreshing pause" and to meet their house guests.

Kenneth and Janice Bunn and their three children, from Huntingdon, Pa., have been with them for several weeks. Ken is a football coach at Juniata College, Pa. Today the Bunns will have their third baby christened. Each of their children had a Hollywood christening so the Weischedels could be present.

Two Couples Off to the Races

OFF TO THE RACES, the auto races at Daytona Beach, that is, are Sherwood and Jean Spencer and Tom and Jonnie Cox. They left Friday and will return to Hollywood Monday.

Expected home today is Bertie (Mrs. Henry) Uecker and Ann (Mrs. George) Getter after a whirl in the big town.

They flew to New York City about two weeks ago. Included in Bertie's full schedule was a visit with her sisters in Philadelphia. For Ann it was a stop with her daughter in New York.

Here for a week with Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Gaddy is Mrs. Gaddy's sister, Mrs. J. N. Lilly of Fayetteville, N.C. Mrs. Lilly, who winters in Fort Myers, will visit her son, Dr. George D. Lilly, on DiLido Island in Miami Beach before returning to North Carolina.

Fashions Bloomed at Church Lunch

SPRING HAS SPRUNG! Or so it seemed at the traditional Easter luncheon given by the Episcopal Church Women of St. John's Episcopal Church in Hollywood Tuesday.

The party, which is always a sell-out weeks before, was a colorful event and our local lasses looked like the spirit of spring. Jessie (Mrs. Eugene) Gay complemented her lovely lavender suit with a striking bunch of violets; pretty Peggy (Mrs. Al) Montella swished about in a gay yellow and white dress that caught the eye; Hilda Christian looked most regal in a white raw linen dress trimmed delicately with seed pearls and embroidered in pale pink; Lula (Mrs. Roy) Harris was a sweet picture in a silk print in shades of blue.

The pretty little roses on Jean Spencer's shoes were eye-catchers and the extremely pointed avocado and white pumps Peg Foster sported are, to husband Ed, sharp enough to be dangerous.

Story of a Paris Red Creation

Everybody admired Maxine Boutwell's Easter hat at the Episcopal Women's luncheon. It really wasn't a hat—it was a creation. The color was Paris red, the material silk organdy, and a beautiful full-blown rose adorned this unusual French chapeau.

She and her uncle, E. P. Duling (a pioneer resident of Hollywood), had seen the hat some time ago. It caught Maxine's eye. Of course she wanted it, but decided not to give way to her whims.

One morning recently, a handsome hatbox appeared in her room. To her amazement it contained "that hat." Nearby stood Uncle "E.P." with a twinkle in his eye. She says she will never know when and how he got it, but somehow the hat took on added loveliness that morning.

Wedgwood Scoffs At Plastic Ware

NEW YORK —(AP)— "Plastic dinnerware will be no threat to us in the foreseeable future," says Sir John Wedgwood, sixth generation member of the internationally known pottery firm established by Josiah Wedgwood.

"We're not contemplating any competition in the field of plastic ware at present, but I am in America to look around, to size up the new shapes, patterns and colors now popular in table ware."

Sir John plans to visit 29 cities on the dinnerware circuit including Boston, San Francisco, Chicago, Memphis and Toronto because "many of the cities in America require more cosmopolitan patterns than do the English."

There is a trend to modern dinner ware, he says, although the most popular pattern in the Wedgwood line is a Florentine design, a handsome wide border of gold on white, among other color choices. Jasper ware, still a top seller, has not been changed in design or color in 180 years, he points out.

Although the bulk of designs are turned out these days by staff artists, Wedgwood employs many outside designers who are well known in England.

His Walk Helps Your Aching Back

HONOLULU — (AP) — Are you bothered by an aching back?

You might try a lomi-lomi, for that soothing effect.

A lomi-lomi is an ancient Hawaiian version of a massage. And its main feature is that the masseur walks on the patient's back.

While he walks, he kneads the flesh while regulating his weight by holding on a bar above the massage table.

That may sound a bit rugged for a sensitive sore back.

But on the word of J[illegible] Kaaua, a professional masseur and one of the few remaining practitioners of the lomi-lomi, it is really a pain-reliever.

"I've been practicing lomi-lomi for 20 years," says Kaaua, "and I've never had a complaint. In fact, nearly all my customers compliment me on its soothing effect."

Kaaua, 46, is a graduate physical therapist. He can give a Japanese or Swedish massage if the customer wants.

"The Swedish massage just touches the surface of the body," he says. "The Japanese treatment is a little drastic and often leaves the patient with more aches after the massage than before.

"Lomi-lomi gives a deep stimulation, but never makes the patient sore. All my customers notice the difference."

Although back-walking has almost died out, Kaaua says it once was widely used in Hawaii.

"I didn't learn lomi-lomi in any school," he says. "I learned it from my parents. It's an old Hawaiian practice that dates back more than 800 years."

Wild Beasts Upset Pamplona During Celebration of Saint's Day

PAMPLONA, the capital of the Spanish province of Navarre, is the site each year of the Festival of San Fermin, a gala July 7th celebration in honor of the patron saint of the city. The big occasion is highlighted by the arrival of hundreds of pure-bred bulls that are driven through the streets to the city's bull ring where they are often more than a match for the best of Spain's matadors.

Although many of the side streets leading through the city to the arena are barricaded, the bulls charge the great crowds that line the right-of-way to the bull ring. Panting and snorting, the wild beasts seek to smash everything and everybody in their path as they race through the narrow, winding streets.

All Ages Take Part in Dangerous Sport

Pamplona's young and old alike are drawn into the path of the stampeded herd. It is as if the centuries-old magic of bullfighting had put the people in a trance, removing the normal fear that would make the average mortal think many times about indulging in such a pastime.

Scores Hurt in Mad Rush of Bulls

The madness does not end in the streets, for at the entrance to the arena the crowd is so dense that the onrushing bulls, chased by the screaming and cavorting mobs behind, knock scores of people to the ground, trampling over many others in their headlong rush.

To a visitor the spectacle is one that is never to be forgotten—the clatter of bulls' hoofs on the brick and cobblestone paving, the sight of a respectable-looking citizen clinging to the crossarms of a lamp-post, others glued to the sides of buildings, looking much like quivering gargoyles in the noon-day sun.

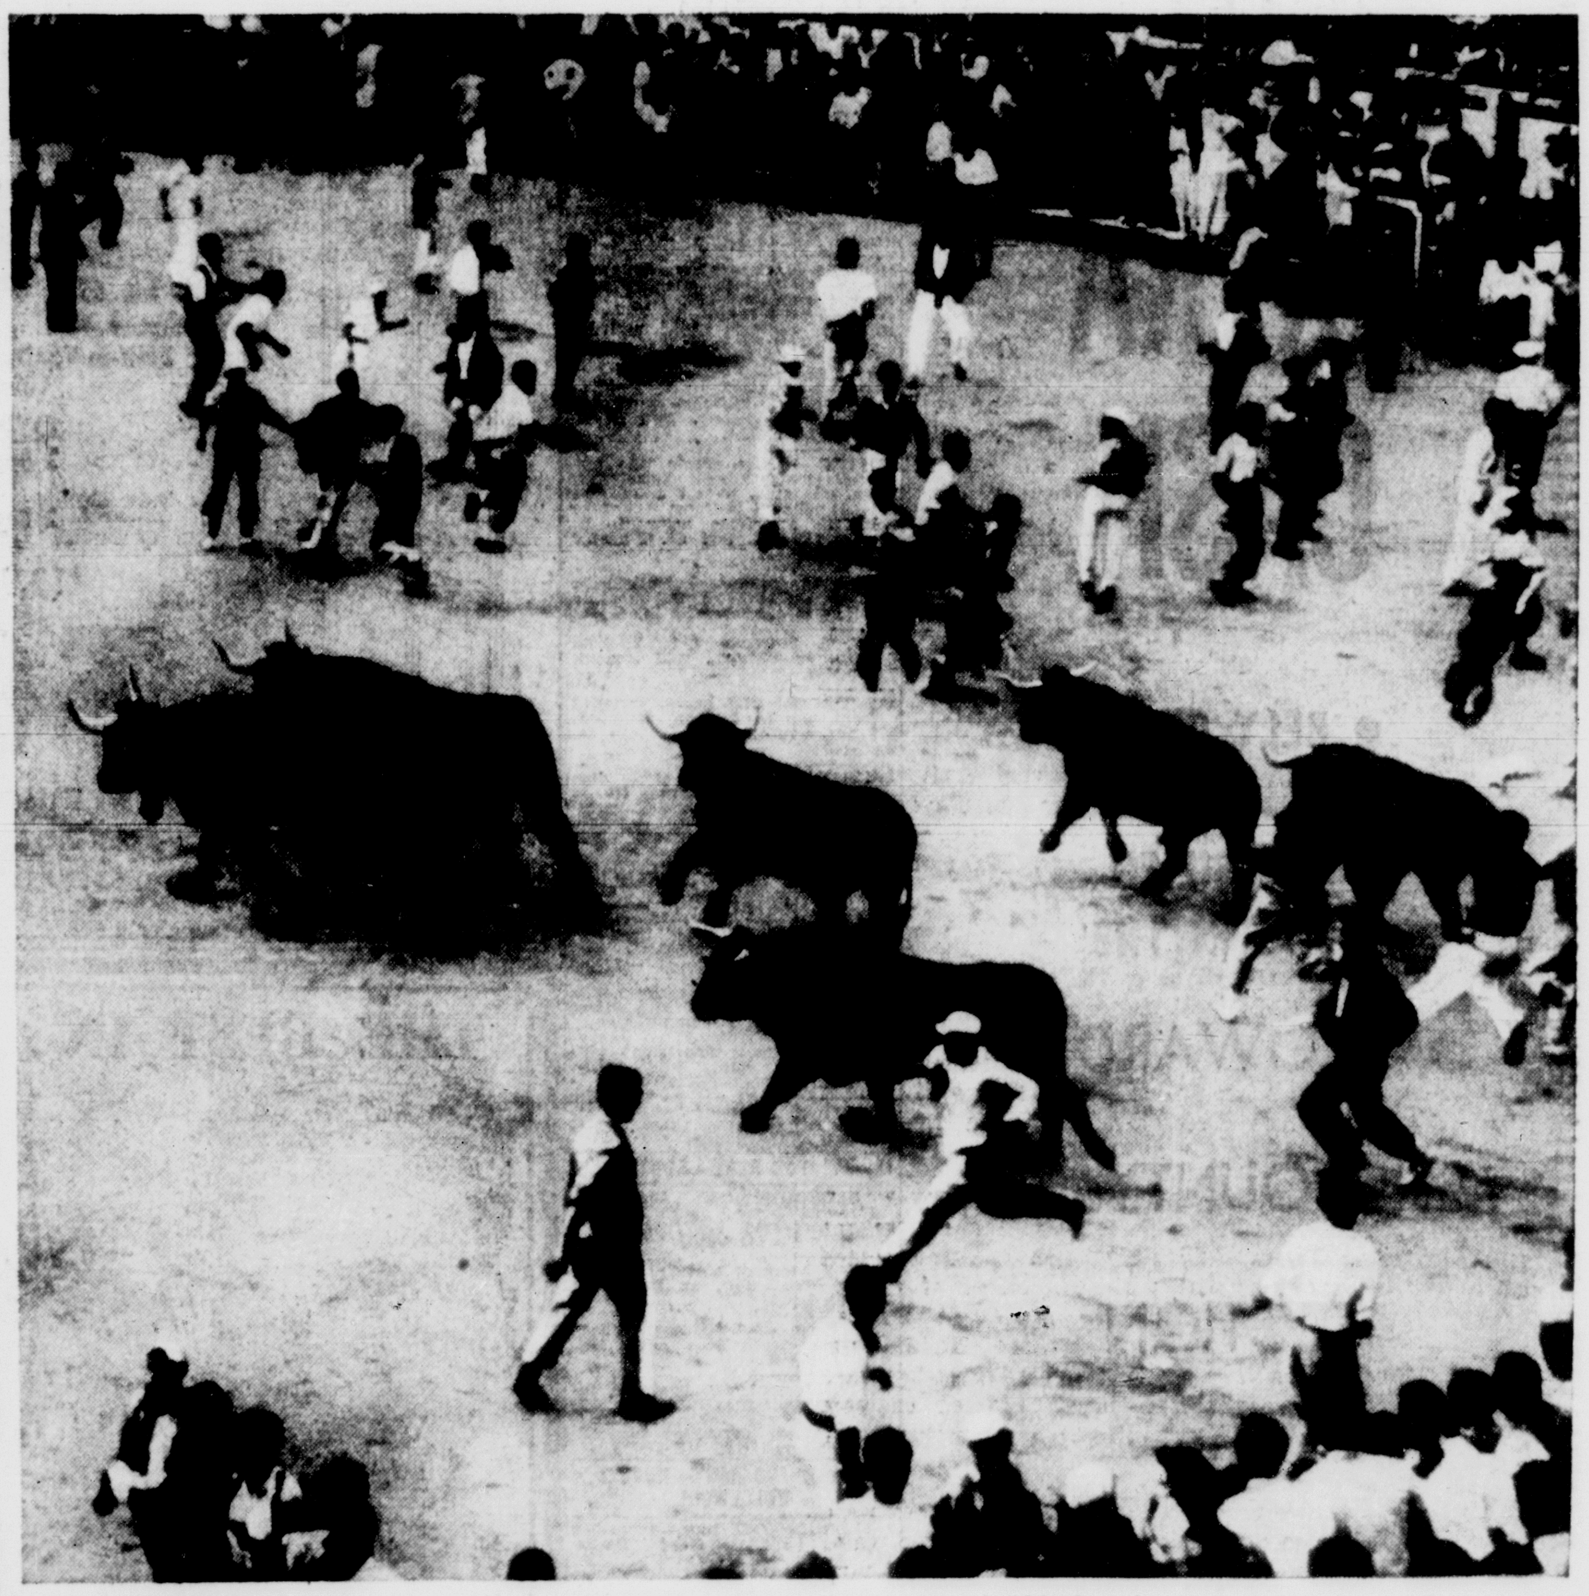
Some Ride the Bulls' Tails

For long hours after the beasts have been driven into the enclosure, the festival's celebrants continue to tease the animals as others, at a safe distance beyond the arena walls, cheer them on. Riding the tail of a maddened bull is the sport of a few of the braver souls, some of whom awake the next morning in a hospital room. Despite the injuries that many receive in the ancient ritual, the grim sport of running the bulls in Pamplona continues.

DOWN BUT NOT OUT, skidding bull has already scored three down and two up as he eyes next target for the day.

DOING A FAST HEEL AND TOE, this woman passes two males as she scrambles for cover from approaching beast.

MADDENED BULL straddles four victims who have fallen beneath his hoofs. Horror-stricken crowd looks aghast.



ENTERING THE RING in Pamplona, the bulls suddenly strike out in all directions as the people scurry for the fence and safety. The jet black animals are specially bred for their stamina and fighting qualities in the bullfighting ring.

Harbor Beach Surf Club's Healthy at 10

By MARGARET WALKER
Broward Society Editor

FORT LAUDERDALE — Ten years ago there were 14 families who enjoyed their community club.

A charming little beach house of cypress and native lime rock was built a few years later among the sand dunes. It's fringed with Australian pines and the smooth sand slopes upward from the surf.

The Harbor Beach Surf Club, celebrating its 10th anniversary this month, now has [illegible] members whose families share the 300-foot expanse of private beach.

Within slight of neon-lighted hotels, the little club remains unspoiled, completely in harmony with the sea and sand. It was so designed by Architect William F. Bigoney

Picturesque approach to the contemporary beach house and cabanas is over a wooden footbridge spanning a lovely lagoon. Masses of mangrove line the shore of Mayan Lake which crosses the club property.

Retaining the natural beauty already there — seagrapes, mangroves, native grasses — one of the members, Mrs. Louis J. McCauley, landscaped the secluded spot with great charm.

A beach boy is in attendance to help guests and serve soft drinks. He looks after cabanas and locker roms.

In celebration of their decade of neighborly get-togethers on their private beach, residents of the swank area had a party last week, biggest in its history.

"It was the first in a series of parties we plan to have all summer long," said president James S. Stubbs.

William H. Rablen is in charge of entertainment.

Also included in the club's facilities is a yacht harbor with slips for more than 25 small craft two blocks from the club, which has its entrance on Ocean Dr.

She's Been Owned by Cats Since 1926

—Herald Photo by Gene Hyde

Mrs. Ralph Mabie Loves Cats
. . . her furry friend is Valentino

By BEVERLY PAULSON
Broward Women's Editor

POMPANO BEACH — "Many people say the only people who love cats are frustrated old maids," says Mrs. Ralph T. Mabie.

"I have four children and seven grandchildren, and I love cats. So I guess that takes care of that."

Mrs. Mabie, 15 NE 17th Ave., not only loves cats, she judges them and has bred them. She has owned cats "always" and "has been owned" by pedigreed felines since 1926.

The energetic grandmother was president of the Miami Cat Club until recently. Since she resigned from that office, she has been its first vice president.

She organized the new Gold Coast Cat Club and is its first president. And she's just back from a meeting in Chicago of the Cat Fanciers' Association, of which she is a past president and now a board member.

Over the years, she has judged cat shows in all of the states and in Hawaii and Canada.

"It's an interesting hobby," she says.

Though Mrs. Mabie maintains she likes all breeds of cats equally, she has always owned a blue or silver Persian. "They're so beautiful and showy, it becomes a habit to own one," she says.

"But one of the children brought home a half-breed one time and we loved it just as much. Alley cats — I hate that expression — are just as lovable as Persians."

Her present cat is a six-year-old silver shaded Persian, Valentino. (The name because Mrs. Mabie got him on Valentine's Day. He's not romantically inclined.)

A cat fancier couldn't ask for a fancier cat.

"Tino," a smugly independent character, has a perfect record of winning every show in which he has been entered.

And besides, he's a much spoiled member of the family who, as a kitten, was raised on tomato juice and pablum, "just like one of the children."

"My husband is so fond of Tino it sometimes embarrasses me," Mrs. Mabie says. "You know how some men talk about the cute things their children do. Well . . ."

Mrs. Mabie loves Tino too, she admits.

But her favorite of pets she has owned? A dog!

Butlers Bound For Two Weeks In Bonny Braes

By ALICE FOSTER
Herald Writer

THE EXCITEMENT is contagious at Joan and Henry Butler's home these days. They are flying to Scotland next Sunday for a two-week holiday. Joan is a Scot lass by birth and it's been four years since she has seen her parents or family.

ALICE FOSTER

The Butlers, with Henry's sister, Sally Butler, will spend Saturday night in New York City and then proceed to Glasgow where they will surprise Joan's two sisters and brother who live there.

A week on the Isle of Skye will be a reunion with Joan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Matheson. This will be Henry's introduction to the family.

Sally Butler, who works for Pan American Airlines, plans a three-week trip including stops in Germany, Spain and Italy.

Saturday night the threesome was surprised with a bon voyage party. A group of young couples met at Bob and Laurene Butler's house and amid travel posters and model planes gave the travelers a royal send-off. The guests were greeted by Bob and Laurene's children, young Jo Ann and Karen, dressed as airline hostesses. Mark and Jeff were the trusty pilots. The guests, in lieu of kilts, wore Scotch plaid Bermuda shorts or dresses and it was a "brau bricht, moonlicht nicht" for all.

Shoffstalls Won't Forget the 25th

ELSIE AND JIM SHOFFSTALL are still surprised!

Last Tuesday was their 25th wedding anniversary. At 6 p.m., accompanied by the Ted Steffens, they repeated their vows at Temple Methodist Church in a lovely ceremony performed by the Rev. George Powell.

In the meantime, 28 South Broward High School teachers and friends slipped into the Shoffstall home. A lovely silver gift, a buffet supper and the guests awaited the return of the unsuspecting couple. To say the least, it was a complete surprise. (Jim is tennis coach at South Broward High School.)

Maralee Springer Entertains

MARALEE SPRINGER took time out from her busy day as secretary to Gulfstream Prexy James Donn to entertain at luncheon in the Turf Club last Wednesday.

Her guests included the James Donns, the James Donns Jr., the Fred C. Flipses, Mrs. Edward Wade, Mr. Horace Wade; Maralee's mother, Mrs. Ralph Springer, and her family, Charles and Lib Springer; Donald and Jean Stonebraker Jr., Bob and Lee Springer, Lou and Edna Gonzales and Ralph and Jane Springer Jr.

Last Friday, Mrs. Henry Mander entertained her house guest, Mrs. Edwin Wells of Mount Dora, and a few friends at Pier 66. The party included lunch and fashions in the yacht club.

After the gala parade Friday night, Doris and Lou Weishedel invited friends to stop by for a "refreshing pause" and to meet their house guests.

Kenneth and Janice Bunn and their three children, from Huntingdon, Pa., have been with them for several weeks. Ken is a football coach at Juniata College, Pa. Today the Bunns will have their third baby christened. Each of their children had a Hollywood christening so the Weischedels could be present.

Expected home today is Bertie (Mrs. Henry) Uecker and Ann (Mrs. George) Getter after a whirl in the big town.

They flew to New York City about two weeks ago. Included in Bertie's full schedule was a visit with her sisters in Philadelphia. For Ann it was a stop with her daughter in New York.

Here for a week with Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Gaddy is Mrs. Gaddy's sister, Mrs. J. N. Lilly of Fayetteville, N.C. Mrs. Lilly, who winters in Fort Myers, will visit her son, Dr. George D. Lilly, on DiLido Island in Miami Beach before returning to North Carolina.

Fashions Bloomed at Church Lunch

SPRING HAS SPRUNG! Or so it seemed at the traditional Easter luncheon given by the Episcopal Church Women of St. John's Episcopal Church in Hollywood Tuesday.

The party, which is always a sell-out weeks before, was a colorful event and our local lasses looked like the spirit of spring. Jessie (Mrs. Eugene) Gay complemented her lovely lavender suit with a striking bunch of violets; pretty Peggy (Mrs. Al) Montella swished about in a gay yellow and white dress that caught the eye; Hilda Christian looked most regal in a white raw linen dress trimmed delicately with seed pearls and embroidered in pale pink; Lula (Mrs. Roy) Harris was a sweet picture in a silk print in shades of blue.

The pretty little roses on Jean Spencer's shoes were eye-catchers and the extremely pointed avocado and white pumps Peg Foster sported are, to husband Ed, sharp enough to be dangerous.

Story of a Paris Red Creation

Everybody admired Maxine Boutwell's Easter hat at the Episcopal Women's luncheon. It really wasn't a hat—it was a creation. The color was Paris red, the material silk organdy, and a beautiful full-blown rose adorned this unusual French chapeau.

She and her uncle, E. P. Duling (a pioneer resident of Hollywood), had seen the hat some time ago. It caught Maxine's eye. Of course she wanted it, but decided not to give way to her whims.

One morning recently, a handsome hatbox appeared in her room. To her amazement it contained "that hat." Nearby stood Uncle "E.P." with a twinkle in his eye. She says she will never know when and how he got it, but somehow the hat took on added loveliness that morning.

Wedgwood Scoffs At Plastic Ware

NEW YORK —(AP)— "Plastic dinnerware will be no threat to us in the foreseeable future," says Sir John Wedgwood, sixth generation member of the internationally known pottery firm established by Josiah Wedgwood.

"We're not contemplating any competition in the field of plastic ware at present, but I am in America to look around, to size up the new shapes, patterns and colors now popular in table ware."

Sir John plans to visit 29 cities on the dinnerware circuit including Boston, San Francisco, Chicago, Memphis and Toronto because "many of the cities in America require more cosmopolitan patterns than do the English."

There is a trend to modern dinner ware, he says, although the most popular pattern in the Wedgwood line is a Florentine design, a handsome wide border of gold on white, among other color choices. Jasper ware, still a top seller, has not been changed in design or color in 180 years, he points out.

Although the bulk of designs are turned out these days by staff artists, Wedgwood employs many outside designers who are well known in England.

His Walk Helps Your Aching Back

HONOLULU — (UPI) — Are you bothered by an aching back?

You might try a lomi-lomi, for that soothing effect.

A lomi-lomi is an ancient Hawaiian version of a massage. And its main feature is that the masseur walks on the patient's back.

While he walks, he kneads the flesh while regulating his weight by holding on a bar above the massage table.

That may sound a bit rugged for a sensitive sore back.

But on the word of Jack Kaaua, a professional masseur and one of the few remaining practitioners of the lomi-lomi, it is really a pain-reliever.

"I've been practicing lomi-lomi for 20 years," says Kaaua, "and I've never had a complaint. In fact, nearly all my customers compliment me on its soothing effect."

Kaaua, 46, is a graduate physical therapist. He can give a Japanese or Swedish massage if the customer wants.

"The Swedish massage just touches the surface of the body," he says. "The Japanese treatment is a little drastic and often leaves the patient with more aches after the massage than before.

"Lomi-lomi gives a deep stimulation, but never makes the patient sore. All my customers notice the difference."

Although back-walking has almost died out, Kaaua says it once was widely used in Hawaii.

"I didn't learn lomi-lomi in any school," he says. "I learned it from my parents. It's an old Hawaiian practice that dates back more than 800 years."

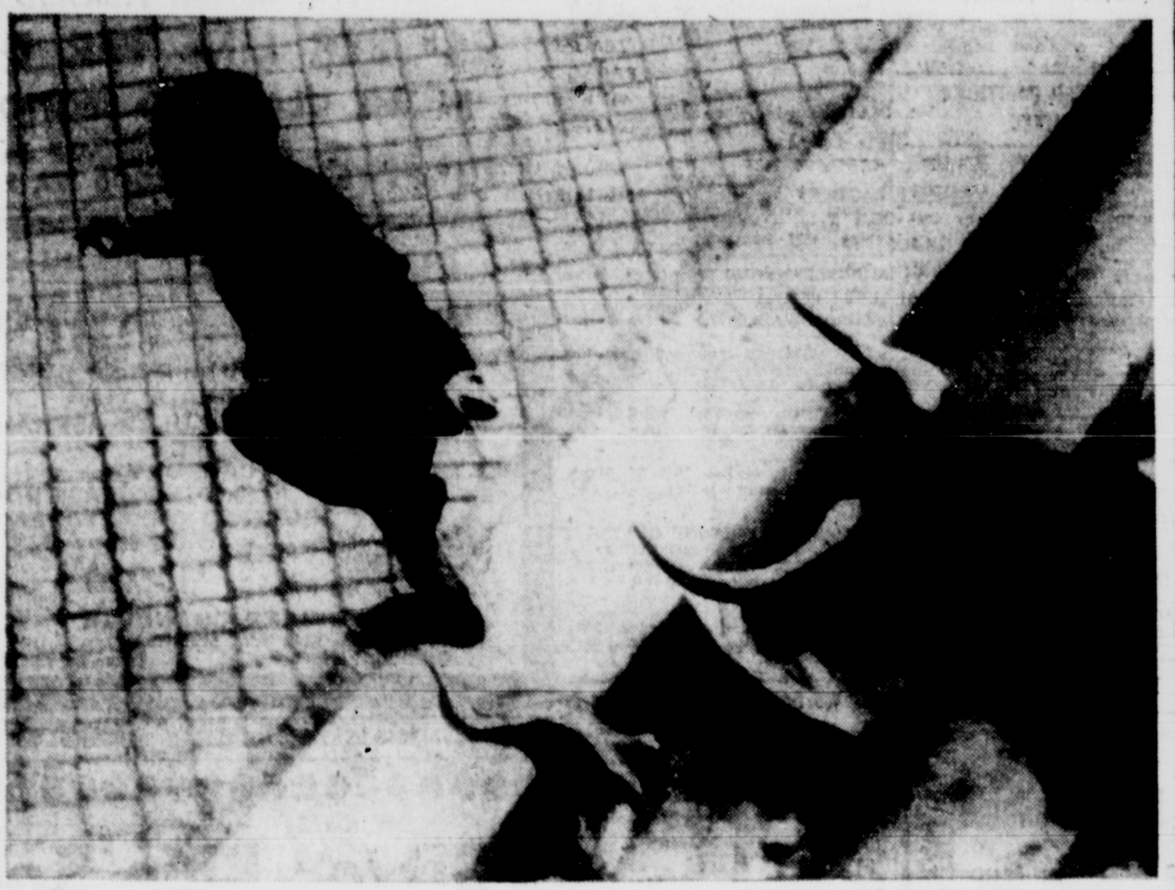
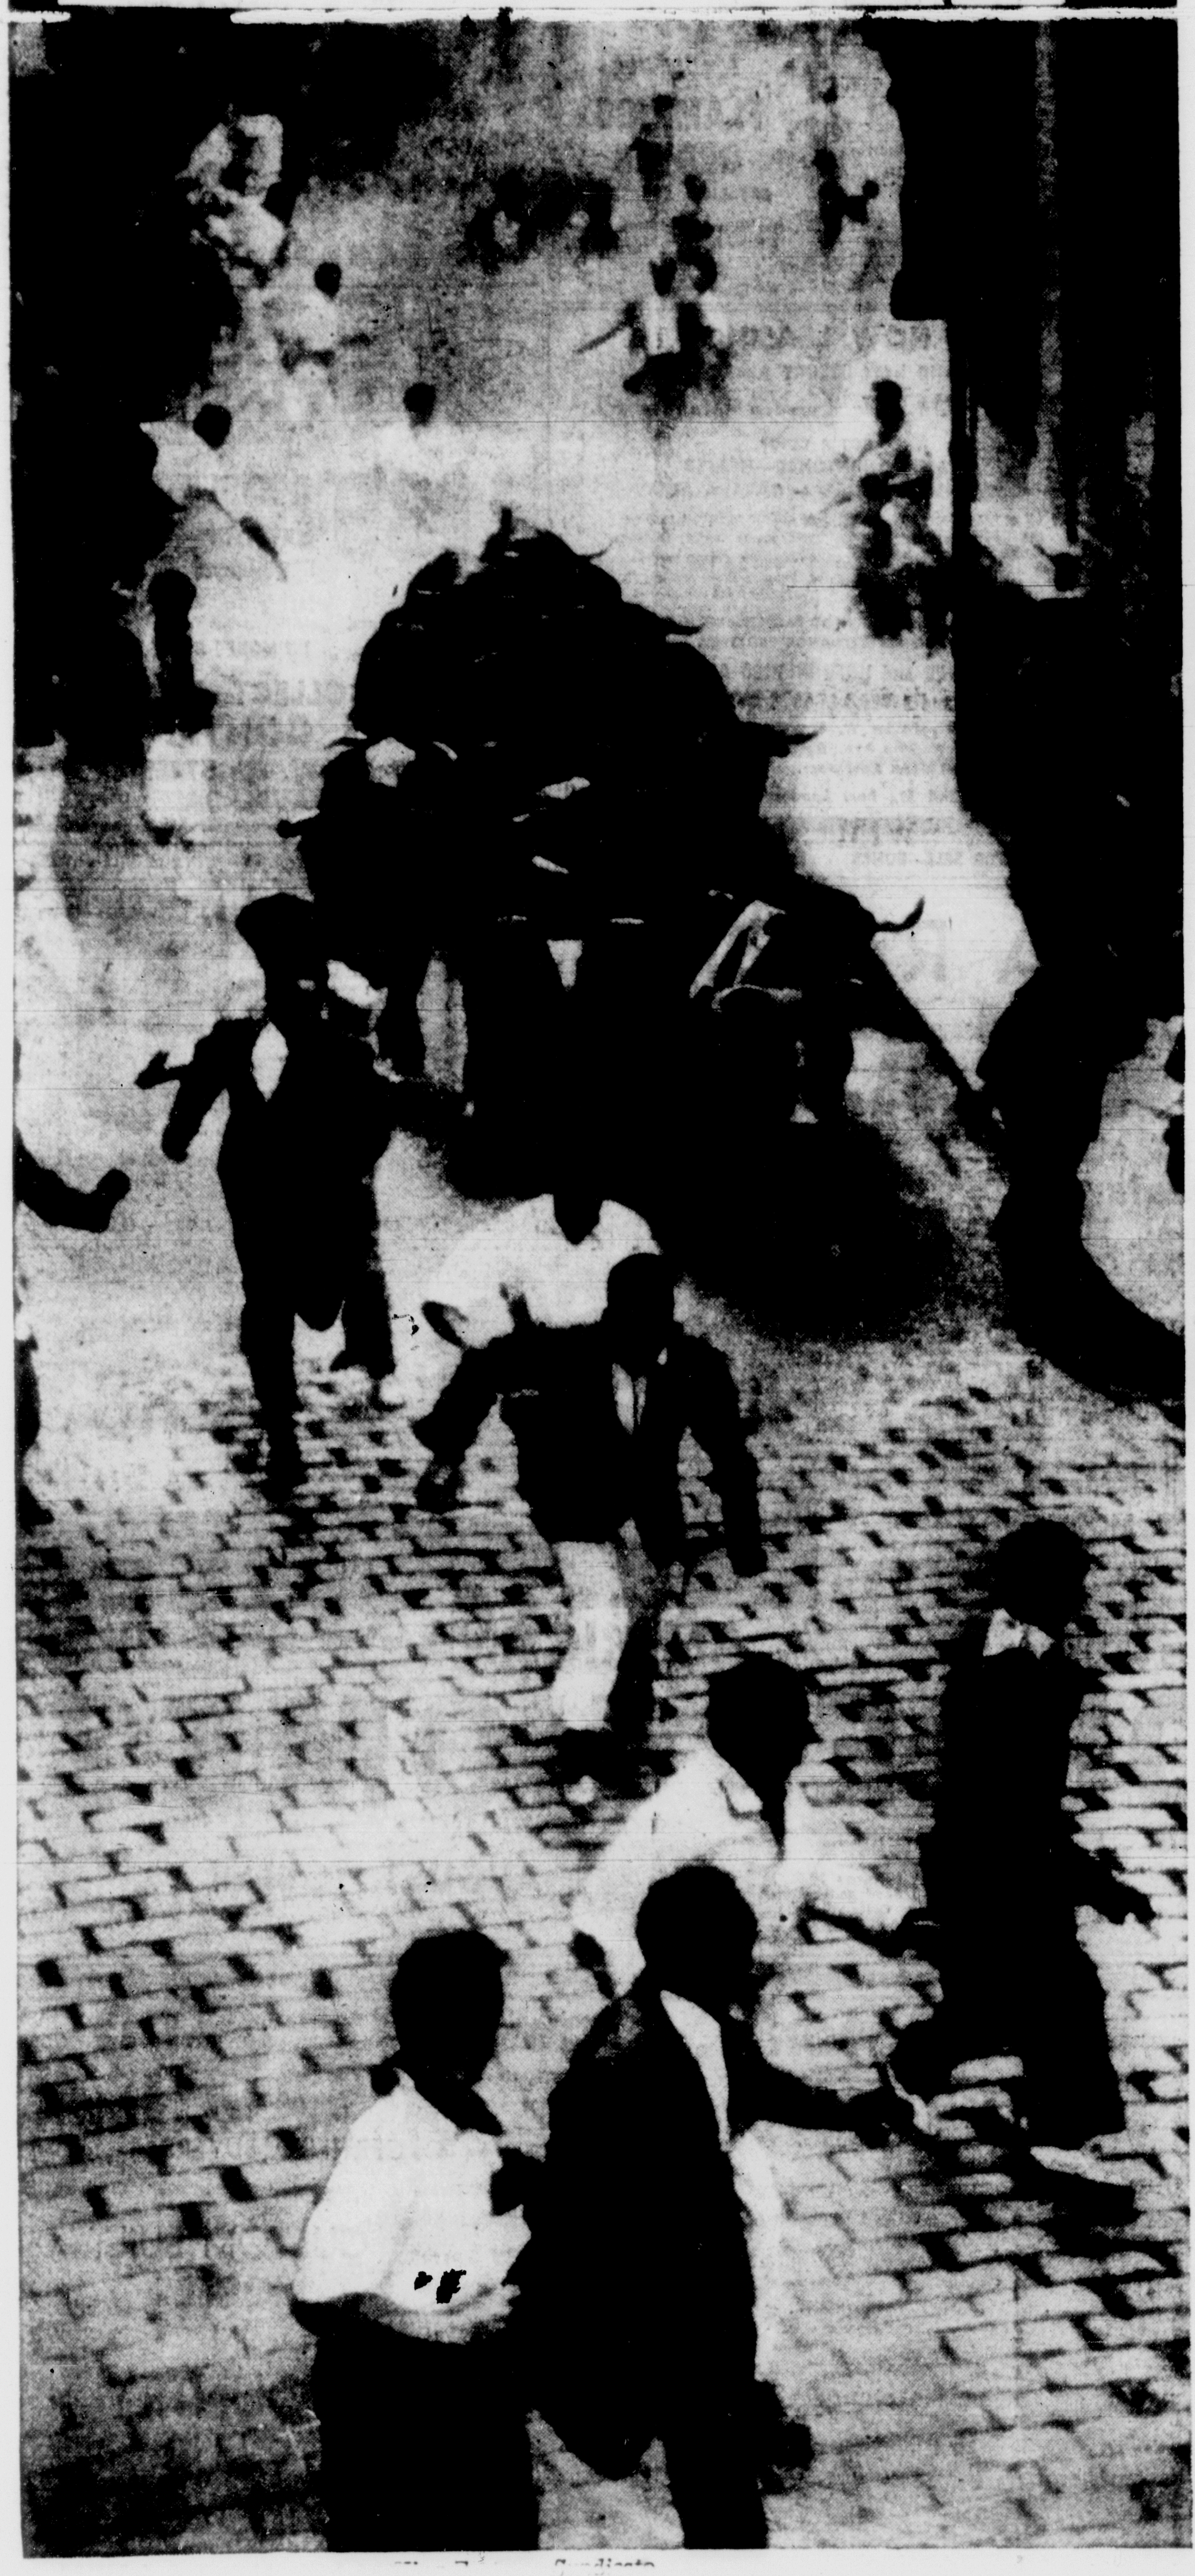
New Battle of Bull Run

Wild Beasts Upset Pamplona During Celebration of Saint's Day



Terror-stricken, small girl (above) flees from charging bull during festival in Pamplona, Spain. Herd of bulls (below) races through city as spectators run for nearest shelter.



[illegible] Syndicate

PAMPLONA, the capital of the Spanish province of Navarre, is the site each year of the Festival of San Fermin, a gala July 7th celebration in honor of the patron saint of the city. The big occasion is highlighted by the arrival of hundreds of pure-bred bulls that are driven through the streets to the city's bull ring where they are often more than a match for the best of Spain's matadors.

Although many of the side streets leading through the city to the arena are barricaded, the bulls charge the great crowds that line the right-of-way to the bull ring. Panting and snorting, the wild beasts seek to smash everything and everybody in their path as they race through the narrow, winding streets.

All Ages Take Part in Dangerous Sport

Pamplona's young and old alike are drawn into the path of the stampeded herd. It is as if the centuries-old magic of bullfighting had put the people in a trance, removing the normal fear that would make the average mortal think many times about indulging in such a pastime.

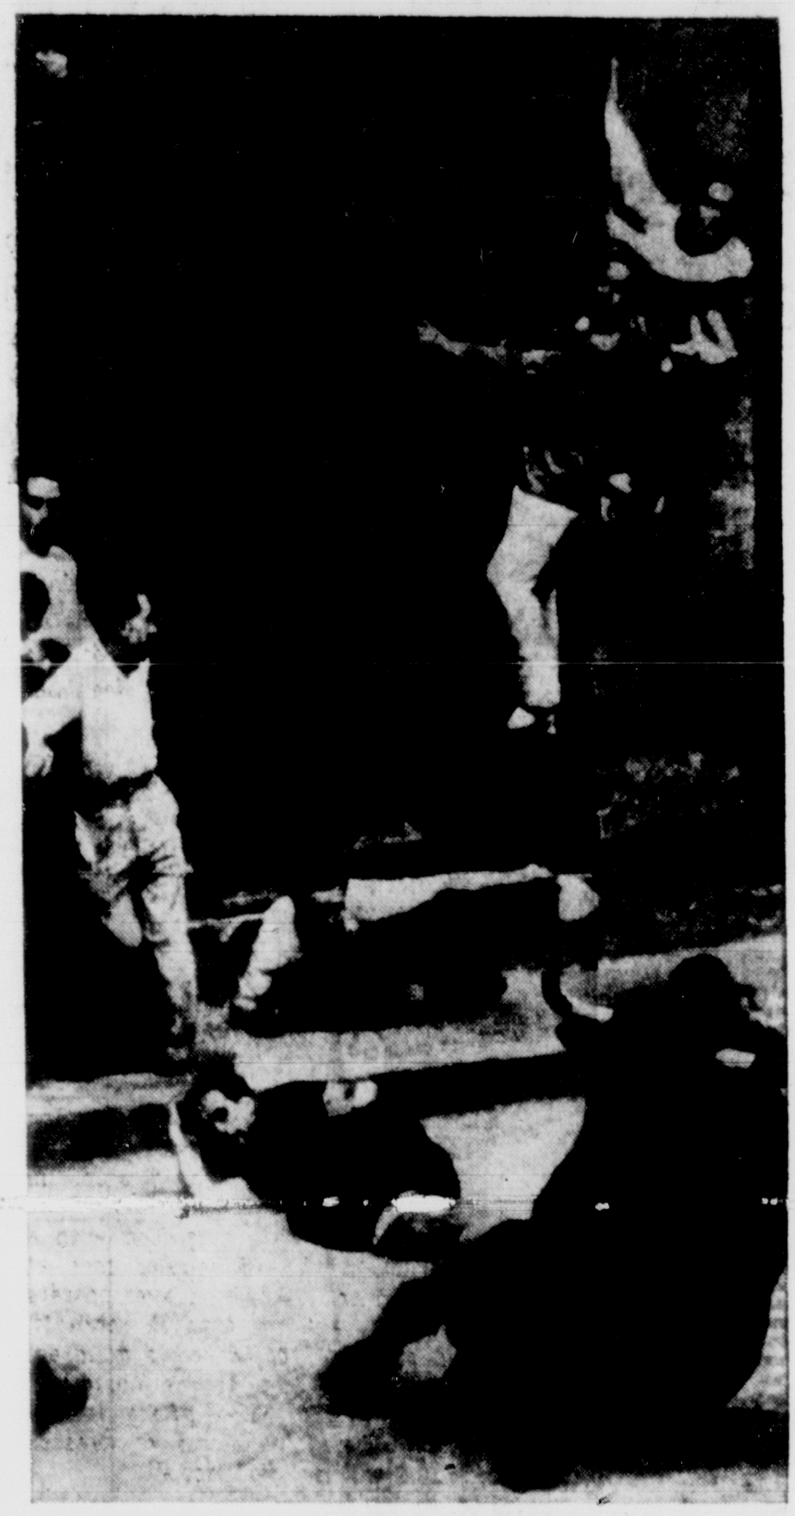
Scores Hurt in Mad Rush of Bulls

The madness does not end in the streets, for at the entrance to the arena the crowd is so dense that the onrushing bulls, chased by the screaming and cavorting mobs behind, knock scores of people to the ground, trampling over many others in their headlong rush.

To a visitor the spectacle is one that is never to be forgotten—the clatter of bulls' hoofs on the brick and cobblestone paving, the sight of a respectable-looking citizen clinging to the [illegible] of a lamp post, others glued to the sides of buildings, looking much like quivering gargoyles in the noon-day sun.

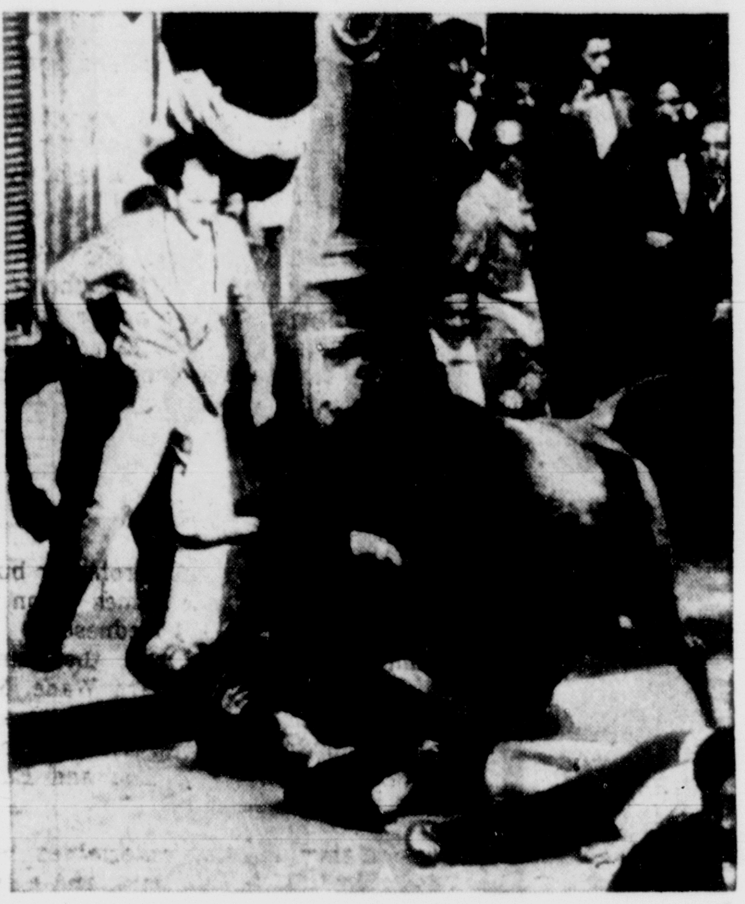
Some Ride the Bulls' Tails

For long hours after the beasts have been driven into the enclosure, the festival's celebrants continue to tease the animals as others, at a safe distance beyond the arena walls, cheer them on. Riding the tail of a maddened bull is the sport of a few of the braver souls, some of whom awake the next morning in a hospital room. Despite the injuries that many receive in the ancient ritual, the grim sport of running the bulls in Pamplona continues.

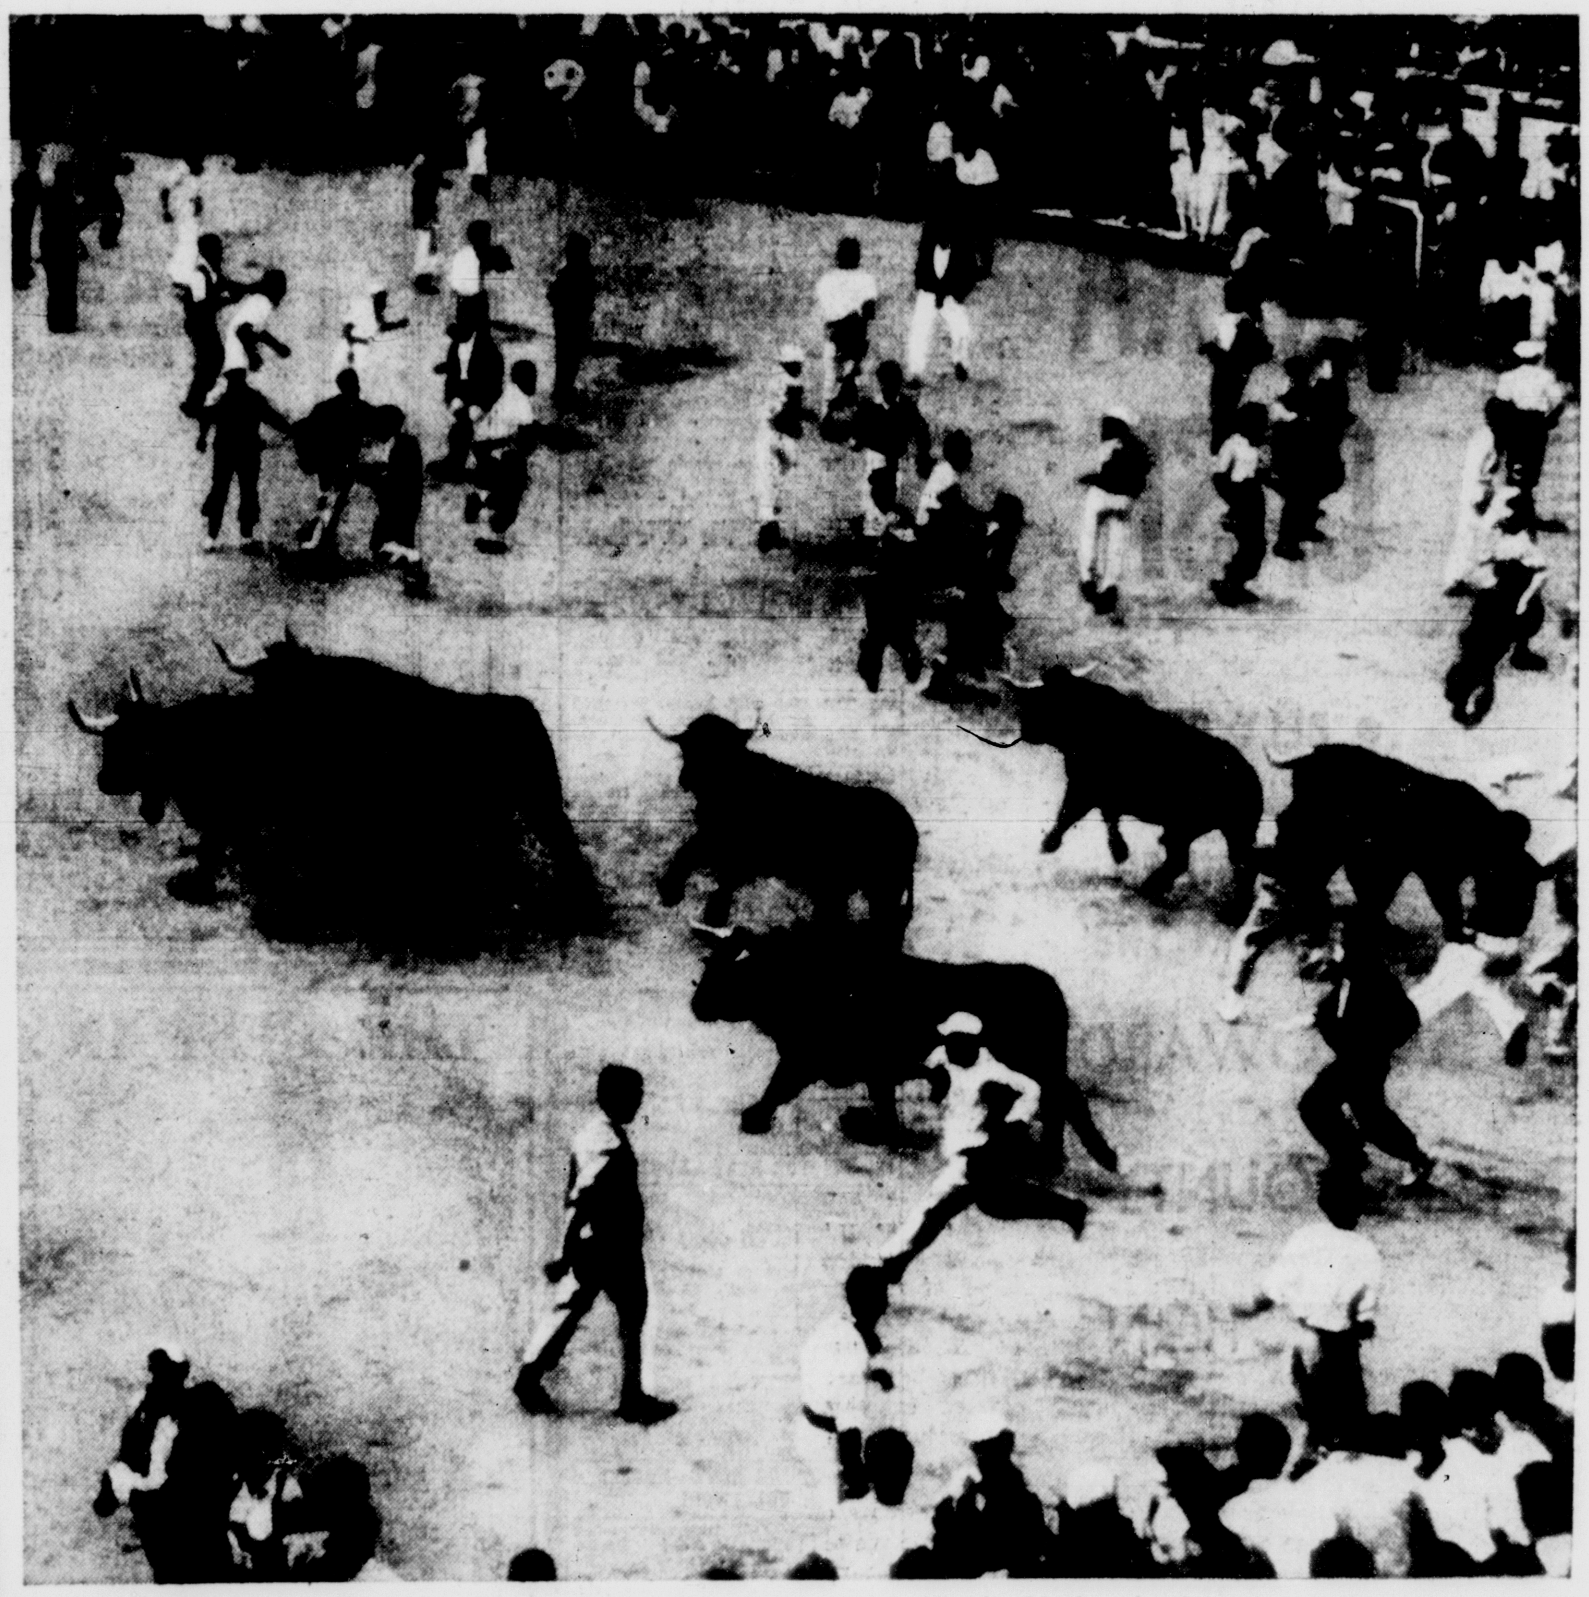


DOWN BUT NOT OUT, skidding bull has already scored three down and two up as he eyes next target for the day.

DOING A FAST HEEL AND TOE, this woman passes two males as she scrambles for cover from approaching beast.



MADDENED BULL straddles four victims who have fallen beneath his hoofs. Horror-stricken crowd looks aghast.



ENTERING THE RING in Pamplona, the bulls suddenly strike out in all directions as the people scurry for the fence and safety. The jet black animals are specially bred for their stamina and fighting qualities in the bullfighting ring.

Dulles' Day: Sun, Caviar, Mysteries

Dulles
. . . the 'native' look

By ROSE ALLEGATO
Herald Staff Writer

HOBE SOUND — In the hush seclusion of his Jupiter Island retreat, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles pads around in colorful Hawaiian shorts and a white floppy $1.98 golf hat.

The shorts he picked up in Honolulu on one of his trips; the hat in America.

Dulles, with cheeks of tan, has gone native after less than a week on the unpretentious millionaires' island he has chosen as a hermitage. He hopes to recoup his strength here and make a decision about his cabinet post.

He sees no one except his wife, his doctor, and his aide. His days are spent in casual leisure. He is anchored to no schedule and does not know when he will leave his island refuge.

But he is not aloof. There is a morning call to Washington for a daily fill-in. Washington calls back at least twice a day.

"The phone manages to ring a lot," his aide, Joseph M. Green, readily admits. "But he's not backseat driving."

The ailing 71-year-old diplomat begins his days in the sun with breakfast at 8 to 8:30 a.m. on the terrace of La Lanterne, the 14-room, two-story colonial home of Undersecretary of State C. Douglas Dillon.

Fritz and Agnes, the German butler and his wife, serve him juice, dry toast and three-minute eggs ("he likes them running a little," says Green.).

Dulles is on a 'bland' diet — the creamed chopped beef variety — and his menus are closely supervised by his wife and his doctor.

There's a bright spot, though. Like the millionaire islanders, Dulles' taste runs to caviar. Only more so. He took no chances with this favorite. He brought his own supply along in the icebox of the presidential plane, Columbine, which flew him to Florida.

Breakfast over, Dulles sees his doctor, Capt. Edward Kamin, who along with Green, is putting up in "The Holiday," the oceanfront beachhouse of the Dillon estate. The white frame La Lanterne, itself, faces the inland waterway which secludes Jupiter Island from the mainland.

The seclusion is so prized by islanders that three years ago they fought and won a battle to re-route A1A onto the mainland, further preserving the five-mile isle's ivory-tower character.

After the doctor, Green moves in for an hour that "sort of passes with reading the papers and gassing."

Between 10:30 and 11, Green calls Washington. Only once has Dulles himself spoken directly to the State Department. That was the morning of the NATO meeting and the day tensions heightened over free air corridors to West Berlin.

The daily morning check with Washington completed, Green gives Dulles a leisurely run down. Finally the party — Dulles, his wife, the doctor, and Green — are off to the pool to bask in the sun and swim. The white floppy hat comes in handy in the glaring sun. Even so, Dulles often retreats to the shade.

Talk rambles from bridge to sailing. A great sailor, Dulles gets carried away in conversation on how to sail a "Lightning."

Sometimes he reminisces about his days at Princeton, and often he twits his aide.

Green, invited to an island party, had to ask 'Dad' for the car. The secretary of state took full advantage of the humor in the situation.

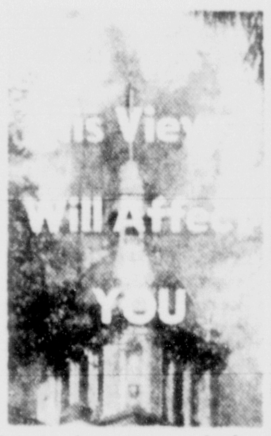
Collins Pledges Fight for Issues In Legislature

Legislators Agreed: No New Taxes . . 1G
Courts May Force Reapportionment 1B

Florida's Legislature, which meets every two years, reassembles Tuesday in Tallahassee. The eyes of the legislators and the rest of the state will be on three influential men—Speaker of the House Thomas Beasley, Senate President Dewey M. Johnson and Governor LeRoy Collins. How they agree and differ on key issues will affect you. Gov. Collins explains his views in today's article written especially for The Herald.

By LeROY COLLINS
Governor of Florida

TALLAHASSEE—In the last two regular sessions of the Legislature we have had remarkable success in accomplishing our recommended programs. Between two-thirds and three-fourths of what I have asked for has been enacted.



Of course, there have been areas where we have not reached agreement. They have involved basic principles of government to which I am strongly committed both in thought and by express statement to the people of Florida.

I expect to go into this coming session with a spirit of cooperation, and I feel that working together we can accomplish the greatest portion of a program which will be more far-reaching than any of the previous two.

Doubtless we will have some head-on collisions in thinking again.

LeRoy Collins
. . . spells out program

I think most of these will center around (1) race relations, (2) public schools, (3) constitutional revision, (4) reapportionment, (5) finance, (6) urban needs, (7) highways and (8) governmental reorganization. In each of these there will be some basic philosophic differences which separate me from some members of the Legislature and divide the legislators themselves.

Generally, in the past, governors have "taken things easy" in their last session of the Legislature. The dominant thinking has been that as a governor approaches the end of his term he should precipitate as few issues as possible.

I do not concur in this view. I feel that with the experience I have gained as governor, I owe it to the people to go all the way for them, and this I intend to do through my last day in office. I have not picked the easy course thus far, and I will not start doing so now.

In race relations I shall favor keeping Florida on the sound sensible road our government has been traveling. I shall never favor closing any public school wherein a course of instruction can be taught.

I shall continue the fight for a modernized, effective State Constitution.

I shall also carry on the battle for fair apportionment of representation in the Legislature.

I shall favor sound retrenchment and economies on a se-

Where Collins Stands

Here are highlights of what Gov. Collins will be seeking from the Florida Legislature which convenes Tuesday:

RACE RELATIONS—"I shall never favor closing any public school."

REAPPORTIONMENT — ". . . carry on the battle for fair apportionment . . ."

ECONOMIES — "I will oppose indiscriminate reductions which will damage our state's progress."

HIGHWAYS — ". . . based on need, not political favoritism and greed."

GOVERNMENTAL REORGANIZATION — ". . . long overdue."

Ford Tests Gas Turbine Auto Engine

DETROIT —(AP)— Ford Motor Co.'s research staff reported Saturday development of a 300-horsepower supercharged gas turbine engine described as superior to conventional gasoline engines under most operating conditions.

It is called "the 704" and is to be tested in vehicles before the end of this year. Its weight is one-fourth that of a truck diesel engine of the same horsepower and it has the fuel economy of a diesel.

B. T. Howes, associate director of engineering research said, "the Ford 704 represents an important break-through in gas turbine design technology."

Experimental gas turbines for trucks and passenger cars so far have used one stage of air compression but the Ford 704 has in addition a supercharging stage, the company said.

It said this enables the engine to deliver more horsepower from a smaller size. The 704 has dual burners instead of one combustion chamber such as used in early designs.

Howes said "the 704 would fit easily into the engine compartment of a 1959 Ford with room to spare. It can use unleaded gasoline, kerosene, jet engine fuel or light diesel fuel and requires no warm-up."

Crush Put On Tibet

Red Chinese Add Troops

NEW DELHI, India — (UPI) — Communist China has sent 100,000 fresh troops to smash the Tibetan rebellion before the stunning escape of the Dalai Lama inflames all of Tibet, reports from the border said Saturday.

The reports said the Peiping regime, stung by the successful flight of the Tibetan god-king into India, apparently intended to overwhelm Tibetan anti-Communists by sheer numbers as they tried to do to U.N. forces in Korea.

The rebels, led by the fierce Khamba tribesmen, have used their superior knowledge of the mountainous country to ambush Chinese columns, raid their arsenals and harass them.

Reports from the Indo-Tibetan border said shooting still was continuing on the outskirts of Lhasa, but not in the capital.

Information from Shillong, capital of India's Assam state, said the 23-year-old Dalai Lama had made it through the 14,000-foot Sela pass and is nearing Towang, 24 hours ahead of schedule.

One New Delhi newspaper, The Statesman, said he already had arrived at Towang, site of a large Buddhist monastery.

The Dalai Lama, who crossed the border from Tibet Tuesday, is traveling with 80 of his followers. They are being escorted by an Indian political officer and Indian troops. The only method of transportation in the mountainous area is horse or muleback.

As the young temporal and spiritual leader of Tibet drew closer to safer grounds, the Indian government began to worry about repercussions from giant, neighboring Communist China.

Newspapers and government leaders continued to insist that the Dalai Lama would do or say nothing to compromise India with Peiping while he is on Indian soil.

Domestically, the Tibetan affair appeared to be a blessing in disguise to Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party.

The Communists, who had been gaining popularity among the masses at the expense of the Congress Party, suddenly found themselves looked upon with increasing suspicion for supporting Peiping's version of the Tibetan rebellion and for making charges that India was letting Kalimpong be used as an anti-China spy base.

When Nehru announced in Parliament Friday that the Dalai Lama had been granted haven in India, every member of Parliament cheered but the Communists. They sat glumly silent.

Nehru was expected to clear up some of the questions of how he regards the legal status of the Dalai Lama when he holds a press conference today.

Ike Renews His Vow: 'No More Munichs'

Big Three Stand OKd By NATO

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The NATO council Saturday firmly endorsed the Western Big Three's German policy and warned the Communists to keep their hands off the free Allied sector of Berlin.

The 15-nation council expressed "full agreement on the broad lines of policy to be pursued" by Britain, France and the U. S. in their forthcoming showdown talks on the German crisis with the Soviet Union at Geneva.

The council said in a communique issued at the close of its three-day spring session that it wanted to see "outstanding problems solved by negotiation" but would consent to no appeasement on Berlin.

"The council confirmed its unanimous determination to maintain the freedom of the people of West Berlin and the rights and obligations of the Allied Powers."

The council endorsed anew the Western Big Three's "basic principles" on Berlin and Germany. These are:

1 — Britain, France and the U. S. will keep their forces in Berlin and maintain "freedom of access" to that city until there is an acceptable all-German settlement.

2 — They reject any effort by Russia to repudiate the Soviet Union's obligations to the other three victorious powers in regard to Berlin.

3 — They will refuse to recognize as valid any Soviet action turning over to the German Communists control of the Russian sector of East Berlin or control over the Allied access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Acting Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, hailed the meeting as an inspiring example of Western solidarity.

Assistant Secretary of State Andrews J. Berding said on behalf of the delegation that "we are encouraged by the unswerving firmness of the position of the other members of NATO on Berlin and Germany."

Mutual Security Is Key

Red 'Ceiling' Rejected 2A

GETTYSBURG, Pa. —(UPI) — President Eisenhower pledged the U.S. Saturday to follow a firm course in Berlin and prevent that divided city from becoming "another Munich."

"The course of appeasement is not only dishonorable, it is the most dangerous one we could pursue," he declared. "The world paid a high price for the lesson of Munich — but it learned it well."

The President spoke at Gettysburg College's spring convocation, attended by 4,000 invited guests. The affair was held in windy, topcoat weather in the college football stadium.

The President used the political crisis in Viet Nam and the economic difficulties of Japan, along with the Berlin problem, as examples of the need for mutual free world security as a buffer against communism.

Berlin is a tension point just now, he said, "because the Kremlin hopes to eliminate it as a part of the free world."

"The Communist leaders have chosen to exert pressure there at this moment," he added. "Naturally they always pick the most awkward situation, the hard-to-defend position, as the place to test our strength and resolution.

"There will never be an easy place for us to make a stand, but there is a best one."

In a renewed defense of his foreign policy, Eisenhower said the situations in Berlin, Viet Nam and Japan show the need for firm answers to Soviet political challenges, U.S. foreign aid to keep the spirit of freedom alive in divided countries, and foreign trade to keep nations of the free world in economic good health.

"We have learned, too," he said, "that the costs of defending freedom — of defendin America — must be paid in many forms. They are assessed against us in all parts of the world — in Berlin, in Viet Nam, in the Middle East, and here at home.

"But wherever they occur and in whatever form they appear, they are first and last a proper charge to the national security of the U.S."

Eisenhower departed from his prepared text to declare that "no matter what areas of federal spending should be curtailed — and some should — our safety comes first."

Some congressional Democrats have accused him of cutting back essential defense spending to achieve a balanced budget.

"A free America can exist only as part of a free world, and a free world can continue to exist only as it meets the rightful demands of people for security, progress and opportunity," he said.

"This is why the development of South Viet Nam and Southeast Asia is important, why Japanese export trade is important, why firmness at Berlin is important."

Tourists Still 'in Season'

By AL FINKELSTEIN
Herald Staff Writer

Greater Miami hotel and motel operators Saturday checked their calendars suspiciously.

Here it was April — and their sun-kissed winter tourist "season" was still on.

From downtown Miami to South Beach to Bal Harbor, hotelmen joyfully reported their customers this year were staying later than they had in several years.

Reservations at the $25-a-day hotels were non-existent; mid-Beach hotels were "doing nicely," and even the older South Beach quarters were pleased at the late stay of their regular elderly tenants.

North-bound air traffic was booked solid —yet tourists were still coming down at a fairly steady rate.

"They seem to be leaving later and later every year," said R. T. Jeffries, assistant general passenger agent of the Florida East Coast Railway.

Greyhound Bus Lines were running seven capacity-filled expresses daily to New York — and still returning with "good loads."

A Dupont Plaza spokesman said occupancy was dropping — "but just slowly."

At the small Calvert Hotel, 150 Ocean Dr., Miami Beach, owner Mrs. Frances Mitnick said "we are dropping off . . . but only since the first of the month."

Further up the Beach at the Carillon Hotel, 6801 Collins Ave., Sales Director Dan Shaw said business was in "very good shape."

And at the 650-room Americana Hotel in Bal Harbor, a spokesman said: "Reservations — what are they, sir?"

Scratch One Cold Front

You can stop worrying about that new cold front and look for sunny, warm weather over just about all of Florida today, forecasters advised Saturday.

Francis Drybala of the Miami Weather Bureau said the cold air mass sweeping eastward from Texas on Friday and threatening a rainy weekend dissipated when it got to Florida.

U.S. Flatly Rejects Berlin Air Ceiling

We'll Pick Altitude, Reds Told

BERLIN —(UPI)— The U.S. told the Soviets Saturday that American military transports would fly through the corridors linking West Berlin and West Germany at whatever height they choose.

In a note, the U.S. rejected a Soviet attempt to put a ceiling on the Western corridors over Communist East Germany.

The note was in reply to a Soviet protest against the "illegal" flight of a C130 transport at 25,000 feet. The Russians said the flight created an air hazard.

Three Soviet jet fighters harassed the unarmed transport throughout its inbound and outbound flights March 27. The U.S. immediately protested the incident through its representative on the four-power Berlin Air Safety Center.

The center controls flights to and from Berlin.

The Soviet protest charged the high-altitude flight violated air safety regulations and could lead to collisions, loss of life and destruction of aircraft.

The U.S. made it clear it would not submit to any Soviet-imposed ceilings on the three Western air lanes between West Berlin and the West.

The Soviets had maintained that air space above 10,000 feet in the corridors is reserved for Soviet aircraft flying across the Western airlanes. They said "the U.S. will have to bear the full responsibility for any undesirable results of such violations."

The U.S. note rejected the Soviet contention that the American transport created a hazard to air safety by flying at 25,000 feet, or that any flight at that height violated any existing agreement.

It further declared that U.S. planes would continue to fly to and from West Berlin at altitudes of their pilot's own choosing.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The State Department said Saturday Russia has relaxed to a limited extent its ban of travel by foreign diplomats.

The U.S. intends to ease its retaliatory ban by permitting Soviet embassy officials to travel to some American cities, a State Department spokesman said.

The spokesman said the U.S. Embassy at Moscow had reported the Soviets have permitted the travel "of some embassy personnel to certain places." He could not elaborate.

The Soviet government was understood to have let two American embassy attaches fly to Baku and other places in the Caucasus.

Russia halted the travel of foreign diplomats outside Moscow, except to Leningrad, April 1. The U.S. promptly retaliated by forbidding Soviet officials here to travel outside Washington, except to New York. It was believed here that the reason for the Russian restrictions was that the Soviet army was carrying out extensive spring maneuvers.

I will favor effective recognition of the trend in Florida to urbanization and the needs of our people in the heavily populated areas.

I shal fight to continue progress we have made for the construction of highways based upon need, not political favoritism and greed.

In the broad area of governmental reorganization, I shall favor reforms such as the long-overdue program of central purchasing for all departments and institutions.

These are the areas, in my opinion, where the biggest fight for the people will come.

Progress we make will be important for our own time, but the greatest challenge is that, for better or worse, we are laying foundations for the future.

Ah, Spring! Ah, Sunny's 400 Bucks

By SUNNY FORTUNE
Herald Puzzle Editor

Spring is here, buds are blooming, business is booming, the fish are biting and Sunny Fortune is wearing a $400 smile.

SUNNY

That's what the winner of this week's prize will receive.

So don't let spring fever distract you from giving it a whirl.

That's the word from Sunny Fortune. Last week, unfortunately, no one had the word — or words—to take home the long green.

Remember, as a long-forgotten Miami poet once said:

> Keep trying your luck
> And you'll make a buck

That may not be very good poetry. But if you win $400 it will be music to your ears.

The sad truth is nobody came within a country mile of the correct solution last week.

Most frequently missed words were job for joy (seems nobody wanted to take the happy side of the question); power for poser; pride for prude and wonder for fonder.

It was no wonder we had no winners.

Turn to Page 13C for this week's puzzle.

Air-Fired Missile In Works

AF to Order Output Soon

WASHINGTON —(UPI)— The Air Force soon will order production of a new ballistic missile to be launched from bombers. It also is weighing the possibility of doubling orders for Atlas intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Informed sources who disclosed this Saturday said the Air Force was ready to name one of about two dozen competing contractors to produce the Air - Launched Ballistic Missile.

The missile, on which experiments have been under way for months at Cape Canaveral, Fla., is expected to have a 1,000-mile range. Its development would extend the usefulness of the Strategic Air Command's big bomber fleet. The first bombers may receive the missiles in about 18 months.

Armed with them, bombers will be able to destroy targets without coming near enemy defenses, in much the same way as Polaris missile submarines can operate at sea.

Whether the Air Force doubles its arsenal of Atlas Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles depends on what Congress does about increasing missiles appropriations.

The House Appropriations Committee and defense leaders have had many secret conferences on the cost of providing greater numbers of the Atlas, protected in underground sites, to increase this country's deterrent to war.

The Air Force has now ordered nine squadrons of Atlas missiles. The squadrons, with 650 to 700 men each, will be stationed at nine bases and will have a total of 80 missile launchers. The first squadron will have three launchers, the next three squadrons will have nine launchers each, and the last five will have 10 each, according to well-informed authorities.

Tibet Revolt Splits Red Curtain--Nixon

Herald Bureau

FORT LAUDERDALE — Vice President Richard Nixon said here Saturday that the revolt in Tibet has created a solid crack in the Communist Bamboo Curtain in Asia.

"The Communist Chinese action in Tibet has done irreparable harm to plans of Communist domination in Asia.

"It unmasked their true tactics toward India and the other neutral countries," he declared.

Nixon, who had just conferred with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles who is convalescing at Hobe Sound, made the comments while stopping to talk with Republican state chairmen from 12 southern states meeting here.

"We discussed Tibet, Berlin and general world conditions. Mr. Dulles is in good spirits and looks good."

Nixon said Berlin is still the most crucial spot in the Cold War and a summit meeting on the issue "is not a sure thing."

He said the responsibility of whether a summit meeting is held rests with Communist Boss Nikita Khrushchev.

"The blockade incidents are not as important as what happens at the Western and Soviet foreign ministers' meeting set for May. Progress must be made then if we are to go to the summit."

He declined comment on the possibility of war if a summit meeting falls through, but made this remark on Khrushchev's deadlines: "The record speaks for itself. He made one deadline and has moved it back. But it's not wise to try to guess about Khrushchev's deadlines."

Nixon said the West would have to stay in Berlin until Soviet leaders make an argeement which will result in a "lasting settlement of the German problem."

On foreign aid, he said, "it will be needed as long as there's a Russian economic threat."

The vice president flew to Hobe Sound. After an hour's talk with Dulles, he returned by car to Miami where he is vacationing with his family.

He agreed to stop over for an "informal chat" with the state chairmen who were huddling at Galt Ocean Mile Hotel to plan strategy for the 1960 presidential campaign in the south.

The Republican state leaders voted to arrange a caucus of southern delegates on the platform and resolutions committees prior to the national GOP convention.

Association President G. Harold Alexander, Fort Myers, said the delegates were "most optimistic over local prospects."

"All incumbent Republican congressmen in the South were reelected last year," he said. "GOP registration is increasing in all the 12 states."

Alexander was host to Claude Vandaman, Alabama; William Shartzer, Georgia; Mrs. Dorothy Young, Kentucky; N. Bryant James, Louisiana; Wirt A. Yerger Jr., Mississippi; William Cobb, North Carolina; W. W. Wanamaker Jr., South Carolina; Todd Meacham, Tennessee; Thad Hutcheson, Texas, and I. Lee Potter, Virginia, assistant to national chairman Meade Alcorn.

Also present were Anthony Battaglia, Florida national committeeman; Mrs. Janet Showalter, vice chairman of the state committee; Loren Berry, South Florida financial chairman, and Miss Georgianna Sheldon, executive secretary of the association's Fort Myers and Washington offices.

stern patriarch, he teased, "I don't know. I don't approve of carousing. How late will you be out?"

The book "Living in State," which Mrs. Dulles is reading, gave rise to more teasing. Written by a gal whose husband is in the state department, it deals with life in the foreign service.

Green, a foreign service officer for 17 years, abetted by the book, said, "you see diplomats aren't all cookie pushers. It's hard work."

Dulles laughed, "Oh, I can't believe that."

To Green, this is the fun — the casual chit-chat in the sun or in the parlor. The talk goes on even during the backgammon games which is the diversion the Dulleses most enjoy together.

Dulles strolls up and down the lawn of the Dillon estate. This and his swim are his only exercise. He left the main grounds once only, to drive with his wife to see the ocean.

The Dulleses lunch alone after the hour outdoors. There's another off-to-the-pool session between 4 and 5 p.m. But first, Dulles stretches out for a siesta or reads. He's deep in Agatha Christie and Ellery Queen mysteries, but "nothing hefty."

The late afternoon pool party, a cocktail hour (only Green and Mrs. Dulles have a drink.), and dinner at 7:15 p.m. fill out the day. Green and the doctor look in once more at 8:30 to 9, then the secretary of state retires for the night.

Dulles' hideway, like other Jupiter Island homes, is hedged in from Gomez Rd., one of the two narrow streets on the isle, by trees and shrubs. A pebbled lane leads to the stately but not lavish Dillon home.

National Summary

Low pressure over the St. Lawrence Valley maintained windy, cool weather with partly cloudy skies over much of the northeast at mid-day Saturday with a few patches of rain along the Virginia coast and over portions of New England while snow flurries were scattered from central New York state into the mountains of West Virginia.

Northwesterly winds spread cooler and drier air across the southeast ahead of high pressure centered over the lower Mississippi Valley and widespread sunshine prevailed from the south Atlantic states across much of the nation's mid-section.

An area of low pressure near the central Canadian border trailed a cold front into the mountains of Wyoming and 70 degree temperatures reached South Dakota before noon. Except for a few patches of rain along the northern Pacific coast, dry weather prevailed along with partly cloudy skies over most of the west.

Fair weather across most of the Atlantic and Gulf states through the remainder of the weekend offers the chance of frost southward into the Carolinas, but warmer weather is in store for the East.

Murray: 'I Know Exactly What I'm Doing'

Chief Blasts Critic of Juvenile Department

By ED PFISTER
Herald Bureau Chief

WEST PALM BEACH — Chief Juvenile Counselor Alton Murray Saturday slapped back at County Commission Chairman Lake Lytal for the latter's criticism of the County Juvenile Department.

Murray said Lytal was obviously irked because he had disregarded "a lecture" by Lytal when he first became counselor, to "go slow and easy."

He took sharp exception to Lytal's remark that "he didn't know the answer to the juvenile problem and felt that no one connected with the Juvenile Department did, either."

He also disputed Lytal's observation that "it seems to me we have had more of a problem with the operation of juvenile facilities in the last seven or eight months than we had in the preceding 15 years."

Murray said, "I know exactly what I am doing and what we need. I probably know my job as well as Lytal knows his — and I am not very proud of that. I don't know everything. No one does. But we devote hours to study and research in an effort to find out the things we need to know."

The counselor flatly denied there is more trouble now with the Juvenile Department than in previous years."

"We have always had problems but before we did not make them public. Now we are laying them before the public because we believe they ought to know. We believe that if the public thinks we are not doing all we can about the juvenile problem, they ought to know it is because we do not have the proper facilities."

It was Murray's appeal to the public for support to obtain a detention home for juvenile delinquents to keep them out of county jail that brought the comment from Lytal.

The county chairman pointed out the county only recently built a $300,000 children's home and "everybody connected with juvenile work thought it was just what was needed."

Murray conceded detention facilities in the new home "were supposed to have been for maximum security," but he added that when the doors were installed they were warped and the locks were defective from the outset and children had no difficulty escaping.

The counselor said the detention facilities that are currently needed for a so-called "middle class" of delinquent children who should not be placed in jail because, they are mild cases.

"They need a place," he said, "where they can be maintained for a few days, a week, a month, until we determine their problems, initiate steps to solve them, and still be in the position to continue their education and religious training."

Murray also pointed out that talk about facilities in the new home is meaningless "because every bed is filled." He added that the rapid growth of the county has created a situation where juvenile facilities are almost inadequate before they can be completed.

He said he is called on constantly to speak before local groups on juvenile problems and added, "We are getting the message to the people in spite of Lytal."

With a final filip, he added, "Lytal does not need to know about juvenile problems. We do not operate under the County Commission. We operate in accordance with state laws and the only thing the County Commission has to do with us is to budget funds for our operation.

"The county chairman knows that we have saved hundreds of dollars in our operation but he apparently does not like the idea that he has no jurisdiction over the department."

Board Irked at Klinck

By ED PFISTER
Herald Bureau Chief

Maybe it just isn't in the cards that the West Palm Beach City Commission should enjoy a period of peace and quiet, even though it seemed headed that way after making up its mind about Keith R. Chinn.

PFISTER

Latest report is that some members are irked by the actions of City Engineer John H. Klinck and would like to do something about it.

The "new look" at the city engineer has nothing to do with the long standing feud between Klinck and City Commissioner L. W. Kelloway.

A hot debate last week about the traffic pattern for the approaches to Royal Park Bridge may have something to do with the latest situation. Klinck, more than once, has made it clear he doesn't always agree with state and county engineers.

No Police Bill

REP. RALPH J. BLANK JR. will leave West Palm Beach today for Tallahassee, loaded down with 120 proposed local bills, to be on hand for the opening of the Legislature Tuesday.

He made it quite emphatic that among the bills is nothing that would force another referendum in the city on whether the police chief should be made an appointive office.

Such a proposal was soundly defeated Tuesday — for the fourth straight time.

Blank said. "There isn't any new bill like that and there won't be — not while I am a member of the Legislature, that is."

He took the attitude that since voters left no doubt that they want an elective police chief there is no sense in cramming another referendum on the subject down their throats.

Fun in the Sun

WHATEVER ELSE you can say about that unexpected Easter week visit of more than 100 unemployed workers from other states, it is obvious they had pretty close to an "all expense paid" vacation.

The weather was ideal, and even after the company which the workers claim brought them here gave them $100 each to get back home, many of the crew stayed around until Friday, when their hotel rent ran out.

One worker dropped in The Herald office with a check from the company in one hand and two envelopes in the other continung unemployment checks forwarded to him in West Palm Beach.

Although there was little doubt the men really wanted to go to work and invested their own funds in the trip to Florida, the situation, in some ways was reminiscent of the boys who used to register for unemployed up North each season as "deep sea divers," or something equally exclusive, and then take off for Florida to spend the winter.

Allen Has Firm Grip on Spelling Trophy
. . . Ann Whalin is runner-up

'A Born Scientist,' Mom Calls Champ

Herald Bureau

LAKE WORTH—What does it take to be a three-time winner of the county spelling bee?

"Nothing much, just a lot of reading," says Allen Kramer, who Saturday made history by winning the big Miami Herald spelling trophy as Palm Beach County spelling champ for the third consecutive time.

Nonchalant about his victory, this freckled 13-year-old, wearing heavy dark-rimmed glasses, looked every bit the part of a junior intellect.

"He's a born scientist," explained his mother, Mrs. Barbara Kramer, as she proudly congratulated her son.

And that he is, for Allen was anxious to hurry to the Science Fair at Palm Beach Junior College.

"I've got a shell collection of Pacific Ocean univalves entered in the fair, and I want to see the other displays," he said.

And what are his favorite books?

"All science books—and 'A Tale of Two Cities'—and 'Auntie Mame'—", he said as he rattled off a list of best sellers and classics.

"Auntie Mame?" he was asked. "Yes, it's the funniest book I've read," he replied.

What does he want to be when he grows up? "A scientist," he said.

Obviously, this 1959 county spelling champion, who turned 13 on March 19, was off to a good start as he scurried ahead of his mother from the spelling bee to his next immediate interest—the Science Fair.

Volunteers at Work On Cancer Crusade

Herald Bureau

WEST PALM BEACH — Volunteers in the local business division under the direction of Walter Spier are expected to complete their part of the April Cancer Crusade this week.

Spier said some 50 workers, most of them members of insurance firms and the Downtown Kiwanis Club will contact all mercantile and industrial establishments in the area to distribute Cancer education leaflets and to appeal for funds for the American Cancer Society research and service programs.

W. Karl Lations, who is serving as West Palm Beach Crusade chairman and as assistant to J. Alex Arnette, the county chairman, announced Saturday the appointment of Floyd Miller Jr. as chairman for Belle Glade.

Lations also announced that Lantana volunteers under the direction of Mrs. Anne Deacon, held a final planning session Saturday and set dates for their campaign April 12-19.

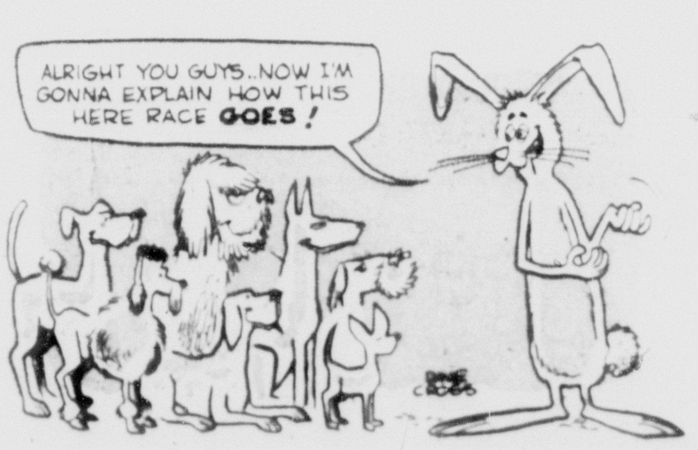
Jaycees' Canine Coursers

Mush, Mutts, It's Derby Day

Herald Bureau

WEST PALM BEACH — Jaycees aren't quite sure that the stuffed rabbit won't be chasing the dogs when they touch off their "Mutt Derby" — the first of its kind in this city — at 2:30 p.m. Sunday.

Although they expect a highly hilarious event with every kind of dog from a poodle to an Arctic husky trying to act like a racing greyhound, they have set up a number of rules to make the contest equal.



ALRIGHT YOU GUYS..NOW I'M GONNA EXPLAIN HOW THIS HERE RACE GOES!

The dogs will compete in eight separate heats on the Palm Beach Kennel Club track, and the sponsors haven't any idea what will happen when the rabbit starts bobbing along.

Bill Peterson, chairman, said entries must report to the paddock gate no later than 2 p.m., must be on a leash and must have received anti-rabies shots in the past year.

The dogs will be divided according to weight in the various heats so a Pekinese won't find himself competing against a mastiff.

There will be awards for all the winners, Peterson said. The Jaycees are sponsoring the Mutt Derby to raise money for their building fund.

Allen Kramer

3rd Win For Top Speller

By NORVAN ROGGEN
Herald Staff Writer

LAKE WORTH — Freckled Allen Kramer, a whiz with the A-B-C's, outspelled 44 other contestants Saturday to become a history-making, three-time winner of Palm Beach County's Miami Herald Spelling Bee.

Allen, a 13-year-old seventh grader at Lake Worth Junior High, had won the county spelling crown in 1957 and 1958 as a student at Lantana School.

Runner-up to Allen was 13-year-old Ann Whalin of Central Junior High School in West Palm Beach. She was also a contestant last year when Allen won the title.

Both will represent Palm Beach County in the district Spelling Bee in Miami on May 9, where they will compete against winners from 22 other counties.

The top speller at the district contest will go to Washington to compete in the National Spelling Bee.

Allen finished second in the district bee last year, and in 1957 he was fourth.

"I'm practicing hard for the district contest already," Allen said after he won the county title Saturday.

If he does not win the district title this year, he will still have one more chance. Only district winners are ineligible to compete the following year.

Allen missed only one word, "pilaster," in the combination written and oral rounds Saturday at Lake Worth High School Auditorium. He rattled off the correct spelling of words like "idiosyncrasy" and "corroboration."

Once he hesitated on "accessible," but finally used the "i" instead of an "a" for a perfect score in the oral rounds.

Ann had a perfect score until she encountered "appetite" in the oral rounds. This word became her downfall, allowing Allen to go on to the championship.

Allen, son of Mrs. Barbara Kramer, received the giant, gold Miami Herald spelling trophy, which already has his name inscribed on it twice. He also received a $10 cash award from the Herald.

Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Whalin, was awarded a $5 cash prize as runner-up.

Big 3 PB Cities Ballot on Tuesday

Petition Out

Ramp Trouble Brewing

Herald Bureau

WEST PALM BEACH — The city apparently is running head-on into more trouble over its plans for small boat ramps in various sections of the city.

Scheduled to be aired at a regular meeting of the City Commission Monday is a petition signed by 1,000 persons protesting the removal of the Hetzel Christmas and Easter pageants from Currie Park to make way for an expanded small boat ramp.

Relocation of the Hetzel spectacle was one of the moves proposed by the commission during discussions of boat ramps several weeks ago to increase the capacity of waterfront facilities.

The city has already received protests against boat ramps in other locations.

The board is also scheduled to adopt a resolution which would lay claim to the name "Palm Beach City" in case the commission decides it would be a better name for West Palm Beach.

The commissioners several weeks ago came up with unofficial suggestions that Palm Beach City might prove a more apt name for the city but received very little support for the idea.

Later John D. MacArthur, Chicago insurance and banking executive who plans a 10,000 subdivision west of North Palm Beach Village, proposed using the name for his development.

When the city decided on a resolution to preempt the name, MacArthur indicated he was unexcited over the prospect.

The commission is also planning to support the Palm Beach County legislative delegation in the regulation of motor scooters as the aftermath of a recent collision fatal to a policeman.

The board will authorize the mayor and city clerk to sign a formal request asking the delegation to support a bill which would raise the minimum age for motor scooter operators.

State Sen. Fred O. Dickinson Jr. has already indicated he would seek to have a bill passed raising the minimum age of motorscooter operators to 16 years.

The commission will probably adopt an ordinance amending the city code to define "service" as it relates to water company employes prior to the acquisition of the utility by the city.

NEW DESIGNER for "The 27th Star," new musical production which will highlight the Seminole Indian Sun Dance festival April 20-26 in West Palm Beach is Gerald L. Ritholz, 26, Chicago, noted for his work on 125 musical and dramatic productions.

3 Zoning Hearings Slated

Herald Bureau

LAKE WORTH — Commissioners here will hold three public hearings Monday night as a prelude to the regular meeting of the City Commission.

The first will take up the question of rezoning from B-residence and apartment district to D-retail business district blocks 1.3.4 and 5 in Liberty Terrace.

A second hearing will be held immediately afterwards on sidewalk and curb assessments on A St. between Sixth Ave. S. and 12th Ave. S.; Seventh Ave. N. from Highland School to Dixie Hwy., and Eighth Ave. N. from the Florida East Coast Railway to Lakeside Dr.

A third hearing will go into sidewalk and curb assessments on Sixth Ave. S. from west city limits to Lakeside Dr.; S. L St. from Fourth Ave. S. to Eighth Ave. S. and S. M St. from Fourth Ave. S. to Sixth Ave. S.

The regular commission meeting will receive a petition protesting against the installation of street lights on Yale Dr.

Tri-County Talks Set On Airfields, Ports

By JOHN MORTON
Herald Staff Writer

Top officers of the three Gold Coast counties are scheduled to meet in Miami this week to begin talks [illegible]med at tri-county control of airfields and water ports in Dade, Broward and Palm Beach.

The time and place of the commissioners' meeting will be set Monday by the Metro Port Authority Committee, according to Metro Commissioner Ben C. McGahey, who said "it probably will be Thursday or Friday."

The purpose was outlined by Broward Commissioner J. Herbert Burke:

"The establishment of a commission to govern all air and seaport development in the counties."

"Burke said, "It's a simple matter of economic survival."

The three counties tried to get together on a master aviation plan several years ago, but never got off the ground.

This time, they have the cold statistics of a report perpared for Metro last year by the Cincinnati consulting engineer firm of Landrum and Brown.

The report stated Dade and Broward alone would need vastly expanded airport facilities within the next 10 years.

The report also pin-pointed the need for a major air terminal in Broward and seven other large airports throughout the entire area by 1970.

Political boundaries of the three counties will pose the biggest problem facing the commissioners.

B. Arnold To Speak

PALM BEACH—The League of Women Voters Tuesday will hear an address by B. Arnold, town manager and former maintenance director of the Central and Southern Florida Flood Control District.

Arnold, who recently resigned his post with the state agency to become a resort official, will speak on Florida's water problems.

The meeting is to be held in Palm Beach Towers at 10:30 a.m.

21 Hopefuls Seek Municipal Office

By ED PFISTER
Herald Bureau Chief

WEST PALM BEACH — Voters in three of Palm Beach County's biggest related coastal cities—West Palm Beach, Lake Worth and Riviera Beach—go to the polls Tuesday to ballot on 21 candidates seeking municipal offices.

Nearly 40,000 persons are eligible to vote in the three municipal elections — an "off-year" event in this city but the "big election" of the year in the other two.

Personalities rather than issues are prime factors in all of the elections although some will feature both. They have created enough interest they may push Lake Worth and Riviera Beach candidates into an April 21 runoff.

West Palm Beach, which had its first "go-round" a week ago, has but a single contest on a runoff ballot. It's a race between Commissioner L. W. Kelloway and Ralph York for the Group D commission seat.

Kelloway, who is a three-time commissioner but who has never served two successive terms, led York by slightly more than 600 votes in the March 31 election.

York, a south side barber, landed second in the field of four in his first bid for political office.

A total of 26,804 West Palm Beach residents are eligible to vote, but less than 8,000 turned out in the election last week. The winner in the runoff contest will be sworn in Wednesday at a special meeting of the City Commission after it tallies returns from 12 precincts.

Probably the hottest of the three elections is scheduled in Lake Worth.

A former mayor is seeking to do a comeback as a commissioner, an appointed mayor is seeking the full term in office and a woman is one of three candidates in a bloc determined to give the people a voice in what should be done about the municipal power plant.

Only one of three office holders whose terms are expiring is seeking reelection in Lake Worth. Commissioners Zell Altman and James A. Stafford have declined to seek new terms.

Mayor Carl Leverenz, who was appointed following the resignation of former Mayor Robert T. O'Connor because of ill-health, is one of the 10 candidates seeking a full term as an elected official.

He is opposed by Karl Propper and Harold A. Swann, the former an outspoken and long time critic of the city's power policies.

Seeking the Precinct 1 seat from which Stafford is retiring are Mrs. Elizabeth A. Taylor, George H. Ingersoll and George A. Gabler.

Running for the Precinct 3 seat Altman will relinquish are C. H. (Neal) Dillingham, former Mayor Ralph K. Dupee, O. P. Becker and George Hossler.

Mrs. Taylor and Dillingham are aligned with Propper on the power plant issue.

Lake Worth this time will vote in four new city-county precincts — Southwest Precinct 1, the high school gym; Northwest Precinct 2, Highland School cafetorium; Northeast Precinct 3, Northgrade cafetorium, and Southeast Precinct 4, Southgrade cafetorium.

A brand new registration of 7,290 voters will be eligible to ballot.

In Riviera Beach where another "on year" election is scheduled, another ten candidates for the mayoralty and three council seats will place their political future in the hands of 4,945 eligible voters who will ballot in two precincts.

The spotlight is beamed on some prominent figures in this one, too.

Two long-time political foes, Mayor B. Fox Griffin and former Mayor Rex Knoth, are squared away in the Riviera Beach campaign, but this time they are not arrayed against each other.

Griffin, seeking reelection, is opposed by Nick Cindia, who lost the mayoralty bid once before, and by Pat Knight, who served an interim appointment slightly more than two years ago when the then Mayor Knoth resigned in the face of county charges that he "fixed" a traffic ticket for a beautician in Municipal Court.

Griffin won the election then, and Knight was not a candidate for the office. Knoth first won the mayoralty something like four years ago from Griffin in a heated battle that went all the way to the State Supreme Court.

This time Knoth is running for a council seat instead of the mayoralty in a political comeback gesture. He seeks to unseat incumbent Councilman Foster Brown, and has Robert H. Carlson as a third threat for the office.

In the other contests, Councilman Thomas Holland is opposed by Steele C. Coddigton for the Group 1 council seat and veteran Councilman H. N. Wells is opposed by George A. Baker for the Group 5 seat. Melvin S. Becky, who filed for the group 5 post withdrew last week.

Press Has a Field Day at Divorcee's Murder Trial

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — (UPI)—The news and photographic coverage of the murder trial of divorcee Connie Nicholas is one of the most liberal and informal in the history of the criminal courts.

Photographers click pictures constantly during the trial. The whirring of motion picture cameras for TV news broadcasts is heard.

Two radio stations are recording testimony and another is broadcasting "live" four times a day from the courtroom.

Judge Thomas J. Faulconer, only two months on the bench, believes the public has a full right to be informed by news media of what is going on so long as the defendant's right to a fair trial is not infringed.

"The conduct of the press and the photographers has been exemplary," Faulconer said. "Pictures have been taken in a very unobtrusive manner that has not upset the decorum of the court."

Faulconer has cracked down only twice. He ordered removed a tripod holding up a large sound television newsreel camera.

He also ordered discontinued a motion picture camera which made a loud noise. He has asked the photographers not to center on pictures of the jury.

Faulconer said the smooth news coverage has shown that Canon 35 of the American Bar Association, which opposes picture-taking in court, is "as outmoded as the horse and buggy."
